RIVAL PULP GROUP ACCUSED

Union Meeting Found 'Bugged'

President Died In Hotel Room

VANCOUVER (CP) — Angus Macphee, a vice-president of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, charged today that a rival pulp union had planted listening devices at its convention.

Mr. Macphee said in a statement that an investigation by his union showed that persons who bugged their convention at the downtown Ritz Hotel were in contact with officials of their rivals.

He named Pat O'Neal, western regional organizer for the rival International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

Mr. O'Neal, contacted in Nanaimo on Vancouver Island, categorically denied involvement.

He said when someone in a rival union gets the measles, he gets blamed.

Listening devices were found by Mr. MacPhee and other union delegates during the weekend. The devices, valued at $600, were seized by police under federal law.

"Out of our investigation into this matter, we have determined that regular phone calls were made from 309 where electronic receiving and recording equipment was found to an unlisted number," Mr. MacPhee said, which proved to be that of E. P. O'Neal, Western regional organizer for the international."

Seizure of the equipment came after a day-long investigation triggered by the finding of a listening device in a room where a union president had died Saturday.

A search warrant and the seizure came under the Radio Act which stipulates that a search may be carried out where it is believed there is an unwarranted radio transmitter operating.

David McLeod, an inspector with the department of transport, was assisting Vancouver police in the case.

Angus Macphee, vice-president of the 2,000-member Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada meeting in convention, said a device was discovered Saturday when delegates attempted to move a portable wall closet in the downtown Ritz Hotel.

"We were shifting the closet when this thing fell off," he said.

He said other delegates examined the device but none thought the convention was being spied upon.

"Sunday, we changed our minds," he said.

Two Anonymous Phone Tips

"We had two anonymous phone tips warning that the whole affair was going down on tape."

He said an electronics company was called in to check the area, and it found a second device on top of a closet in his room.

Equipment, including an amplifier, tape recorder, speaker and headphones, was seized from a room one floor above those where the listening devices were found.

Police said a man found with the equipment was questioned three hours. He was not identified and refused to speak to reporters when he left the hotel.

A hotel spokesman said the room was occupied by two men who signed the register as William J. Dawson and Bud Graham. Both gave addresses in interior Kamloops.

"Both men checked out about noon and said their luggage would be picked up later in the day," the spokesman said.

Police said the electronic equipment was packed inside the luggage.

A check by reporters showed that men named Graham and Dawson worked for Graham Investigation Services Ltd., a private detective agency in North Vancouver.

When their office was contacted, a woman who answered the telephone said both men were out of town until Nov. 9.

Lloyd D. Craig, 50, the union's president, died in his hotel room early Saturday of a heart attack. He had been union president two years. A lab technicican at a Castlegar pulp mill, Mr. Craig was up for re-election at the convention.

Mr. Macphee's union is formed of men who broke away from the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

OFF-YEAR TEST

LBJ, Negroes Up Early As U.S. Voting Starts

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Heavy voting appeared today in some key areas as Americans ballotted for a 90th Congress and a broad range of state officials.

President Johnson, who had urged a heavy turnout along with Republican spokesman Richard Nixon, appeared a half hour too soon at Johnson City, Texas, but was allowed to vote away in a kitchen polling place.

A massive early vote appeared in New York, Michigan, Maryland and some other points which have vital national significance.

Racial overtones were involved in Maryland, where the Democratic candidate for governor has appealed to white resentment against the Negro. A heavy number of early Negro votes materialized there today.

The political outlook: An estimated 59,000,000 voters will maintain over-all Democratic control but endorse a swing back toward the centre and right wing after two years of far-reaching liberal legislation.

Main interest focussed on these races:

LOS ANGELES—Republican Ronald Reagan, a political newcomer, today challenged two-term Democrat Edmund G. Brown for California's governorship in an election that could affect the 1968 presidential campaign.

Official sources estimated about 6.2 million voters of the record 8.3 million registered would cast their ballots after the longest, most bitter and probably the most costly gubernatorial campaign in California's history.

Democrat Brown, 61, wound up his campaign Monday night in his home town of San Francisco.

Reagan, 55, a movie and television actor until he ran for governor, closed out his campaign with a 1,200-mile flying tour of metropolitan areas Monday.

Public opinion polls gave Reagan a narrow edge ranging from 2 to 5 per cent over Brown, who hopes to become the first Democrat in history elected to three terms as California governor.

A win for Reagan was certain to make him a force in the 1968 race for the Republican presidential nomination.

NEW YORK—Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller today placed his famous name, his record of eight years in office and his future as a GOP kingmaker in the hands of six million New York voters.

At the close of a long and expensive campaign to patch up his own political vulnerability, the wear and tear of two terms in Albany, it was a toss-up whether the voters would give Rockefeller four more years.

The alernative was to turn the reins of the empire state over to an effective vote-getter but generally colorless Democratic regular, New York city council president Frank D. O'Connor.

The result of today's balloting was expected to turn on the showings of two minor party candidates, Liberal Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. and Conservative Paul Adams. Neither was given any chance of winning but either could swing the election to one of the front-runners.

The election was also expected to have an effect on the presidential ambitions of two recently adopted New Yorkers, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D—N.Y., and former vice-president Richard M. Nixon.

★ ★ ★

DETROIT—Republican Gov. George Romney and his highly acclaimed vote-pulling power received the supreme test today in an election that could boom or bust the Michigan candidate's 1968 presidential ambitions.

That Romney would swamp his Democratic opponent, Zolton Ferency, was a foregone conclusion, according to political observers. The big question was whether Romney's coattails were broad enough and strong enough to retain in office Sen. Robert P. Griffin (R—Mich.).

The GOP governor has long been anxious to prove he can alter his reputation as a big winner among Republican losers. He got the chance in the tight race between Griffin and former Democratic Gov. G. Mennen ("Soapy") Williams.

★ ★ ★

CHICAGO—Illinois voters today decide a senatorial race that pitted a veteran lawmaker and a political machine against youthful enthusiasm and an appealing "image".

The veteran, white-haired Sen. Paul H. Douglas and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's Democratic organization were the underdogs. The pre-election polls favored Douglas' opponent, the industrial "golden boy" turned politician, Charles H. Percy.

A Percy win—and he expected to win if the turnout ran close to the record 4.3 million forecast—could lead him into the ranks of Republican possibilities for future national office.

The campaign was interrupted for some time after the still-unsolved murder of Percy's daughter.

AS DEBATE DRAGS ON

Money Supply Crisis Looms for Government

OTTAWA (CP)—With the skirmishing going into its seventh day today, the battle lines remain just where they started in the Commons money supply debate.

Conservatives continued to shoot for committee study of Defence Minister Hellyer's bill to unify the armed forces before the Commons is asked to give its second reading — approval in principle.

Mr. Hellyer stands fast on his line that such a study should come after second reading.

New Democrats continued to snipe at the government's approval of a pipeline from the West that would loop south into the United States to avoid stiff construction costs in the rugged Northern Ontario bush.

And Creditiste Leader Caouette took advantage of the wide-open scope of a supply debate to give MPs a dollop of his party's monetary policy.

NEEDS PAYROLL MONEY

Looming over the battleground is the need for the government to get spending authority to meet payrolls and other upcoming bills. The first civil service payroll of the month comes up next Thursday, with others following Monday and Tuesday.

New Democratic Leader Douglas said the stage was set for a rerun of the extended 1964 flag debate, delaying handling of important legislation until after Christmas.

Near the end of Monday's sitting, Mr. Hellyer answered some of the defence questions posed by Conservative critics.

He rejected their complaints that there was a lack of information on steps leading to unification.

In the three years since the Liberals created the defence committee, it has held 81 meetings, heard 103 witnesses and compiled 2,355 pages of written records. The sessions had covered every aspect of defence—the roles assigned to each service, the capabilities and the equipment it would be given.

He repeated his argument that opposition attempts to equate certain manpower shortages in the forces with low morale are off base. The problem was that the forces had to compete with a booming economy for manpower.

The government was making improvements in pay and other benefits to be competitive in the

50-Cent Profit On Bacon

OTTAWA (CP) — Supermarkets were selling bacon at $1.42 a pound in September when at least one meat packer was charging them a wholesale price of only 92 cents a pound, Senator David Croll (L — Ontario), said Monday.

He quoted other wholesale-retail price spreads just as big in questioning officials of Burns Foods Ltd. before the Senate-Commons committee on living costs.

It was an "inordinately high profit," he suggested.

Burns President A. J. E. Child said it was possible the chain stores were taking a high markup on bacon to balance a low markup on another item.

The Senator said this didn't satisfy him.

The country was crying and shouting about food costs.

"You've heard it too. Aren't you concerned . . . at what the merchants are doing with your product?"

Mr. Child said the volume of bacon sales is rising even at the higher prices. The price obviously was not driving the consumer away from the product.

Senator Croll took his wholesale figures from Burns' own selling prices for September. His retail figures were from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

302 CONG FOUND DEAD AFTER BATTLE

SAIGON (AP) — United States infantrymen battled an estimated 1,000 charging Viet Cong for four hours in Tay Ninh province today and reported 302 enemy bodies counted after the fighting ended.

The battle resumed at 6 a.m. for troops of the U.S. First Division who lost contact almost completely Monday with the tough Viet Cong force that had battled U.S. troops for four days.

Swift's President Lacks Facts

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator David Croll asked today for a special recall of Swift Canadian Co. Ltd. executives to be cross-examined on their sales figures by the Senate-Commons committee on living costs.

Senator Croll made his request after Swift president P. L. Ayers appeared before the committee without bringing along any facts on gross sales.

Asked whether he could even estimate Swift sales for the last three years in round figures, he said he could not.

"I'm surprised that the president of the company doesn't know what its gross sales are," the senator said.

Ron Basford, committee co-chairman, promised that a steering committee meeting Wednesday will consider recall of Swift soon for cross-examination after the figures have been made available.

Mr. Ayers also said he did not know what share of the meat packing industry Swift holds, nor what Swift pays its parent Swift and Co. of Chicago for research and other services.

Italy Charges Pair With Spy Activities

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Police today filed espionage charges against a Hungarian commercial attache and an Italian who allegedly exchanged information about military bases in Italy.

A state attorney issued arrest warrants against Ferenc Budai, first secretary in the Hungarian commercial office here, and Domizio Villa, 24, who works for a transportation company.

They had been held without charges since Nov. 3, when police said they were caught "exchanging military information concerning Italy's northeastern area" in a Milan square.

Authorities did not say what information was involved. The northeastern area includes a U.S. NATO base in Verona.

Jewel Thieves Grab $200,000 in Loot

HALIFAX (CP) — Police today were investigating theft of between $150,000-$200,000 worth of jewelry and stock from a downtown Halifax store Monday night. Police said it was one of the biggest hauls from a single break-in in the city's history.

Leon Neima, president of Leon Neima Ltd., said items taken included loose diamonds, rings, watches and valuable collections of gold coins and old coins. The coins alone were valued at $50,000.

Police said it appeared the thieves hid in a washroom on the second floor of the Barrington Street building which houses the jewelry store. Sometime during the night they made their way to a stockroom, tore up flooring and cut their way through a ceiling down into the store.

'LIFE'S WORK IS GONE'

Florence Pleads for Aid

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—Emilio Pucci, internationally-known designer and leader of the Florence fashion industry, appealed to the world today to help this flood-stricken city.

He said unless massive financial aid came, the city of arts, antiquities, leather work and higher fashion might never recover. He expressed hope for long-term credits.

Pucci spoke as a fashion arbiter and member of Parliament.

Standing near his wrecked workshop, he pointed to ruined heaps of garments and clothes being shoveled into trucks for disposal.

"My entire life's work is gone. Yet I know that I personally shall begin again. I'm sure of it. But look what happened to the smaller artisans of Florence. More than 6,000 of the shops here have been destroyed."

He said Florence could never manage to raise the money needed to salvage its ruined economy "and I'm afraid the state's finances are too limited to help us substantially."

$160 MILLION DAMAGE TO TREASURES

ROME (Reuters) — Floods caused damage totalling about $160,000,000 to the art treasures of Florence Giovanni Elkan, Italian education ministry undersecretary, said today. (See story Page 31.)

He told reporters more than 600 paintings were damaged and the famous Crucifixion by Cimabue, 1240-1302, was ruined.

More than 1,000 manuscripts and books of incalculable historical value in the national library in Florence were partly destroyed.

Moon Shot on Beam After Minor Mishap

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Lunar Orbiter II lost and then regained its lock on the guiding star Canopus today midway in its 250,000-mile flight to photograph potential astronaut landing sites on the moon.

Regaining the celestial guidepost increased chances of success in a critical steering manoeuvre scheduled later today.

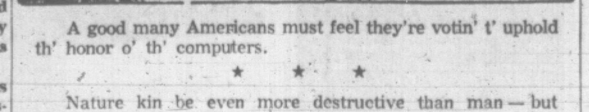
The manoeuvre, an 18½-second firing of a rocket motor expected to increase the craft's 2,200-mile-an-hour speed by 47 miles an hour, is designed to aim Lunar Orbiter II closer to the moon.

GEMINI FLIGHT DELAYED

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The Gemini 12 wrap-up mission of astronauts James Lovell and Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin was postponed today from Wednesday to Thursday because of a problem in one of the program's most trouble-free Titan 2 boosters.

The United States Space Agency said the four-day rendezvous and spacewalk mission was tentatively rescheduled to start at 2:16 p.m., EST. (11:16 A.M. PST.) Thursday with the launch of Gemini's Atlas-Agena target rocket.

Lovell and Aldrin will follow 98 minutes later.



A good many Americans must feel they're votin' t' uphold th' honor o' th' computers.

ROUND-A-BOUT

By DOUGLAS HILLSIDE

When the province completes its new mental hospital adjacent to Royal Jubilee one evidence of hospital co-operation will exist. The mental hospital will share Jubilee's new heating plant as, we learn, does the Veterans' Hospital.

This consolidation of resources saves a great deal of money put up by you-know-who.

There has been talk also of further co-operation between Jubilee and the mental hospital in laundry and lab use. So far it's just talk.

But it underlines a rumble emanating from some district hospital-medical officials who say there hasn't been nearly enough such co-operation. The administration of the new mental hospital so far has made no overtures toward joining the Victoria and District Hospitals' Advisory Board.

Nor has the board issued any invitation, to our knowledge. Because there has not been much joint planning Royal Jubilee does not know whether its costly psychiatric wing will soon be obsolete and the space made available to use by other patients.

Will other than institutional psychiatrists be allowed use of the new mental hospital? Will it cater to the same type of emergency use as does the Jubilee psychiatric wing? Should St. Joseph's proceed with or drop its plans for a psychiatric wing?

Perhaps the $50,000 study of Greater Victoria hospital needs which is proposed by an independent authority should be extended to cover these questions.

A friend of ours who recently signed up to complete his high school at the Adult Education Institute is doing well. But he says one-third of his class has quit. Most of the dropouts are women, he says.

He claims one problem is the tendency to lump into one class people who have had earlier training in the subject and people who have had none. Those without prior training soon are left behind. He also believes that at least some of the women dropouts have found their experiment in leaving their children in other care has not worked smoothly—so mother stays home now.

He wonders, however, whether the adult institute is doing its job when it enlists dropouts then loses them again because a wider range of classes is required. Institute officials care to comment?

The church spire rising in the peaceful village landscape on the back of the Canadian two-dollar bill has special meaning for Mrs. Melbourne McCaul, 1598 Rockland.

Her father-in-law, the Very Rev. Melbourne McCaul, was minister there exactly 100 years ago, and his portrait still hangs in the Presbyterian village church.

The village, Melbourne, nestles on the left bank of the St. Francis River, also visible on the bill. It was named for British Prime Minister Lord Melbourne and in turn gave its name to Mrs. McCaul's husband.

Travel agents who visited our town recently jammed the registration desk of the Empress Hotel. The line moved ever so slowly.

Now and then, the clerk "air-tubed" money to another floor. Change came back.

Another agent beat the husband to the punch:

"Any bill over a twenty, madam, has to be sent to (Mr. N. R.) Crump's office in Montreal. He sends the change back."

Mt. Douglas Scholarships

A $1,200 scholarship, payable over four years, was the major award this year at Mount Douglas senior secondary school.

It went to Elaine Armstrong, now a first-year student at the University of Victoria. The award was the Yarrows Entrance Scholarship.

The $300 Pacific Command Legion scholarship was presented to David Mitchell, who also took the $100 IODE award.

Greater Victoria Teachers' Association, $150, Sharon Bond; PTA Council, $200, Linda Rhodes; Pacific Command Legion, $250, Alan Partridge; School Hi-Y, $75, Don Inkster.

Canadian Union of Public Employees, $100, Stuart Wells; Victoria and District Baseball Association awards of $100, Edward Lord, John Rowlands and Kenneth Broadland; Business and Professional Women's Memorial Scholarship of $200, Patricia Kilner.

Mount Douglas Students' Council awards of $50, Ernest Fafard, Thomas Gibson and William Harper; and Sprott-Shaw award of $50, Linda Marshall.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

A weather system moving out of the Gulf of Alaska this morning is bringing rain and snow to northern regions. The rain will reach northern Vancouver Island by late afternoon as snow spreads into the central interior. The cold air which invaded coastal areas overnight will be pushed eastward into the interior as the system moves southward.

The rain and snow will spread to southern regions early Wednesday morning and by afternoon only a few showers or snowflurries will remain in B.C. It will be milder in southern and coastal regions.

SKIPP
. . . sees neglect

Liberals Select Candidate

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP)—Lee Skipp, 39 - year - old Williams Lake lawyer was chosen Monday night as Liberal candidate to fight the Nov. 28 byelection in Cariboo riding, a byelection created to provide Attorney-General Robert Bonner an opportunity to regain a seat in the B.C. legislature.

Mr. Bonner was the only member of Premier Bennett's Social Credit cabinet to suffer defeat in the Sept. 12 provincial election. William Speare, who won Cariboo for Social Credit, stepped down to create the necessity for the byelection.

Mr. Skipp's choice was by acclamation at the Liberal nominating meeting in this northern Cariboo community.

In a speech to the meeting Mr. Skipp challenged Mr. Bonner "to a public debate in Quesnel regarding the neglect of that town and to another public debate in Williams Lake regarding the neglect of Williams Lake."

He said he was "angry at the unspoken inferences that we must return the Social Credit candidate in this byelection or suffer the consequences."

He said Cariboo had been represented by Social Credit for years but had suffered nothing but neglect. The bridge across the Fraser River at Quesnel was "a disgrace," he said. The forestry complex and courthouse at Williams Lake "are so long overdue that one wonders if they will ever be started." If elected, he would work to bring these things, he said.

With Mr. Skipp's nomination Mr. Bonner faces a three-way—and possibly four-way — fight. Hartley Dent, who left the Anglican ministry to get into the battle, has been chosen New Democratic Party candidate. And Gerald Gouejon, a Vancouver lawyer, has announced he will seek nomination as the representative of the Free Trade Party. The 75-member party advocates, among other things, free trade with the U.S. and abolition of tobacco and liquor advertising.

Red, White Plates To Mark Centenary

Next year's licence plates will be red and white "to commemorate the centennial by using the national colors," Motor Vehicles Superintendent Ray Hadfield said today.

They will be red numerals on a white background.

"I presume we'll be back to the blue and white combination in 1968," he said.

The province standardized its licence plate colors in 1962 as blue on white and white on blue for alternating years.

Driver Fined $400

A driver whose car jumped a curb on Pandora and rammed a lamp post early today was fined $400 this morning when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving.

George Hedley of Edmonton was also barred from driving except on business.

ESQUIMALT

Bylaw to Ban Yells, Beeping

Esquimalt council Monday night passed an anti-noise bylaw which will drastically curb the sounds to be heard in Esquimalt streets.

The bylaw bans noise of any kind that would disturb the "quiet, peace, rest, enjoyment or comfort" of Esquimalt residents.

Sounds that are taboo include excessively loud playing of radio, TV, musical instruments; yelling, shouting, whistling or singing on the street; driving a car without a muffler; and using a car horn when the car is not moving, or "except as a danger or warning signal."

Construction, repair or excavation on a building are also banned between 6 p.m. and 7 a.m. without a special permit.

Excused are ambulances, fire and police vehicles, municipal workmen and vehicles, church bells and dance hall music until midnight Saturday, 2 a.m. other days.

NOISE CONTROL

Esquimalt police, formerly hindered in noise control by lack of regulations, are to enforce the bylaw.

The new law is merely "giving teeth" to present noise standards in the municipality, said a councillor.

Offenders can now be charged with anti-noise violations, and are liable to a maximum fine of $100.

Coun. Art Mebs suggested a meeting with the Esquimalt chamber of commerce before the bylaw's adoption, to check possible effects on industry in the municipality.

But it was pointed out that industries that might violate the bylaw could be issued a special permit.

NOT GETTING ANYONE

Said public works committee chairman Ed DeCosta: "We're not out to get anyone. We're out to make Esquimalt a better place for people to live in."

Coun. Jim Bryant asked if new anti-noise rules against singing on the street would "preclude carol singing? They make a big noise there."

Anyone who complained about carol singing "would have to have a warped mind," said Coun. Gerald Horne.

"I think we have an excellent bylaw here. In fact, it's probably one of the best in the province," he added.

BURNING HOURS

Council's fire committee will meet with the Esquimalt fire chief to see if burning hours in the municipality can be extended.

Residents may now burn rubbish between 7 a.m and 9 a.m. each day. Council would like the burning period extended since summer fire hazard is past, and wet leaves take a long time to burn.

Council members will also study Esquimalt's 22-year-old poultry and rabbit bylaw before next meeting in order to change regulations which allow keeping of the animals and fowl in the municipality.

In other business council:

- Appointed new municipal engineer W. G. Gerry and municipal clerk John Allan to the advisory committee for cost and financing on the regional district's sewerage study.
- Named Mr. Allan returning officer for the municipal election Dec. 10.
- Learned five additional men have been hired for the municipality's winter works projects now underway.
- Plans to choose possible branch library sites in Esquimalt in reply to a request from the Greater Victoria Library Board.

manpower market and would continue to do so.

He said Conservatives had raised the question of Canada's future force being only in the words of Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford), "a glorified police force" for use by the United Nations.

This wasn't true. The forces were maintaining the capability to carry out anti - submarine work and effective land and air forces in Europe to meet Canada's commitments to NATO and North American air defence.

Mr. Hellyer said the Commons should make up its mind on the principle of unification. Then it could send the bill to the committee for a thorough review and could hear from past and present serving members of the forces.

Mr. Nesbitt said this was asking the Commons to "buy a pig in a poke."

More than 40 senior officers had been fired or retired early because they opposed the unification measures. The House had a right to know who "dreamed up" the plan and what qualifications they held before making a decision on whether or not to approve the principle.

HITS PIPELINE ROUTE

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo South) carried the ball on his party's objection to a second gas pipeline from the West that would loop through the U.S.

Prime Minister Pearson had been right to reject this when first proposed and wrong to decide later that the project was acceptable. The government had "buckled under" to pressure from the business community.

Mr. Saltsman scored Conservatives for backing the government switch. They had succumbed to the lure of continentalism for oil and natural gas because there was "a faster buck" in this for some people.

Mr. Caouette said the Commons should be considering such important matters as increased pensions for the elderly, being delayed by the current debate.

The government had announced that a baby budget with increased taxes would be brought down soon. This increase meant that the poor would be forced to live "even more poorly."

The real problem was that the financial system was being run for the profit of private bankers. The government should take over and run the banking system as a service for the people.

Civic Workers End Strike In Toronto

TORONTO (CP — A four-day strike by outside civic workers in Metropolitan Toronto ended Monday with ratification of a new contract.

Workers started reporting for the 4 p.m. shift although results of the vote were not known until later.

Employees of Metropolitan Toronto council voted 527 in favor and 15 against acceptance of the new contract and City of Toronto workers 1,097, to 47 in favor.

The new contract had been drawn up between representatives of the two governments and Local 43, Canadian Union of Public Employees, in sessions that ended at 2 a.m. Monday.

Inside workers, members of Local 79, CUPE, returned to work Monday morning. They walked out Friday rather than cross Local 43's picket lines.

The 3,500 outside workers won one fringe benefit and a bonus of about $104 a worker over an offer the union rejected last week.

With the bonus the workers will get as much money as they would have had demands for 40 cents an hour more been met, said a union researcher. The settlement actually holds to the 35-cent-hourly increase offered workers last week.

Psychiatrist Dies

BALTIMORE, Md. (AP) — Dr. Manfred S. Guttmacher, 68, internationally known for his work in relating psychiatry and criminal law, died in hospital Monday night of leukemia. Guttmacher championed the cause of psychiatric science in the courtroom, and this led him into many noted court cases.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

We Get Letters, Maybe, on Plates

The Motor Vehicle Branch may have to decide next year to switch to letter prefixes for B.C. licence plates — but if it does the motoring public won't see the change until 1969.

MVB superintendent Ray Hadfield said Monday that the deadline for making change is 1970 when the branch expects to licence a million vehicles — going beyond the six-digit numbering system now employed.

"At the current rate at which vehicle population in the province is increasing we may have to do it by the 1969 licence year," he added, pointing out the number of licences now is near the 750,000 mark and increasing at about 7 per cent a year.

NEXT YEAR

Because the plates are made more than 12 months in advance, this may force the branch to choose among the differing letter prefix systems sometime next year.

"We will start manufacturing the 1968 licence plates within two months," he said, "so they can't be affected, but there is a possibility the following year's plates will have to be."

He was commenting on a prediction by Recreation and Conservation Minister Kenneth Kiernan that B.C. licence plates will be prefixed with letters keyed to the region in which they will be issued.

TOURIST TRAFFIC

He said this will make an impact on the general awareness of the importance of British Columbia's internal tourist traffic — which he said accounted for 39 per cent of all tourist traffic counted during a survey last July and August.

Mr. Kiernan also said that for every B.C. car that left the province during the survey there were four tourist cars entering it as a "futher indication of B.C.'s contribution to Canada's favorable balance of trade."

Mr. Hadfield said the province used letter prefixes on licence plates when it used a five-digit system in the early 1950s but found it more difficult to administer.

"So we decided to back away from it until such a time as we had a computerized system," he said.

SOPHISTICATED

He said there is a comprehensive international study under way regarding which of the letter prefix systems are best and its report likely will be ready next year in time to assist B.C. considerations of the change.

Besides requiring more sophisticated administrative machinery, a mixed letters and numbers system also poses some special problems such as "the fact that some letter combinations can be distasteful," said Mr. Hadfield.

"But the prime purpose of having a numbering system is ease of licence identification and that is why we will have to study this very closely."

TOP MINISTER RESIGNS OVER RIOTS

Cabinet Crisis in India

Hate Control Bill Goes To Senators

OTTAWA (CP) — Stiff new laws to curb the flow of hate propaganda were proposed by the government in the Senate Monday.

Three new sections would be added to the Criminal Code to outlaw genocide and public incitement of hatred against any racial or ethnic group. Courts would be empowered to seize hate literature and impose jail sentences of up to five years.

The legislation is largely based on the recommendations submitted earlier this year by a study committee headed by Dean Maxwell Cohen of the McGill University law faculty.

The committee warned that extreme right-wing groups, mostly based in the southern United States, are distributing growing volumes of anti-Semitic and anti-Negro pamphlets in Canada.

REFER TO NAZI RALLIES

The report also referred to unruly anti-Semitic rallies held in Toronto in the last two years by the Canadian Nazi party.

The legislation was introduced by Government Leader John J. Connolly and will come up for debate Wednesday.

Main provisions are:

Anyone advocating or promoting genocide would be liable to five years imprisonment. This would outlaw advocacy of measures designed to destroy in whole or in part "any group of persons."

Anyone inciting hatred or contempt against any identifiable group in any public place, where such incitement is likely to lead to a breach of the peace, would be liable to imprisonment for two years or less.

Anyone who willfully promotes hatred or contempt against any identifiable group by communicating written or spoken statements, signs or gestures is liable to two years' imprisonment or less.

Courts would be empowered to seize any literature found to promote group hatred or genocide.

PROCTECTS FREEDOM

To protect freedom of expression, the legislation provides that no one can be convicted of willfully promoting hatred if his statements are true or if he believes them to be true and relevant to the public interest.

The term identifiable group is defined as "any section of the public distinguished by color, race or ethnic origin."

NEW DELHI (CP)—India's Home Minister Gulzarilal Nanda resigned today after violent Hindu riots here Monday in which eight persons died.

Nanda was criticized within his own Congress party for weakness in dealing with the demonstrations by hundreds of thousands of Hindus demanding a ban on the slaughter of sacred cows.

Prime Minister Gandhi appeared faced with a major cabinet reshuffle.

Cows are sacred to Hindus and Nanda is reported closely associated with Bharat Sadhu Samaj—an association of Hindu holy men.

Police have arrested about 750 persons in the capital since Monday's attempt by the Hindus to storm the Parliament buildings — an attempt beaten off only after the police opened fire and hurled tear gas bombs.

Among those arrested were more than 500 Hindu holy men, who led the demonstration. Many were arrested today as they formed up in groups in various parts of the city and tried to march on Parliament again in defiance of an official ban on meetings and processions

TOLL RISES

The death of an injured demonstrator in hospital today brought the casualty list to eight dead and 45 seriously injured. Five hundred other persons suffered minor injuries.

There were noisy scenes in the lower house of Parliament today.

One right - wing Jan Sangh party member was ordered out, and there were shouted protests when Congress party members accused the Jan Sangh of responsibility for the trouble.

Meanwhile, Defence Minister Y. B. Chavan, rumored to be in line to replace Nanda, left Bombay in a special air force plane for Delhi. He has been recuperating from an appendectomy.

NANDA CRITICIZED

Nanda, who controlled the country's police forces and investigative agencies, was criticized from within and without the ruling Congress party for failure to take sufficient precautionary measures against the type of violence which rocked the capital.

Armed soldiers and police patrolled the city's streets and government buildings today as New Delhi stirred from an overnight curfew imposed in the wake of the rioting.

City officials estimated the damage at well over $1,000,000.

Agitation over the killing of cows, which Hindus worship as a symbol of motherhood and fertility, has mounted in recent months.

AND TWISTER TOO

Record Rainfall Wets California

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fire-ravaged southern California was staggered Monday by a tornado, snow, and a record November rain that caused floods and paralyzed traffic on miles of freeways.

Rainfall Monday at Los Angeles' Civic Centre totalled 3.80 inches, the highest November figure for a 24-hour period ever recorded here. Rain totalling 5.07 inches fell in Burbank.

Four persons died when their helicopter plunged into the Pacific Ocean off Santa Barbara during the violent storm.

Three inches of snow fell in the San Bernardino mountains.

The tornado slashed a narrow eight-mile path through the residential communities of Lawndale, Hawthorne and Inglewood. Damage was estimated at more than $1 million.

MARCHAND . . . probe pledged

MENNONITES

'Workers Moved Like Cattle'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Immigration Minister Jean Marchand says his department is investigating reports that Mennonite farm laborers from Mexico are being transported by trucks to jobs in southern Manitoba.

Mr. Marchand, in Winnipeg to address a conference on youth, said Monday night that the situation is being studied in an attempt to get all the relevant facts.

However, he declined to comment further until an investigation has been completed.

Mr. Marchand was asked for comment following a Commons statement Monday by George Muir, Conservative MP for Lisgar, that the Mennonites are being transported to Canada under conditions that would "not be tolerated for cattle."

Mr. Muir's question-period remarks apparently were prompted by a story in a southern Manitoba weekly newspaper that a man had been fined $110 after being found guilty on two charges laid after he brought Mexican Mennonites to Manitoba by truck.

The man was fined $100 for charging transportation in a motor vehicle not licensed to carry paying passengers and $10 for not obtaining a permit as required under the Highway Traffic Act.

Hoffa Pays—Partly

DETROIT (UPI) — A year-long battle between Teamster President James R. Hoffa and the U.S. Internal Revenue Service has ended. Hoffa came out paying $81,855 less than the government wanted. Hoffa was armed with a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision when his case went before U.S. tax court Judge Allin Pierce Monday. The out-gunned IRS accepted Hoffa's settlement of $24,371 instead of the $106,226 claim filed against him.

ERHARD STANDS FIRM

'Show Trial' Rejected

BONN (AP)—West Germany's Bundestag urged Chancellor Ludwig Erhard today to ask for a formal vote of confidence which he would almost certainly lose. Erhard said in advance he would not comply.

The vote was 255 to 244 on a Socialist motion which Erhard does not have to heed. The Socialists were joined by the Free Democrats, until Oct. 27 Erhard's allies in a coalition government.

The chancellor's Christian Democratic party voted against the motion.

Erhard had told the Bundestag that as a good Democrat and a protector of the constitution he refused "to take part in a show trial."

The Bundestag can only replace the chancellor if a majority can agree on a successor. So far it has been unable to do this.

REPEATS STATEMENT

Erhard repeated his previous statement that the search for a new cabinet and a new majority in Parliament "will not fail because of me personally."

Erhard lost his majority Oct. 27 when the Free Democrats, who have 49 members in the Bundestag, quit his coalition government in opposition to tax raises he planned to balance the budget and finance arms purchases the government had pledged to make from the United States. The U.S. demanded the purchases to offset the foreign exchange it spends on U.S. forces in Germany.

The split appears to have made Erhard's eventual resignation necessary, but the 69-year - old chancellor made it clear Monday he is even willing to consider a coalition with the Socialists to end the crisis.

Japanese Fishing Alarms U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Clarence Pautzke, chairman of the U.S. section of the International North Pacific Fisheries Commission, expressed concern Monday over Japanese salmon fishing off the north coast of Alaska.

He told the commission's annual meeting here that a new Japanese high seas fishery could threaten "the very existence" of the people of northern Alaska.

He called for a commission review "to prevent a potentially serious problem from developing."

Delegates from Canada, the U.S. and Japan — member-nations of the North Pacific Fisheries Convention — are attending the meeting here.

Canadian Fisheries Minister Robichaud has suggested that Russia may be included in any new fishing treaty, but U.S. officials have opposed this.

About 100 delegates are attending the convention.

Turk Officer Hunted

FRANKFURT, Germany (UPI)— Intelligence agents from the NATO allies prowled a Frankfurt red-light district today for a Turkish army officer who disappeared without a trace nearly two weeks ago. Their only clue was a suitcase fished from the main river that contained classified NATO documents, a Turkish officer's uniform and other clothing.

CANADA FLAG BURNED AS 'MEANING NOTHING'

OTTAWA (CP) — Often the scene of demonstrations, Parliament Hill witnessed one of a different nature Monday—the burning of a Canadian flag.

Two Ottawans—George Turner, 18, and Jim Russell, 22—said they burned the flag as a protest against Canadian foreign policy.

"We stand by while the Americans invade the Dominican Republic and Viet Nam and while the Russians invade Hungary; we do not care about these people, we are not doing what we can for world peace," said Russell.

Asked what he hoped to accomplish by burning the flag, Turner said "it (the flag) doesn't mean anything and our government doesn't mean anything . . . it's just a puppet."

RCMP turned the men over to city police, who declined to say whether charges will be laid.

Perrault Asks Change In School Financing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ray Perrault, provincial Liberal party leader, Monday called for a thorough re-assessment of the way in which education is financed in British Columbia.

He told a student gathering at Simon Fraser University that it was ridiculous to base financing of education on land taxation and said instead it "should be based on people's ability to pay."

"How can one justify a system which dictates that a farm of the Fraser Valley is more in a position to support education because of his land holdings than someone who holds his wealth in another way?" Mr. Perrault asked.

He said any re-assessment of education finance should begin at the elementary level and proceed to higher learning.

The party chief also reiterated his party's call for a system of travel grants for students, saying it was wrong that a student who lived far from a university had to get his education at greater expense than those living close to institutions of higher learning.

He charged that every time his party has proposed this to the government, however, it had been blocked.

Party Just Getting Warmed Up But No Down-Hatch for Britons

LIVERPOOL (AP)—Drinking vodka, singing Russian songs and playing the accordion, crew members were whooping it up at a party aboard the Soviet freighter Vereia in Liverpool docks Monday night.

The only thing spoiling the fun was that the cargo was on fire.

And when Liverpool firemen arrived they were ordered off the ship.

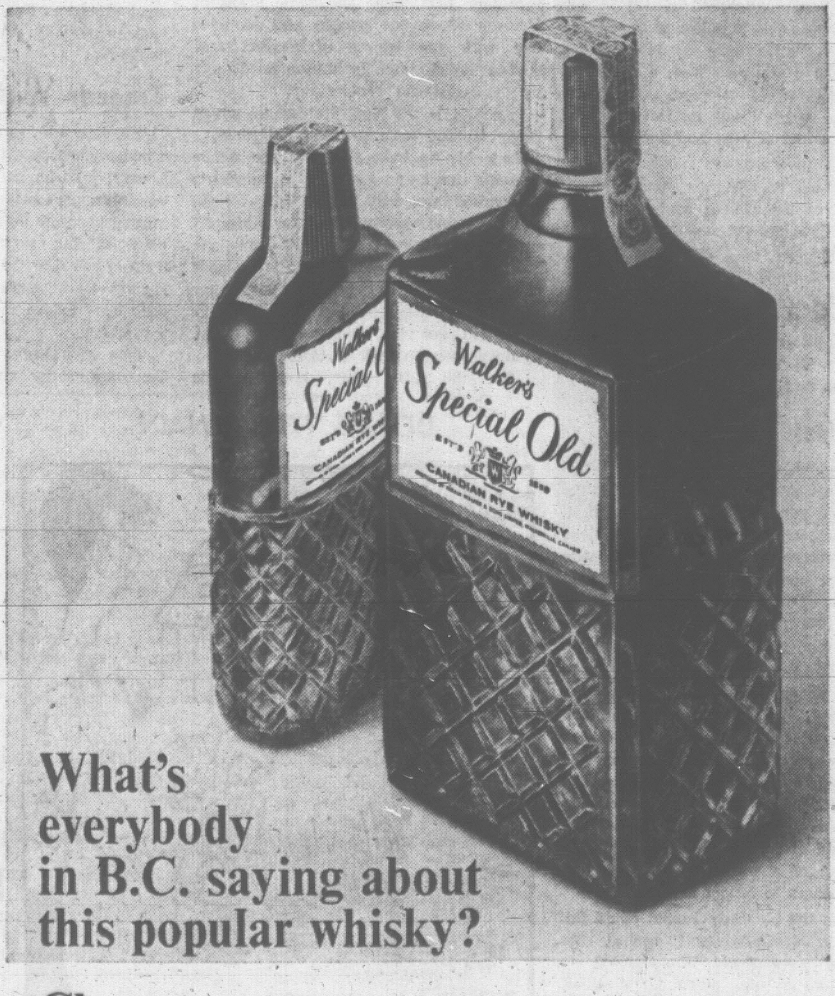
In scenes of immense confusion Fire Chief Frank Taylor held a quayside conference with port officials, ship's officers and the Soviet consul in Liverpool.

The Vereia's skipper insisted his men had the blaze in the cargo of cotton under control using carbon dioxide gas.

Six firefighters who had taken hoses into the hold of the 9,437 - ton freighter left promptly when some members of the crew threatened to close the hatches on them.

Taylor finally decided to leave two fire teams standing by the ship throughout the night while the Russians dealt with the blaze in their own way. The hold contained 650 tons of baled cotton.

The Vereia's crew didn't intend it to ruin their celebrations of the 49th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution. Early this morning the party was still going on.



Cheers. And you'll cheer too once you've tried Walker's Special Old. You'll like the mellow smoothness and the look of luxury. No wonder it's one of Canada's favourites.

The Worker and His Work

THE RESPONSE OF THE CANAdian government to modern problems of employment, particularly in regard to the changes caused by automation, has been far-ranging. One small facet of the federal policy may be seen locally in the new Canada Manpower Centre now nearing completion at Pandora Avenue and Vancouver Street. But this structure—replacing the former National Employment Service facilities—is merely the embodiment of policies which embrace a whole new concept of responsibilities to labor.

Much of the federal government's new thinking is based on the suggestions of the Freedman Report which, although designed to meet the requirements of a particular situation in railway transportation, lays down certain basic assumptions.

As outlined by Labor Minister Nicholson in a recent address in Ontario, these assumptions include the proposition that "labor is a full partner in our productive system and as such should be consulted by management before changes affecting material conditions are implemented," and also the belief that "the responsibility of an employer for his employees extends beyond the specific period of hire."

While these do not appear particularly revolutionary today, even though they are only in the process of general acceptance, they would certainly have raised eyebrows twenty years ago, and would likely have been found incomprehensible to the previous generation.

Based on such ideas, federal government policy today is to cope with the challenge of automation by assuming responsibility—along with management and labor itself—for three forms of assistance to a worker faced with loss of his job. The purpose, as Mr. Nicholson describes it, is "to cushion the impact of technological innovations." Recognizing better communication between employer and employee as fundamental to any program, the government has established a Labor-Management Consultative Branch to facilitate discussion and interchange on a continuing basis. At the same time, the government's Manpower Consultative Service is designed to advise both parties in the production system on how best to meet changes in technology—and to do it in advance of crisis.

But these are background measures. For the man who finds himself displaced by innovations in production methods there are three aids. The Canada Manpower Centre, as did its predecessor the employment service, will try to find alternative work for a displaced employee in his own locality. If the worker decides that he needs a new skill, or wishes to improve an old one, in order to find a job, the Technical and Vocational Training program — jointly supported by federal and provincial governments—can be applied. This program has quickly grown to the point of being able to cater to some half-a-million students. There are also training allowances for students.

If local job opportunities cannot provide for the laid-off worker, he may move farther afield under the Manpower Mobility program, which is designed to bring the man to the job wherever it may be, including aid in transporting his family as well.

These are long steps along the road to government participation in the private life of the individual. They represent the government's feeling that, as Mr. Nicholson puts it, "the individual worker should not be penalized because of automation." They are new departures in welfare treatment, but automation is a new departure in industrial experience. Never since the Industrial Revolution have so many workers been faced with such a rapid and far-reaching change in their means of livelihood. They are faced today, indeed, with a future mode of life in which much of the population may have no means of employment at all but will still participate in the returns of an automated society.

These, then, are Canada's first steps to meet an unpredictable future. They will have to change with the changing situation, but they are fair warning as we go into the final third of the twentieth century that the economic world of our fathers has irrevocably disappeared.

No Help From Hesse

WEST GERMANY'S FIRST full-scale governmental crisis was slightly deepened by the Sunday elections in the state of Hesse. Both Chancellor Erhard's Christian Democrats and his former coalition allies, the Free Democrats, lost two seats in the voting while the opposition Social Democrats picked up one seat and maintained a clear majority in the state legislature.

There was thus no evidence of support for Mr. Erhard in Hesse and his resignation as chancellor seems inevitable. Finding a successor acceptable to the badly divided Christian Democrats and to the Free Democrats, however, will not be easy. And the Social Democrats are going to be agitating strongly for another election which makes even the remote chance of a "grand coalition" between the two major parties almost impossible.

The Christian Democrats also face another problem in the selection of a new leader, and chancellor, in that he must be acceptable to world opinion as well. On this count several candidates for the post who have been mentioned as having the confidence of both parties must be ruled out because of their long Nazi party records. The resurgence of neo-Nazism shown by the gains of the National Democratic party in the Hesse election makes this an increasingly important factor in German politics. Neither the Soviet bloc, with which West Germany must increasingly deal, nor the West (and particularly France) would tolerate a rehabilitated Nazi as chancellor.

At this point West Germany's problem ranks only as a governmental and not a national crisis. But unless the Christian Democrats can find a new leader within the next few months, when it will be necessary to return to the parliament with a new budget, a national crisis is a possibilitly. The only course open then would be to have a new election with a strong likelihood that the socialists would win.

Merely as an internal problem, the Bonn republic's political storm would rate no more attention abroad than the administrative controversies of any country. But much more is involved in West Germany's political situation than mere domestic policies. As a key factor in Europe's future, in East-West relations, in the vast forces represented by Gaullist and American policies, West Germany cannot be considered to be a vacuum. The course set at Bonn must affect us all.

A Loss to Victoria

WITH THE EXPRESSIONS OF sympathy now being tendered to the family of the late Mr. Millard Mooney goes the recognition by this community of its own loss through the tragic death of so highly valued a citizen.

A man of energy, integrity, strong conviction and untiring service to Victoria, he had given his time unstintingly to efforts for public benefit. In long years as an alderman he had not hestiated to take his stand on public issues. He made his position clear and stood by his word. In addition to his aldermanic duties, his work will be remembered gratefully by many local groups whose members had cause to appreciate the many services he rendered.

"Welcome, welcome to Moscow . . . our answer, of course, will be Nyet. . . . !"

HOPEFUL COURSE

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

Opening Doors to Freer Trade and Battle

THE irony of Canada's centennial may not have penetrated the public mind yet but it will, a little later on. As the nation joyfully celebrates its hundredth birthday it must face a combination of poltical, economic and racial tensions which are likely to make 1967 one of the most difficult years in its history. Perhaps the end of their first century, by dramatizing their problems, will bring out the best qualities of the Canadian people. Perhaps it will submerge their family quarrels in a common sense of past achievement and future opportunity. At any rate, all those qualities will be needed before the birthday party is finished.

Hutchison

A political system in grave disorder; an economic system bloated by inflation and likely to encounter a marginal business downturn before long; a federal system strained by the local ambitions of 10 jealous provinces, and finally the intransigence of a Quebec government which talks vaguely of two impossible nations in one — all these troubles provide a strange overture to our celebration.

But after reporting such obvious, negative news from Ottawa it is pleasant to add, in conclusion, a positive and hopeful development.

Bold Trade Policy

The Canadian government may be hesitant and indecisive in some other areas but it is quietly framing a bold and constructive foreign trade policy. Here at least it knows what it is doing. This, it seems to me, is as important as it is misunderstood. For in the area of trade, more than anywhere else, a nation built on massive exports will reach or fail to reach its vital economic targets.

At the moment, naturally enough, the government's real intentions are confused in the public mind by the Liberal party's recent convention. It advocated a free trade area embracing Canada, the United States and the Caribbean. As Mr. Pearson had indicated already, the government has no intention of accepting this advice. While there are men in the cabinet who would accept it, a majority (including even a theoretical free trader like Mr. Sharp) will not, for reasons both of principle and of practical politics.

In the government's view, Canada cannot afford to integrate its economy with that of the United States by any bilateral arrangement not open to other nations. The risks to Canadian independence are too great. The political risks of reporting the Liberal party's electoral disaster in the Reciprocity election of 1911 are just unthinkable. One may agree or disagree with this decision but it has been taken and will not be altered.

Two Useful Results

The government did not regret the convention's proposal, however, because it had two useful results. In the first place, it greatly encouraged the dissident western Liberals who, at last, had made their voice heard after years of neglect in Ottawa. Secondly, the government will need all the pressure for tariff reductions it can get from any quarter to support it in a showdown next year.

This showdown is ensured, the government believes, by the almost unnoted progress of the Kennedy Round now under way at Geneva. There the trading partners of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade have been locked in secret negotiations for several years until the world's press seems to have tired of a major news story and hardly bothers to report it any more.

Though the Kennedy Round could fail before its deadline next spring, the Canadian government expects it to succeed in a big way. If it does, Canada's tariffs will be substantially reduced, along with those of its partners.

Under the rules of GATT, Canada's offers at Geneva must remain secret until the worldwide deal is made, if it is made. But they can be safely described as generous and far-reaching. So one would expect, once Mr. Sharp and Mr. Winters replaced Mr. Gordon as the architects of commercial policy. How the ultimate tariff bargain would affect various Canadian industries only a few men, and probably not many cabinet ministers, yet know.

In any case the bargain, if it is sealed in the next six months, will force the Canadian Parliament to declare itself in favor of freer trade or against it. That old issue, which divided our politics so often in the past, is likely to divide them again, overtopping many other less important issues that now hold the Ottawa spotlight.

It will be a wrenching issue for a government based unnaturally in the protectionist belt of Ontario and Quebec, with little strength in the low-tariff regions of the West and the Maritimes. Despite all the pious declarations of its leaders, the Liberal party contains many powerful protectionists led, up to now, by Mr. Gordon. He has lost his power as an individual but the forces that he once led are still strong and will re-emerge as soon as the government asks Parliament to cut any tariff.

The same sort of basic disagreement festers inside the Conservative party. Based primarily in the West, by an electoral freak, it cannot hope for office again without large gains in central Canada where its traditional support comes from the tariff-protected regions.

Both the old parties, therefore, are heading into hard political decisions. But if the Kennedy Round offers increased trade throughout the world Canada will have the chance to achieve the economic growth essential to its continued prosperity, and not otherwise.

On that point, as on few others, the government's mind is clear and fixed. In the centennial year it is prepared, if necessary, to re-fight the tariff issue which agitated the Fathers of Confederation a century ago.

What's Going On?

What is going on in this country? How is it that postage on second-class mail, Christmas cards, for instance, is raised to the Old Country to four cents, while remaining at three cents to all the Americas. Discrimination against Britain, no doubt.

Is there conspiracy afoot? It would certainly seem so; and now it is noted that Canada votes for the United Nations' move to take away South Africa's mandate for Southwest Africa, an almost certain war issue if ever there was one. Have the people of Canada authorized such a dangerous move on our part. I think not. Has Mr. Pearson assumed dictatorial powers? Time for us to wake up to what is going on, and put a stop to it.—E. W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful.

Good Reporting

Desmond Bill's article in the Victoria Daily Times of Oct. 26 is, in my humble opinion, one of the best pieces of reporting I have ever read in a situation with which I am personally involved.

My main thought, however, is to emphasize the need for ex-commissionaires to express their written opinions. Opinions of others would, of course, be invaluable. I have reason to believe that there are many service and civil service personnel who are fed up with present authoritarian attitudes and practices of certain ranking and other commissionaires. This applies especially in HMC Dockyard, Esquimalt. This is the only detachment where I have worked and where they are quite frequently referred to as "Mickey Mouse Policemen"!

"Opposition" opinions are obviously welcomed, always in the hope that they may be constructive and without malice.

I sincerely believe that most of the gentlemen who comprise the corps headquarters' staff are doing a splendid job, but who is the adept "puppeteer" operating there?—George Woodford, Craigowan.

How dignified and mollified
Our magistrate must be;
To realize and analyze
The evidence of she!

For Jayne would say, she hath-a-way,
Not plagued by toils and tears;
Does she do harm? Why, she adds charm
To us so old in years!

Shakespeare it seems found no extremes
In Portia at the bar;
So cannot we, pray, make our plea,
Of mercy for a star?

FROM LONDON

By MARTIN DEWEY

Beyond the Graves of Aberfan

NOT much more can be usefully said about the human dimensions of the tragedy that overtook the Welsh coal town of Aberfan last month when a sliding mountain of mine refuse engulfed a school and row of houses. With close to 150 bodies already recovered, most of them the bodies of children, and with dozens of children still unaccounted for, the figures speak for themselves. But there are many things that might be said about the wider social dimensions of that tragedy, even if few have so far seen fit to say them.

Dewey

One exception is the Sunday Observer, which commented in a brief editorial: "The Aberfan tragedy is a reminder that there are large areas of Britain where the people still have to live with the legacy of neglect and shabby indifference to human needs left by the industrial revolution."

Another is the New Statesman, which fairly frothed with socialist indignation: "We ought to look again at the whole deradful heritage of laissez-faire economics: not only the mining valleys, but the ruined factories of the Midlands and the north, the rotting mill towns, the foul canals, the savage scars hacked out of our hill—all the physical assaults on our country inflicted by greedy men who moved in, got rich, and then moved out again, leaving a trail of desolation."

For the most part, however, the British press and public have chosen to concern themselves only with the immediate issues arising out of the Aberfan disaster. Whose fault was it that the pile of waste from the mine shaft, the so-called coal tip, was allowed to slide down upon an unsuspecting community? How safe are other mining towns with their rows of coal tips? Why hasn't the National Coal Board, the governing body of the nationalized coal industry, seen to it that these unsightly piles of black waste were levelled years ago?

Obviously, if there is anything to be learned at Aberfan that will prevent similar accidents elsewhere this is all to the good. But it will not be so good if an overemphasis on particulars is allowed to obscure the point that The Observer and New Statesman tried to make. Partly, the Aberfan tragedy was about a sliding coal tip and a terrible number of dead children. But it was also, perhaps even principally, about a blighted race of people.

Tragedy Within Tragedy

Aberfan was, in fact, a tragedy within a tragedy within a tragedy. Death on the Aberfan scale is but part of the continuing tragedy of life in Britain's mining communities and this, in turn, is but part of the continuing tragedy of life in Britain's industrial regions as a whole. You have to close your eyes to see the one without seeing the others.

This may seem a little strong to a Canadian reader who has never travelled through industrial Britain, but if anything it understates the case. In most areas, conditions have changed little since the late 'thirties when, in "The Road to Wigan Pier," the conscious-smitten George Orwell wrote: "As you walk through the industrial towns you lose yourself in labyrinths of little brick houses, blackened by smoke, festering in planless chaos round miry alleys and little cindered yards where there are stinking dustbins and lines of grimy washing and half-ruinous WCs."

It is the quality of life, where millions rarely see the sun except as a pale, sickly ball in a sky forever blackened by industrial smoke, that The Observer had in mind when it spoke of the legacy of the industrial revolution. It is a legacy that has condemned generations to live out comfortless lives in the midst of a grotesque, soul-destroying ugliness that has no parallel anywhere in the world. In an esthetic sense, even the poorest Asian in his hovel is better off than the British industrial worker in his dingy castle, for here man has managed to destroy nature itself.

Yet these generalized industrial evils are only the beginning of the story so far as the country's mining communities are concerned, Here, in addition to ugliness and deprivation, men do work which, if it were demanded of animals, would soon have the Humane Society up in arms. And, while it is rare nowadays for coal mining to take the lives of children, the deaths of hundreds of men at a time is something that mining communities have learned to expect.

Some Changes

Some things have changed. Miners now have better equipment and, glory be, they even have facilities for showering after work. Competing forms of energy are slowly gaining ground and uneconomical coal pits are being closed down. But coal is still far and away Britain's principal source of power and heating and in 1964 nearly 500,000 worker were still employed in the job of getting it out of the ground.

There is, of course, a danger in paying too much attention to statistics.

Now, as always, the rate of conversion is being decided entirely on the basis of the money costs involved in producing or importing the various alternative sources of energy and coal is giving way only as other fuels become relatively cheaper in terms of money. But one value of Aberfan and all the other Aberfans before it should be to remind us that coal bears a price in destroyed and blighted lives that doesn't find its way into the money equation.

If Aberfan has helped to make these things even a little clearer to the mass of Britons who have never seen a coal mine, this latest installment in human lives will at least have brought something.

Looking Back

From the Times of Nov. 8, 1906:

His Majesty the King does not wish any public celebrations on the date of his birthday next Friday. Neither of the patriotic societies in the city, the Sons of England and the Sons of St. George, will take any steps towards recognizing the event. His Majesty wishes to perpetuate the memory of his mother, the late Queen Victoria, by requesting the official celebration of his birthday on that of the late Queen, May 24. Food the Key to China's Future

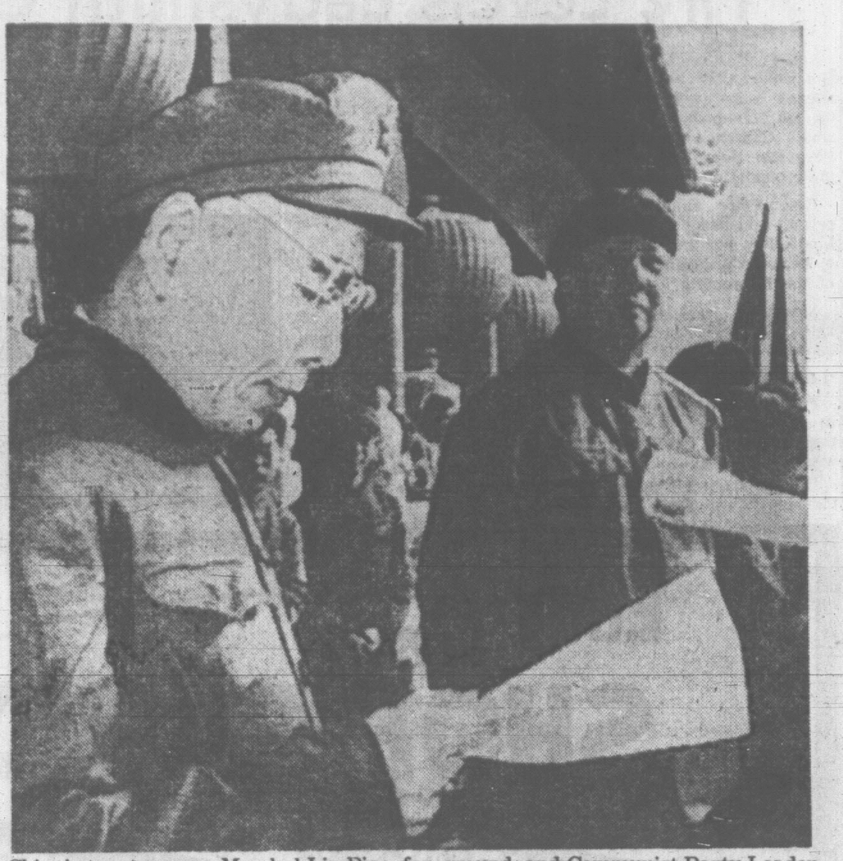
By STANLEY KARNOW
The Washington Post



China's two top men, Marshal Lin Piao, foreground, and Communist Party Leader Mao Tse-tung, will be anxiously counting the country's crop returns over the coming months. With a rapidly-increasing population, keeping the people from hunger is China's most difficult task and the one which could, in the end, determine the future leadership of the country.

HONG KONG — Confronted by growing domestic resistance, Chinese Communist leader Mao Tse-Tung and his chief lieutenant, Lin Piao, are expected to face a crucial test by the turn of the year.

The test, as analysts here foresee it, is likely to be linked to the political convulsions currently sweeping China, But its deeper cause may stem from a traditional Chinese problem — the problem of food.

The autumn harvest of wheat, rice and other grains, now being reaped throughout China, should be brought in by late this month and fully counted by January.

Duo's Fate

How the crop turns out could significantly determine the fate of the Mao-Lin duo and, consequently, China's longer-range future.

A good crop would serve Mao by seeming to fortify his contention that a rigorous ideological line can yield tangible results.

Recent Peking propaganda has repeatedly stressed that the "great proletarian cultural revolution." As Mao's doctrinaire drive is officially called, is "releasing the forces of production," thereby creating "new and favorable conditions" for economic development.

Indeed, a basic tenet of Peking's present dogma holds that "the great spiritual force" generated by the Thought of Mao Tse-Tung is "being transformed into a great material force."

Two Reasons

In contrast, a poor crop can seriously frustrate Mao and Lin, for at least two important reasons.

First a bad harvest would damage Mao's credibility, providing his critics, particularly inside the Chinese Communist party apparatus, with arguments to expose his assertions as unrealistic.

A significant number of his opponents still base their criticism of the Maoist line on the chaos caused by the 1958 "Great Leap Forward," when frenetic efforts at rapid collectivization led to near-famine conditions.

At the same time, crop failures could inspire unrest in the Chinese army, as they did six or seven years ago. Coming from rural stock, most troops are sensitive to the plight of their peasant families.

Food shortages partly stimulated the army resistance to Mao in 1959 that led to the purge of Marshal Peng Teh-Huai, then the defense minister, and his replacement by Lin Piao.

This year's harvest comes at a time of extreme political turmoil. Thus it may hold more meaning for China than any harvest in the country's 17 years under Communism.

What, then, are the prospects on the Chinese agricultural front?

At the moment, experts here are inclined to predict a relatively poor crop — "not a disaster, but just not very good," as one specialist put it.

Peking has not published authoritative statistics on grain production since 1958, when it figures were vastly inflated. However extrapolating from official Chinese reports as well as intelligence accounts, experts in Hong Kong have consistently managed to make fairly accurate estimates of Chinese food output.

For 1966, they calculate, China's total production of wheat, rice, potatoes and other staples will be about 175 million metric tons — five million tons lower than last year's crop, and 10 million below the bumper harvest of 1964.

A measure of how slowly Chinese food production has progressed over the years is reflected in the fact that grain output between 1953 and 1957 averaged 172 million tons annually.

A clue to gradually declining food consumption in China is evidenced, moreover, by the estimate that the Chinese population has increased by more than a hundred million mouths in the past decade.

Blame Weather

Unlike the period of the "Great Leap Forward," when farming was mainly disrupted by grandiose schemes, this year's crop seems to have been primarily hurt by the weather.

A severe drought in the wheat-growing belt north of the Yangtse River cut down the acreage under cultivation, reducing the total wheat yield to some 20 million tons, about 10 per cent less than last year's output.

South China, where the principal crop is rice, has suffered even more drastically from the weather.

Early last summer, fertile Kwangtung province was hit by the heaviest rainfall on record. The same area is now being devastated by one of the worst droughts in its history.

The severity of the present drought in Kwangtung is such that the provincial Communisy party committee recently issued an "urgent directive" ordering the mobilization of the region's entire population to meet the emergency.

Seek Water

Students, teachers, soldiers and others are reportedly helping the peasants to sink wells, dig ditches and dredge rivers in the effort to tap water resources. A Canton radio broadcast monitored here last month pointed out that the lack of water was not only affecting this year's crop but would also hamper next year's rice planting.

According to expert calculations here, the rice harvest this fall will amount to about 81.5 million tons, some three million tons below last year's production.

The likelihood of food shortages in the coming winter has Peking looking abroad for increased grain purchases. The Chinese recently concluded a deal with Australia for an additional 1.5 million tons of wheat, and are said to be negotiating with Canada and Argentina for grain.

Foreign Grain

Foreign wheat shipments scheduled to reach China before next summer will total about four million tons.

In addition, it is thought that Peking may have something between five and 10 million tons of grain in reserve for an emergency.

Still, the agricultural prospect looks dim, and there are some hints that Mao and his colleagues may be bracing themselves for a crisis. Analysts here suggest, for example, that Peking could be purposely exaggerating the effects of bad weather in order to make the harvest seem better than it might have been.

Troops and militant young "Red Guards" have also been sent into the countryside, presumably to help with the harvest — but also, it is suspected, to prevent peasants from hoarding grain earmarked for the state.

When Franco Catches a Whale Spaniards Know Something's Up

THE ECONOMIST

GEN. FRANCO
. . . proud of stability

MADRID—Spaniards are occasionally tempted to resort to divination to discover what their government has in mind. Some of them even see political significance in the size of the fish General Franco catches.

When he is well, they say, and the wheels of state are turning smoothly, the papers show him landing a modest salmon or trout; when the need arises to refute rumors that he is ill, or there is talk of high-level scandal or dissension, photos are published of the caudillo contemplating a baffled-looking tuna or shark.

The press announced recently that he had caught a whale.

Despite the whale, officials declare that the general's health is not, at the moment, causing them concern; but they admit that a referendum will "soon" be held to approve constitutional changes intended to facilitate matters.

●

A constitutional referendum has been on the cabinet's agenda for more than a year but promulgation of the text to be voted on was delayed by a triangular disagreement between falangist, Opus Dei and right-wing monarchist ministers; it appears that a compromise has at last been reached.

The principal innovation that voters will be asked to approve will be the separation of the posts of chief of state and head of the government. At present General Franco holds both. By relinquishing one post and appointing a prime minister, he might ensure that day-to-day government, at least, would not seize up when he dies.

●

Candidates for the premiership are already emerging—they include Captain-General Munoz-Grandes, Count Motrico, a former ambassador, and Senor Fraga Iribarne, the press minister—but there is little, as yet, to indicate that the caudillo really intends to whittle down his own authority in the near future.

It is said that he and one of his closest advisers in the cabinet are still having doubts about the wisdom of transferring real power to a prime minister who would immediately be subjected to powerful lobbying by monarchist, falangist, ecclesiastical and democratic pressure-groups.

Franco is genuinely proud of the 27 years of stability he has imposed on Spain and would rather monopolize power to the end, leaving the future to fend for itself, than preside over an indaba.

The possibility of a second period of dictatorship after the caudillo's death is ruled out by all but a small minority. No other dictator could count on the freakish consensus of conservative and right-wing opinion which benefited Franco.

Already, the only movement visible in Franco's "Movement" is centrifugal. Falangists and monarchists are at loggerheads and divided among themselves.

The government-appointed bosses and publicists of the sindicatos (official trade unions) are making leftist-sounding noises — one is reminded of the maxim attributed to M. Guy Mollet: "il faut toujours tomber a gauche"—while factory and office elections, circumscribed but fairly conducted, are now bringing into the middle ranks of the sindicatos a new wave of shop-floor militants. Many of these have tasted unofficial action and are all in favor of free-trade unionism.

The official students union is melting like a stranded jellyfish. An Opus Dei newspaper has offended the sindicato leadership; sindicato and falangist organs are attacking the banks; and falangists and others are criticizing Opus Dei—not only for its "disproportionate" influence in government, banking and publishing but because of the alleged complicity of an Opus Dei bank in a nauseous real-estate scandal in Madrid.

But this disparate coalition will almost certainly hang together so long as Franco's personal authority survives. For the top men, at least, the interests at stake are enormous. And for those below staff rank, as for the uncommitted public, there is the pop-rhythm of nationalism. The vigor with which the Gibraltar drum is now being beaten is a reasonably reliable index of the restlessness within and around the regime.

Man Must Plan His Future To Avoid World of Chaos

Neue Rhur Zeitung

Mankind must make up its mind to plan its future. If it does not, then world-wide chaos will inevitably be caused by the population explosion and wide-spread starvation.

Variations and extensions of this thesis were the basis of all forecasts and programs put forward at the recent ninth Darmstadt Discussion.

Scientists and journalists of assorted fields expressed their opinions on the theme "Man and His future."

Robert Jung sketched a kind of history of academic examination of the future. This is already referred to as future research.

Not so long ago such forecasting was the privilege of small but influential groups. Military strategists and economic leaders planned and carried out programs for many decades ahead. They knew that foreknowledge means power and profit.

This is no longer a privilege now that wider sections of the population are beginning to take an interest in the future.

It has much to do with the popularizing of the exact sciences. The theories of physics, biology and genetics encompass the present as well as the future. Scientific progress permits an extensive manipulation of the material world within the framework of physics and biology.

These possibilities, plus the specialist's knowledge, his "hard data" and ability to calculate chance, lead all too easily to dogmatism, ideologizing of knowledge and the white-coated elite.

Frieburg biologist Mohr's paper brought out this danger very clearly, The sharp, provoking presentation of the topic turned the Otto Berndt Hall, Darmstadt Technical College, into a tribunal.

Changing World

Plaintiff and judge combined was the scientist, wanting to change the world according to his ideas.

Defendants were all those who earn their bread and live in the present without predicting or manipulating the future. For the layman this learned discussion was revelation of how antiquated his ideas and social behavior are in the light of scientific and technical progress.

The philosopher and theologian — present at the requirement of the Joint Faculties Board — found themselves in a hopeless position from the start. They supported opinion and creeds which meant nothing to the exact scientists.

The Catholic theologian, Karl Rahner, read a text in the style of Heidegger describing the future as unknown and uncontrollable by men.

Experts on population and nutritional physiologists, who can calculate everything beyond A.D. 2000, were not interested in this. They want to subject the future to their planning and control it as much as possible.

The unnecessarily bitter polemics following Rahners' paper only emphasized how wide the gap between science and religion has become, in spite of all attempts at reconciliation through word and universal understanding.

The sociologist alone remained untouched by the vehemence and dispute between the faculties.

His subject is so complex and comprehensive that he can partake in any discussion. He need never feel superfluous where the future is the topic. For human society, the subject of his job, is directly involved in any planning.

Tories Would Disappear But for Hard Vote Core

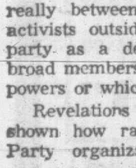
By DOUGLAS FISHER and HARRY S. CROWE

(Mr. Crowe is associate professor of history at Atkinson College, York University. Mr. Fisher, a former NDP MP, lectures in Canadian government at Carleton University.)

Fisher

The press and radio and TV won't leave it alone. It has been over-blown and over-analyzed. What? The Conservative leadership issue: Dalton Camp versus John Diefenbaker. There's another few days of kafuffle before the issue can fade away, probably with a pyrrhic Diefenbaker victory.

We reiterate an argument we have made before: that at the heart of the matter is the role of the parliamentary caucus as the continuing substance of the party. We would add, expressing it very crudely, that whatever the fractional support Dalton Camp has in the caucus, the test is really between the caucus and those Tory activists outside of the caucus who see the party as a democratic organization with a broad membership and an executive with real powers or which should have real powers.



Crowe

Revelations of the last few weeks have shown how ramshackle is the Conservative Party organization. Dalton Camp has the grand title of national president. One would assume (certainly Mr. Camp seems to claim) that the national president and the executive he heads should have control of the national director, James Johnston.

Some control. When Dr. Johnston took over the job of national director and Flora MacDonald was disposed of it was evident how little Dalton Camp, the national president, counted at the permanent headquarters of the federal party.

Again to put it crudely, the national Conservative Party would seem to have three basic elements: the leader, the caucus, and the basic Tory vote across the country. There is a close and necessary relationship between the first two as the party in being between elections. The only reason outsiders cannot jeer at the present hassle and why it is life and death to the insiders is to be found in the third element, that sizable number of Canadian voters (probably about 25 per cent) who will vote Conservative every election come Drew, Diefenbaker, Camp or whoever it may be.

* * *

If it were not for this core vote all of us could dismiss the federal Conservative Party as a joke — badly led, completely confused in policy and inept in parliamentary performance through poor discipline, weak personnel, and laziness. It would disappear, deservedly, if merit were an important factor. But that basic vote is irrespective of merit. It is ingrained, instinctive; it won't disappear. It is well worth fighting for. Indeed, Mr. Diefenbaker and most of the caucus feel they symbolize that vote and speak for it. Essentially, the Camp view is that this core isn't enough and can never be enough to put the party in power again.

Let's look at the charge we make that the federal Conservative Party is a joke, beginning with the condition of its policies.

It fought the 1965 election on a program that Alvin Hamilton threw together at the last minute. It was scrambled out to the candidates in a pamphlet form in the middle of the campaign.

The points were disconnected; they formed no pattern. The leader didn't make much use of them, the feature of his presentation being attacks on the wicked Grits.

Since then Conservative policy lines have been drawn largely by Mr. Diefenbaker, Alvin Hamilton, Davie Fulton, George Hees, and Wallace McCutcheon. At least Mr. Diefenbaker has been the dominating spokesman in the House of Commons and one gets bits and pieces of his policy, much of in incoherent, in Hansard. The other four keep firing copies of their speeches into the press gallery. We have a grand collection of them. Two of the spokesmen, Hamilton and McCutcheon, have a substantial consistency in theme and it is fair to say that either offers a nucleus of policy ideas in most fields. Unfortunately, the ideas of the two men are very disparate. Obviously the five men expressing policy have never gotten together to agree on any aspects of it.

Now on parliamentary performance. Most of us commenting on parliamentary affairs have been far too kind or easy on the Conservatives. Our excuse, and it can only be that, is that the goverment has deserved our critical concentration. In a true sense, the leader, Mr. Diefenbaker, has been the sum of party endeavor in the House. You know that he is superb in that theatre. The attendance has been shaky, the calibre of most speeches desolate. Many Conservative MPs are just not bothering to perform in the House or in its committees.

The Admiral Brock affair is a sad example of the plight. The admiral has been working in the office of one of the absentee MPs, providing critics of Paul Hellyer such as Terry Nugent and Michael Forrestal with ammunition.

* * *

They have used it so ineffectively that hours of House time have been wasted on bootless arguments over privilege and Mr. Hellyer's presumed lack of integrity.

Or more recently Mr. Diefenbaker sounded like the warrior of the pipeline year of 1956 as he attacked the government decision on Trans-Canada Pipelines' southern line. Three days later Eldon Wooliams comes along with a view of the deal which is inconsistent with that of his leader.

Let us repeat. This is a sick, sick caucus and if it is the party, Lord help the party.

This week what we are tending to call the party, that is delegates from across Canada, gathers in conference. The agenda alone is a travesty, if the party is to be taken seriously. Not only has it just been tumbled forth, it provides nothing in the way of either serious policy papers, workshops, or session on organization and administration. In other words, it is basically constituted to be a pep rally. And it cannot be a happy pep rally because Dalton Camp has mucked it up.

In an old issue of Punch, 1954, there is a satire by Malcolm Muggeridge which would serve as the text or theme of the conference. His subject then was Winston Churchill. "By this time he had reached an advanced age . . . his splendid faculties began to falter. The spectacle of him thus clutching wearily at all the appurtenances and responsibilities of an authority he could no longer fully exercise was to his admirers infinitely sorrowful, and to his enemies infinitely derisory."

In our way, we are admirers of Mr. Diefenbaker, and so we sorrow both for him and for those core Conservative voters.

Parents to Help Teachers In Cowichan Experiment

DUNCAN—Cowichan School Board will experiment in using voluntary teacher aides from among parents.

Trustee Wilf Peck said Monday the aides will assist in non-teaching duties at Alexander Elementary Schools.

"We feel that under safeguards it is a good idea," he said.

The aides will work three half days a week.

Will Dobson, board chairman: "It's worth a try."

Trustee Neil Dorning asked: "Do we have to stoop to this step?"

Trustee Jack Bailey said if an extra teacher is required for a class with over 35 students the board should go for the extra teacher above entitlement.

Mr. Dobson pointed out the Alexander example was multiplied throughout the school district.

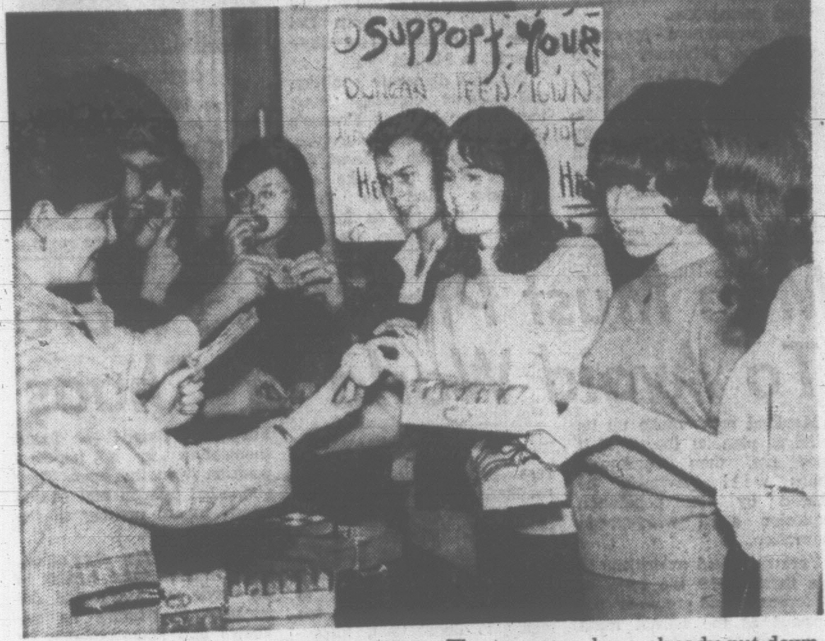
Meeting the need would require not only 20 more teachers but 20 more classrooms.

The rare teacher ability to train brain-damaged children will be sought by the board in the United Kingdom, New Zealand and Australia.

Trustee Peck said it is hoped to establish a local class in January for some 10 neurological handicapped students.

"These children can be educated but the ability to teach them is a rare talent."

He said the nearest similar classes are at Sooke and Sidney.



TEEN TOWNERS in Duncan are hoping to exchange doughnuts for dollars in a bid to raise $20,000 to buy the old Frozen Food Centre on Station Street and convert it into a social and cultural centre for Duncan. The teenagers have already put down a $300 deposit and they have a 30-day option to buy the building. Trying out their sales pitch, left to right, are: Richard Calverley, Carolin Blacklock, Linda Garside and Colleen Garside.

SANDOWN CONDITIONS RAPPED

'Pictures Don't Convey Smell'

The dumping of garbage and trash at Sandown racetrack has been criticized by Dr. John Whitbread, senior medical officer of the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Health Board.

In a letter to North Saanich council Monday, he described conditions on the grounds as unsanitary.

He pointed out trailers which park in the track area are using the ground beneath them for sewage disposal and leave piles of garbage in the surrounding area.

NO TRAILERS

Trailers should not be tolerated at the track, he added.

"Under the present conditions they constitute a definite health hazard," he stated.

Photographs of the refuse and garbage on the grounds accompanied the letter.

"Pictures don't convey the smell," commented Reeve J. B. Cumming.

Ex-Candidate Upset With Liberal Leader

COMOX (CP) — Joseph Cvetkovich, former Liberal candidate, said Monday he is disenchanted with B.C. Liberal Leader Ray Perrault.

Mr. Cvetkovich, who ran last in a three-man election race in Comox riding in the Sept. 12 provincial election, said Mr. Perrault has ignored invitations to get into the Buttle Lake pollution fight.

"I challenged Ray Perrault to get into the fight and support the people of Campbell River." he said in an interview.

Mr. Cvetkovich, 33, who made his first bid for political office Sept. 12 and lost to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell, was commenting on his letter to the deputy provincial secretary demanding an appeal hearing by the Pollution Control Board on the Buttle Lake issue.

The board has approved an application by Western Mines Ltd. to dump mine tailings and effluent into Buttle Lake, which supplies Campbell River's domestic water.

Mr. Cvetkovich said he is "acting on behalf of myself and the public in Campbell River. I'm also acting for the Liberal party but I'm not getting any help from Ray Perrault."

Duncan Students May Build House

DUNCAN—Industrial art students in Cowichan Senior Secondary School may spend this winter building a house.

The idea was suggested to the school board Monday by Trustee Jack Efford.

He said Naniamo is doing it and the house there will become a senior citizen's home.

Art Jones, schools superintendent, said he liked the idea.

However, he had checked with Penticton, a similar district to Cowichan, and officials there felt the enrolment of students was not sufficient to justify the project.

Mr. Jones promised to look into the matter.

Youth Rescued

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP)—Gavin Dickie, 18, of Nanaimo, was rescued unhurt from the Fraser River Sunday after plunging more than 100 feet from the Pattullo Bridge.

WHY I DON'T LIKE ADULTS!

Canadian teen-agers have been called shiftless, immoral, decadent; drinking and doping and dancing away the golden years of youth. In this week's issue of the Star Weekly, a teen-ager fights back ... claiming adults are responsible for the attitudes of youth—"they're two-faced, self-righteous, guilt-ridden!" Don't miss this blazing attack on Canadian elders by a fighting spokesman for the young—Why I Don't Like Adults—one of several great features in the action magazine —Star Weekly—now on sale.

'Propaganda' By Teachers Under Fire

DUNCAN—The teachers' use of "professional" propaganda "during current salary negotiations was strongly criticized Monday by Will Dobson, Cowichan School Board chairman.

He took exception to the B.C. Teachers' Federation comparing teachers' incomes with all male occupations in other fields.

He said: "The majority of our teachers are women and their salaries cannot be compared to those of women in other fields such as nursing.

"And there are no women longshoremen or carpenters."

Mr. Dobson said the 115 Cowichan women teachers average salary is $6,001.

"What society can afford the same remuneration for teachers as doctors. There are 21 doctors registered at our Duncan hospital but we have 275 teachers in the district.

Trustee Wilf Peck agreed there should be some counter to the propaganda fed to the teachers by their own federation.

He accused the teachers of wrongfully using the press as a forum for bargaining

ARBITRATION

Trustee Peck forecast "unless there is a real break" all teacher salary negotiations on Vancouver Island will go to arbitration.

Trustee Neil Dorning, chairman of the Cowichan salary committee, reported local teachers had reduced their initial demand from 18 to 10 per cent.

The board had countered with a 5 per cent offer.

NOTICE

To the Owner-Electors of the Electoral Areas of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin

Re: Proposed Centennial Swimming Pool

REFERENDUM

PUBLIC NOTICE is hereby given to the owner electors within the Electoral Areas of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin that the Regional District of the Capital of British Columbia has directed that a referendum be held on Saturday, November 19, 1966, on the following question:

> "Are you in favor of the Regional District of the Capital of British Columbia borrowing a sum not exceeding $250,000.00 (exclusive of Centennial Grants in the amount of $15,000.00), for the purpose of constructing and equipping a swimming pool in the 1700 Block Old Island Highway and operating and maintaining the swimming pool with all annual debt being shared by the Electoral areas of Colwood, Langford and Metchosin on the basis of assessment as fixed for taxation for school purposes as provided for in Section 782 (1) of the Municipal Act."

NOTICE IS FURTHER given to the said owner electors that polls will be open at the following places on the said 19th November, 1966, between 8 o'clock in the forenoon and 8 o'clock in the afternoon:

Colwood Elementary School, 2139 Sooke Road, Victoria, B.C.
Glen Lake Elementary School, 3060 Glen Lake Road, Victoria, B.C.
Langford Elementary School, 2764 Jacklin Road, Victoria, B.C.
Metchosin Elementary School, 611 Happy Valley Road, RR 1, Victoria, B.C.

The persons entitled to vote shall be British Subjects of the full age of twenty-one years and corporations which are owners of real property within the Electoral Areas.

GIVEN under my hand at Victoria, British Columbia, this 7 day of November, 1966.

M. E. Colclough,
Returning Officer.

'IT WENT LIKE A FLASH'

Fire Levels Ladysmith Church

LADYSMITH — The Anglican and United Churches here have offered a temporary home to the 180 Roman Catholic families whose Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Hope was burned to the ground Monday.

Rev. Peter Rudden, parish priest, said today: "These are kind offers but it may turn out to be more practical to use one of the community halls."

Meantime weekday services are being held in the small convent chapel.

'LIKE A FLASH'

Father Rudden, who had been in the church minutes before the outbreak of fire, said: "It went like a flash."

The fire started in the back of the church and Father Rudden was able to save only the sacraments.

He reported this morning the church furnace is still intact. It could not have been the cause of the fire, he said.

The church, popularly known as St. Mary's, was a 57-year-old wooden frame building.

Firemen, poised on the roof of the nearby convent, flooded the rectory walls to keep the fire from spreading.

Father Rudden said: "If the fire had spread to the rectory it would almost certainly have also destroyed the 150-student school next door."

While firemen fought the blaze others removed oil tanks from the church and the rectory to a safe distance.

The alarm was raised by Mrs. Florence Heys and Mrs. F. M. Wrago.

Mrs. Wrago said: "When I first saw it there was just a small flame in a back window."

She said the opening of the church door might have set up a draught which fanned the flames.

At one time flames were leaping 100 feet in the air.

Crestbrook Profits Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crestbrook Timber Ltd., which plans to build a pulp mill in partnership with a Japanese company, reported an increased net profit Monday of $684,710 for the nine months ended Sept. 30.

Earnings for the same period in 1965 were $440,736.

V. C. Brown, company president, said there has been progress on an application to the Japanese government for its approval of a Crestbrook deal with Honshu-Mitsubishi to build the pulp mill in the Kootenay region of B.C.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP)—Grain prices held to a narrow range today at the Winnipeg grain exchange. The closing of American markets for U.S. elections limited trading.

Oilseeds showed some activity. Hedging sales were in evidence early in the day but were well absorbed in later trading. Impending news on the Argentine exchange situation limited trading.

There were no reports of export business in oilseeds, although some light shipping orders were established.

Oats and barley prices were steady with trading mostly of domestic interest. Rye prices firmed after an irregular start.

Lakehead prices for IWA: class two and domestic wheat were unchanged.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Gains Recorded At Vancouver

All sections moved upwards in improved trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange today.

The industrial section saw Home A and North West Life up $1.25 and Gill was .50 better at $6.75.

In the oils, Futurity improved .05 to .72 and Royal American also put on .05.

The mining section was paced by Highmont which reached a new high of $1.94 before retreating to $1.84, up .10 on the morning.

Dynasty recovered some of its recent losses and gained .75 to $7. Pyramid was also strong and was up .15 at $6.20.

Buchanan, however, went the other way and reached a new 1966 low of .35.

New York exchange and most other U.S. securities and commodities markets were closed today for the congressional elections.

AT TORONTO in the industrial list, Moore Corp. was up ⅝ to 82, Massey-Ferguson and Alcan ⅜ each to 22⅝ and 29¾. Interprovincial Pipe Line declined ¾ to 76½ and Royal Bank ½ to 67½.

Western oils were higher with Banff and Central Del Rio up ¼ each to 13 and 10⅝ while Union Oil was off ⅛ to 29⅞.

Base metals were lower with Cominco down ⅜ to 32⅝ while Area jumped 20 cents to 3.60 in speculative mines.

Golds showed slight improvement with Dome up ¼ to 36¾ and Kerr-Addison ⅛ to 11½.

AT MONTREAL the market was mixed today in light trading.

Industrials were up with Massey-Ferguson adding ½ at 22⅝ and Moore Corp. ¾ at 82¼. Labatt was ahead ½ at 17⅞ and Du Pont and Steinberg's A ex-dividend each were up ¼ at 36 and 18½ respectively.

Fraser companies lost one point at 22½ and Calgary Power ½ at 20½.

AT LONDON equities moved lower on the stock exchange today as recent company statements underlined the effects of the British credit squeeze. A sharp rise in U.S. bill rates and the unlikelihood of an early lowering of British interest rates made for caution.

However, Gilts recovered initial widespread falls and were little changed on balance.

Dollar stocks were easier on balance. General Motors gave ground on a dividend cut. Consolidated Mining was a firm spot but other Canadian stocks were little changed.

Canadian banks were easier and home banks, discount houses and insurances lost a little ground. Leading industrial stocks were dull.

Investors Want BOTH FEET ON THE GROUND!

Every $3,000 currently invested by Victoria Mortgage is secured by an average of $10,000 Real Estate. That kind of security in fact puts both feet on the ground firmly enough, but Victoria Mortgage has gone even further in establishing substantial share capital to give additional security to the debenture-holder. Yet our debentures still pay 7% for a one-year term, 7½% for 5 years. Full, easy-to-read details are available in our free booklet. May we mail you one? Europe Banks Underwrite Big GM Loan

FRANKFURT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has completed arrangements for a 125,000,000-mark ($35,000,000) West German bond issue to finance operations in Europe, the Deutsche Bank announced.

The 6¾-per-cent bonds are to go on sale Nov. 15 at an offering price of 995 marks for 1,000-mark face value.

The bonds are issued by General Motors Overseas Capital Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of General Motors Corp., and are unconditionally guaranteed by the parent U.S. company.

The Deutsche Bank, which heads the group of European banks underwriting the issue, said that final agreements on the loan were signed between it and the General Motors subsidiary.

Railway Rate Formula Draws B.C. Criticism

OTTAWA (CP)—The British Columbia government said today a formula for maximum freight rate control set out in the government's proposed transport bill is an absurdity and should be removed for further study.

It argued in a brief to the Commons transport committee, which is studying the bill, that the formula will force captive shippers to pay a higher share of fixed railway costs.

The formula sets the rate for a basic 30,000-pound shipment at the railway's variable costs plus 150 per cent. This follows a recommendation made in the 1961 report of the MacPherson royal commission on transportation.

B.C.'s brief said this is too high. It implied that fixed costs were 150 per cent of variable costs. Yet data available from the U.S. Interstate Commerce Commission showed average fixed costs on various commodity routes ranged between 24 and 35 per cent of variable costs.

"We have pointed out the absurdity of the proposed maximum rate control formula," the brief said. "The only argument anyone has advanced in its favor is that a mere handful of people will be affected and thus the absurdity will be minimized."

B.C. suggested that a cost-oriented formula be worked out "reflecting the actual loading characteristics of a commodity on one hand and ensuring that any commodity movement pays only a just and reasonable proportion of the overhead costs of the railways on the other hand."

This could be done during the three-year period set out in the bill for a study of export grain rates. In the meantime, the maximum rate could be tied to the present class rates which are the highest charged by the railways.

B.C. also asked that the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, owned by the province, be made eligible for federal subsidies. Although it was not under federal control, the PGE's rates reflected the effects of federal control on the big railways and it should be given a share of subsidy payments.

The bill sets out a new subsidy principle under which railways will be paid for the losses which result from uneconomic services carried on in the public interest. It also provides a transitional subsidy starting at $110,000,000 in the first year and sliding to zero over eight years.

Interest Rates Could Stay High

TORONTO (CP) — S. T. Paton, vice-president and general-manager of the Toronto-Dominion Bank predicted Monday that interest rates may remain high for a long time.

"Interest rates have been rising on a world-wide basis and there is a definite possibility that the pressure of credit demands will be sustained much longer than many observers expect, thereby delaying or preventing the removal of the ceiling for some years."

He told the Canadian Club of Toronto that a proposed amendment of The Bank Act, which was last revised in 1954, would not be completed before early 1967.

Finance Minister Sharp has proposed replacing the existing 6 per cent rate ceiling with a flexible limit, linked to bond yields, which would be abolished entirely when credit conditions ease.

Mr. Paton, who is also president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, said the proposed revisions of the Bank Act still fall short of the objectives laid down by the royal commission on banking and finance.

Mr. Paton said his main concern with the proposed changes is that some of the provisions do not go far enough. However, he added, it is much better than the existing act

Air Travel Shows Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chairman of the Air Transport Association of Canada said Monday that air passenger travel and cargo shipments rose 15 per cent in 1965.

A. L. Michaud of Vancouver said members of the ATAC, which represents 97 per cent of the air transport industry in Canada, carried 6,500,000 passengers in 1965, compared with 5,700,000 in 1964.

He told 200 delegates to the three-day association convention that operating revenues rose to almost $394,000,000 from $344,000,000.

Mr. Michaud said profits climbed to $13,500,000, an increase of almost $5,000,000.

He said Canadian airlines could be carrying 7,500,000 revenue passengers this year and 11,000,000 by 1970, when he expected operating revenues to reach $740,000,000.

YEAR-END DIVIDEND FOR GM SHAREHOLDERS

NEW YORK (AP)—A year-end dividend of $1.50 a share of common stock was declared by directors of General Motors Monday, bringing the firm's total 1966 dividends to $4.55 a share.

This was second only to the record 1965 auto sales year when shareholders were voted dividends totalling $5.25 a share.

The year-end dividend, to be paid December 10 to shareholders of record November 17, will go to approximately 1,385,000 shareholders. It will total $428,000,000.

B.C. Timber Giant Has Profits Gain

Net profit of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. increased by $1,378,024 to $32,615,845 in the nine-month period to Sept. 30 this year as compared with 1965, the big pulp-timber producer announced Monday.

A statement mailed to shareholders over the signature of J. V. Clyne, chairman and chief executive officer, said the income represented $1.56 per share, compared with $1.50 per share on income of $31,237,821 for the same period a year ago.

Sales for the period totalled $360,972,914 compared with $327,959,623 in the 1965 period, an increase of $33,013,291.

After deducting depreciation depletion and amortization and current income taxes, the company's earnings before deferred income taxes were $47,100,000 compared with $38,800,000 in the same period a year ago, the statement said.

Mr. Clyne said the general pattern for the year to date reflected good markets at the start of the year with weaknesses developing in the last few months, particularly in lumber and plywood.

"The average prices of all major products except pulp were higher in the current nine months as compared with the similar period in 1965," he said. "In newsprint, the demand has continued strong. Volumes of sales of newsprint and pulp were higher than last year but plywood sales fell off sharply in the third quarter. The volume of sales in lumber was about the same as last year"

Argentine Peso Rate Devalued

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—The Argentine peso was devalued today to between 245 and 255 pesos to the dollar from a previous rate of between 215 and 218.

The central bank issued the new official exchange rate after Argentine President Juan Carlos Ongania announced a devaluation of more than 20 per cent for the inflation-pressed peso.

'86.62% Paid in Claims'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A car insurance group released figures Monday showing that 86.62 per cent of money collected in premiums in 1964 was paid out in claims.

This left only 13.38 per cent of earnings for administration, costs and profits, resulting in "bad losses" by companies in the group, the brief stated.

The brief to the royal commission on automobile insurance was prepared by the Independent Insurance Conference, which represents 32 companies in B.C. handling 22.8 per cent of the car insurance business.

The brief said the minimum allowable expense percentage recommended by the Canadain governmental statistical agency was 33 per cent. Therefore, the brief said, IIC members were forced to raise rates drastically in 1965 and 1966.

THINGS TRUSTEES WON'T DISCUSS . . .

Greater Victoria has 1,600 school children in classes where there are more than 40 pupils per teacher.

The Chant Royal Commission on education recommended there be no more than 30 to 35 children per teacher to ensure adequate teaching and learning situations.

In Greater Victoria there are 8,000 children in classes of more than 35.

This is a subject Greater Victoria Teachers' Association wishes to include in negotiation talks with Greater Victoria School Board.

But the board demands that negotiations be limited to matters pertaining to salaries.

The teachers are being allowed no voice on this important subject. The trustees say "no".

WHEN TRUSTEES SAY NO TO THE TEACHERS THEY SAY NO TO YOU TOO

Teachers are being denied the right to negotiate their basic working conditions. Overcrowded classes are difficult for teachers. And they are crippling to pupils.

This is just one example of why teacher-board negotiations are important to every parent. A better standard of living for teachers is only part of the story. Teacher negotiations affect the children of the community.

The trustees wish to talk to teachers through a bargaining agent appointed by the British Columbia School Trustees' Association—an appointee from another school district who is not fully familiar with Greater Victoria school problems.

The trustees have refused to discuss vital working conditions and suggest instead that teachers deal with a provincial conciliation officer.

Neither of these proposals suits the teachers. The teachers want to "talk turkey" with the board. Educational progress is at stake.

SHOULD TEACHERS JUST SHUT UP AND TEACH?

The Greater Victoria Teachers' Association feels otherwise. And their stand is backed by the Downey-Hartrick Report.

This report, "A Co-operative Study Of The Greater Victoria School System," was recently prepared for the Greater Victoria Board of School Trustees by the Department of Education Administration, University of British Columbia.

Here are pertinent excerpts:

Page 12—"The evidence is that in the Greater Victoria School System the partnership (of provincial department, school board, supervisory staff, teachers, municipal government and citizenry) has all but disintegrated.

"Indeed, a serious condition of conflict, of distrust and of downright hostility has developed in the system."

Page 12—". . . the district is in danger of becoming known as an undesirable place to work; the recruitment of staff will become correspondingly difficult."

Page 12—"The co-operative effort that is so essential to educational progress is virtually non-existent; lack of progress is the consequence."

Page 21—RECOMMENDATION: That the district cease to regard the minimum standards set by the provincial authority as the level at which local initiative and effort should stop, and, instead, to reach for levels of excellence far beyond."

Page 26—"RECOMMENDATION: That the board recognize the importance of the teacher as a member of the educational partnership—and encourage teachers—individually and collectively—to advance new ideas and suggestions for use by the system."

. . . EXPERTS HIRED BY TRUSTEES SAID THAT.

Greater Victoria Teachers' Association agrees wholeheartedly. They believe teaching conditions are vital to negotiations with the school board.

Teachers have a high sense of responsibility. They want quality education for children. They say that unless the trustees are willing to discuss teaching conditions with teachers, the negotiations are nothing but pretence.

The trustees are not doing what their own studies suggest. Let them sit down and discuss these things with the teachers and make use of the teachers' experience to improve our schools.

(The teachers, at their own expense, will discuss the conditions of teaching and learning in further detail in subsequent articles.)

Hal Malone
LOOKS AT SPORTS

The first thing to establish about the Victoria Steelers before they made their debut in the Pacific Football League is that it was clinically impossible to say how badly they would be clobbered.

On paper they had as much licence to get slaughtered as any team that had ever been organized. They weren't organized. They didn't have a meeting room.

Peter Ohler, the athletic Picasso, conjured up plays on the back of envelopes. At night he took tranquilizers. He had plays but not players. Just bodies. Visions of the PFL Mafia assaulting his innocents plagued him.

Ohler's problem was not will we win, but how much will we lose by. Wives and sweethearts were advised to burn extra-long candles in the window while waiting for loved ones to return—or be carried from—the battlefields.

The club motto was not "Onward" but "Please check your belongings before leaving the dressing room after a game. The janitor is not responsible for returning arms and legs."

Ringing Truth in Their Singing

If Ohler seemed cautious about the Steelers' immediate future there was a reason. Anne Boleyn had more to be hopeful about before Henry the VIII pushed the axe button. Her season lasted only one play.

Steelers' first outing at Eugene confirmed Ohler's wildest hallucinations. The game was called at 42-6. Not because of time. Sacred Heart Hospital didn't have any more beds. Or plasma.

On the bus ride home litter cases composed a new lyric: "Hail! Hail! The gang's not all here." They meant every word of it.

If the verse was bad, the worst was yet to come. Seattle undressed them. Portland had its fun. So did Eugene the second time around.

Ohler was crowned at Edmonds. Not one of those red jobs reserved for Kings of Ethiopia. Just a good solid concussion.

Inevitably some of the finger-painters and anti-violence souls vanished into oblivion. A group of old Lions, feeling there was still some purr in the tank, joined the club, by name Ron Morris, Gary Schwertfeger and Jerry Janes.

They were a plus. Ohler didn't have to tell them when you put the helmet on or that the face mask is supposed to be at the front.

Lincoln Has All the Accessories

Major Lincoln breezed in. Portland couldn't find a place for him. Ohler did. Lincoln figured to be class goods. After all Ford named a car after him.

This Lincoln has overdrive and syncromesh and all the power options, a worthy backfield contemporary for Bill Taylor and Jim Pannell.

Up front where life is dangerous if not with the early Steelers suicidal, people came to stop the enemy and afford Ohler hopes of living to collect the pension.

Lutz Keller, a baby-faced destroyer, came from Calgary along with Wayne Conrad and Bob Stockall. UBC contributed John Reykdall, who had a quick coffee with Toronto Argos.

They joined the Purple Hearts, Bob Boyd and Bob Coutts and Leo Kozak. If Kozak slings beer the way he discards opposing linemen patrons in a city refreshment parlor see the best free show in town.

And then Joe Flood came into the Steelers' parlor.

He had inquired at Seattle, but Ramblers' coach Mel MacKay said, "We're loaded. You can try." Flood called Edmonds' Don Safford. Thanks, but no thanks.

The Steelers don't throw anything back, not even old models with heavy mileage.

After the Changes Came an 'Amen'

All the new faces prompted Ohler to change his technique. No longer did he take the snap and begin "The Lord's Prayer". He actually had leisure time to look for receivers. He must have felt like a man who can walk on water.

The change from desperation to determination, from "Oh, Hell" to "Give 'em Hell," was first noticeable against Seattle 10 days ago.

Steelers traded insults and across-the-teeth chops with the Ramblers, a conglomeration of university grads who majored in hard knocks. The Steelers led the league's only unbeaten team 2-0.

But Seattle's depth runs right off the end of the bench—their water boy even has muscles.

Because too many people had to play offence, defence, drive the bus and sell programs, they ultimately took the gas.

Saturday they put it all together against Edmonds. Their display was as classical as the flamed-up fan in the stands who fell backwards down four steps. Unshaken, unvaunted, he not only didn't hurt himself but more important he didn't break the medicine bottle which made the trip with him.

Last, But Not Least, Flash Flood . . .

Ohler passed with slide-rule precision. Janes caught every one of seven passes like a man out to disprove the theory that he was born with margarine hands.

Morris fielded six throws; his one-on-one moves against a defensive back were right out of the flanker's manual.

Lincoln and Pannell churned the freeways with a rare instinct for going where the traffic was sparse. Boyd and Schwertfeger, Kozak and Keller stuck their heads into other people's business.

And Flash Flood engulfed the Warriors' line.

Joe is only five-ten but he enters the ring at 240, most of it amidships.

He is somewhat intimidating in the three-point stance. With his protruding porch, he almost puts the Steelers offside before the ball is snapped.

In the dressing room he sat there, a perspiring panda, and asked the doctor to give him something "to help me sleep."

"The novocaine wear off?" the doctor asked, handing him some pills.

"Yeah," the Flash said. "By halftime."

Then he sat down and an assistant trainer took the steel brace off his right knee, the one with the torn ligaments.

Amid the din, Orval Bray, a blithe spirit who had been in for four plays, stepped on a pile of soggy towels and said: "I think I'll get corned. I don't have any special reason. Four plays. But I'm happy. That's enough reason."

In a corner, Ohler smiled.

He had a right to.

They all did.

LEAFS LEAVING . . . . . . FOR CALIFORNIA

Just a Scare and Bruise

The Big Bear's ankle is feeling a mite tender, but Sandy Hucul will be with the Victoria Maple Leafs this week when they charge into California for four Western Hockey League skirmishes.

Leaf coach Frank Mario received a king-sized scare Saturday night when a hard shot banged Hucul on the right ankle during Victoria's 3-3 sawoff with Oakland Seals.

Big Sandy stayed home for X-rays Sunday while the Leafs moved into Portland for another tying effort 1-1.

The report came back to Mario Monday. Hucul's ankle is "badly bruised" but "no break."

If the ankle responds to treatment as trainer Gord Marchant expects, Hucul will be back in the lineup for Wednesday's game in Los Angeles.

Leafs also face the Blades on Friday before moving into Oakland's sparkling new arena for two weekend games. Victoria's next home game will be against Vancouver Canucks on Nov. 16

Rough Riders Say No To Lions' Suggestion

OTTAWA (CP)—Ottawa Rough Riders have rejected an offer from British Columbia Lions to provide coaching help as a replacement for Bill Smyth, who died Sunday of a blood clot.

The Rough Riders turned down the offer, made by Lions general manager Herb Capozzi and Monday named five members of their own defensive squad to take over as "leaders sub-coaches."

They'll assist head coach Frank Clair as the Riders prepare for a two-game, total-point series against Hamilton Tiger Cats for the Eastern Football Conference championship. The series opens Sunday in Hamilton with the return game in Montreal the following weekend.

PLAY IN MONTREAL

The Rough Riders, unable to use their home field because Ottawa's Lansdowne Park is undergoing renovations, will play the return contest at the sports stadium on the Expo 67 site in Montreal.

The five players taking on coaching duties are Joe Poirier and Bob O'Billovich, who will handle defensive halfbacks, Ken Lehmann and Billy Joe Booth, who will coach linemen, and Gene Gaines, who will serve as over-all defensive coach.

"Everyone on the club realizes the unfortunate death of Bill Smyth has left us without a defensive coach," said Clair. "I'm sure the boys will do their jobs."

NO PRACTISE

The Riders, who finished first in the EFC standings and earned a bye into the final, did not practise Monday because of Smyth's death.

But Al Bruno, an assistant coach to Clair, scouted the Tiger-Cats Sunday in their 24-14 victory over Montreal Alouettes in the sudden-death semi-final and came away unimpressed.

The Ticats, defending Grey Cup champions, were unable to dredge up much offence and managed only eight first downs, one after half time.

SORE FOOT

Hamilton came out of the game relatively free of injuries. The most serious mishap was to the right foot of place-kicker Don Sutherin, who booted 11 points and was one of the few outstanding performers offensively.

Someone stepped on the foot and it was taped, but Sutherin said the injury was not serious and expects to be ready for Ottawa.

Bruno reported the Riders in good physical shape and didn't think the two-week layoff since the end of the schedule will hurt the club.

Green Dye Dressing On Course

TOKYO (CP) — Tournament officials are going over the yellow-burned fairways with green dye to put Yomiuri golf course into top shape for the Canada Cup matches which begin Thursday.

Usually favorable November weather has the course in perfect condition, except for the yellowing of the Korai grass and the dye-sprinklers are taking care of that.

George Knudson of Toronto and Frank Fowler of Calgary carry Canada's colors in the tournament which has drawn two-man teams from 36 countries.

The United States pair of Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer are favored. Then comes the South African team — Gary Player and Harold Henning. South Africa is defending team champion. Player is defending individual champ.

SHOTS MUST BE ACCURATE

Knudson, the Winnipeg-born belter now a teaching pro at Toronto's Oakdale Golf and Country Club, and Fowler, who plays out of the Canyon Meadows course in Calgary, face a course that puts a premium on long, accurate hitting.

Par for the 6,962 yards is 72, but tournament director Fred Corcoran says that the individual title will go eight under par with the team title 10 under.

The Yomiuri course has no blind second shots, but the toughest hole — the 541-yard, par-5 sixth — could prove a snare with its peculiar S shape.

BERNIE FALONEY . . . once a playoff hero

CUT IN OFFING?

Faloney's Future Clouded in Doubt

MONTREAL (CP) — Coach Darrell Mudra of Montreal Alouettes today refused to close the door on the possible return of veteran quarterback Bernie Faloney to the club next season.

Murdra said some remarks attributed to him after Montreal's 24-14 loss to Hamilton Tiger-Cats in Civic Stadium Sunday in the Eastern Football Conference semi-final had been misconstrued.

Stories in Toronto and Montreal newspapers quoted Mudra as saying Faloney will not return under his current $37,500 annual contract. The veteran has one more year to go on a three-year contract.

Mudra denied this and said that while he feels it is ridiculous to have his club's highest paid ball player sitting on the bench, the issue can be resolved "if Bernie can start for us next season . . . then we'll pay the salary,"

"Unless he can become a start we won't pay him the salary," Mudra said. "We can't pay any player who doesn't play.

MUST PRODUCE

"What I said in effect was that if Faloney's on the bench next season, we won't pay him that money next year, but that if he produces for us we'll be glad to pay him that salary."

Mudra said the club may decide to attempt to trade Faloney if he can't come up to the No. 1 quarterbacking job. Faloney lost the starting quarter-backing job to George Bork late in the regular season.

Mudra denied there was any dispute between himself and Faloney Saturday night over the latter's decision to leave the Als' motel at Burlington, Ont., contrary to a curfew.

Ted Workman, co-owner of the Als, said he had no comment to make on the matter as the club management and coaching staff has not met to discuss plans for next year.

Faloney, 35, is an 11-year veteran in CFL ranks with Edmonton Eskimos, Hamilton Ticats and the Alouettes.

East Falling Behind West In Football . . .

TORONTO (CP) — Senator Keith Davey, commissioner-elect of the Canadian Football League, says minor football in the East has fallen behind its Western Canadian counterpart.

"My most major football problems are in the East, particulary Toronto and Montreal," he said at a Board of Trade meeting here Monday.

"In the West, football is vital. I attended a junior game in Calgary. It was played in a stadium, I had a seat, there were printed programs and a fine halftime show."

Davey said Canadian professional football must act more like a business and look less like a business, which is not the case now.

He said he intends to spend some time in the United States soon to view college and National Football League games, and has an appointment with NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle to further his education of the sport.

Bruin Coach Forced To Do Some Juggling

NEW YORK (AP) — Rookie coach Harry Sinden is still briskly shuffling his lines to find what's best for Boston Bruins.

He's got two changes for tonight's National Hockey League game against the Rangers in New York.

Captain Johnny Bucyk will team with Pit Martin and Ron Stewart in one line. Murray Oliver and John McKenzie are slated to work with Ross Lonsberry or Bob Dillabough.

The Bruins have lost veteran goaltender Eddie Johnston for at least a week due to an eye injury suffered in Sunday's game with Chicago when a stick was jammed in his left eye.

The eyeball was bruised and Johnston must stay in bed with the eye bandaged until Wednesday.

The Bruins will recall Gerry Cheevers from the Oklahoma City Blazers as backup goal tender for at least the next two games.

Sinden said the joining of Bucyk, Stewart and Martin is aimed at more scoring punch. The Bruins scored seven goals in the last four games.

Dodgers Show Batting Power

OKAYAMA, Japan (AP) — The touring Los Angeles Dodgers pounded out 16 hits, including two home runs, as they trounced the Japanese Yomiuri Giants-Nankai Hawks combined team 10-2 Tuesday.

A crowd of 20,000 saw outfielder Ron Fairley belt a two-run homer in the third inning, his fourth of the current Japan tour. The hit gave the Dodgers an early 4-0 lead.

The victory gave the Dodgers an 8-4 record in their 18-game goodwill series in Japan.

BROWN TO HELP CASS

Tips From a Fullback

HOUSTON (AP) — Cassius Clay took a layoff from the ring today as he awaited arrival of Jimmy Brown, former Cleveland Browns' fullback, who Clay said will "shove me around" in preparation for challenger Cleveland Williams.

The heavyweight champ knocked down 235-pound Ben Turnbow in Monday's workout. Then he got on the telephone with 40 reporters to announce that Brown will be in Houston Wednesday to "show me some inside work he used in pro football . . . things that'll make me stronger in case I get penned up."

Williams the Houston figher due to meet Clay next Monday night in the Astrodome, skipped ring work Monday.

In a sparring session at the ranch of his manager, Hugh Benbow, Williams hit the canvas Sunday during a workout with Ben Black, who surprised him with a straight right.

Clay knocked down Turnbow after taking a few jabs to the chin, delivering the big punch late in the second round after a dancing exhibition.

The swift right sent Turnbow over sidewise.

ONE-TIME manager of Victoria entry in Western International Baseball League, Dick (Kewpie) Barrett, died Monday in Seattle. He was 60.

GEORGE THIRD CHOICE OF BRITISH BOOKMAKER

LONDON (AP) — A leading British bookie made American entries Assagai and Tom Rolfe top choices today for the Washington Memorial International horse race at Laurel Park Friday.

Betting by bookie William Hill offered Canada's George Royal at 6-to-1.

The odds: Assagai, 3-1; Tom Rolfe, 9-2; David Jack, England, 5-1; George Royal, 6-1; Silver Shark, France, 6-1; Benistoun, France, 8-1; Anilin, Russia, 16-1; Vasco de Gama, France, 33-1; Folio and Socopo, Venezuela, 11-1.

The Vancouver-owned George Royal worked out Monday on the grass course and his effort delighted trainer Don Richardson. George covered the mile in 1:46.

"I could have let him run faster," said Richardson, "but this is just what I wanted."

COULD BE!

Ticat Movies Horror Show?

HAMILTON (CP)—Hamilton Tiger-Cats are going to the movies today but for some players it may be a horror show.

The Ticats will view films of their 24-14 victory over Montreal Alouettes Sunday in the Eastern Football Conference sudden-death semi-final.

And there, in black and white, the Tiger-Cats can recall a game in which they picked up a total offence of 177 yards. They gained only one first down in the second half for a total of 24 yards rushing and 82 over-all. Passing total was 95 yards.

After the movies it's back to work for the Ticats, who had Monday off, as they start preparing for a two-game, total points EFC final with Ottawa Rough Riders.

Riders, who finished first in the EFC, have elected to play the first game here Sunday.

HAD NO EXCUSES

Coach Ralph Sazio of Hamilton didn't offer any excuses for Sunday's offensive total, saying: "I thought we handled the Alouettes as we had expected.

"The score shouldn't have been as close as it was. I feel this way about it. We are a better ball club than they are."

But Sazio agreed that the Tiger-Cats should have been more industrious in the second half. They led 13-0 at the half and lengthened it to 20-0 in the third quarter before Montreal got rolling when Ted Page intercepted a pass and scored.

"I thought we should have generated more power in the second half. There was a reluctance on our part to put the ball in the air and give them a chance to get back in the game."

Asked about Hamilton's chances against Ottawa, Sazio said the Ticats are "better balanced".

"We're the stronger club and we'll provide the better competition in the final series." He said Montreal had a "weighted" defence and "I don't think they are a good enough ball club defensively to go into the final against Rough Riders."

Hamilton came out of Sunday's game relatively free of injuries. The most serious mishap was to the right foot of place-kicker Don Sutherin, who booted 11 points and was one of the outstanding performers.

VICTORIA HOPES of acquiring Brit Selby (above) as replacement for injured Larry Keenan were quashed today with announcement that Toronto Maple Leafs sent starry youngster to Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League. Also going to Vancouver from NHL team is Barry Watson.

Trap Tarkenton? Try Using a Net!

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP)—Fran Tarkenton of Minnesota Vikings lingers like a bad dream in Green Bay.

"He must be the greatest," said tackle Ron Kostelnik, a member of the Packers' front four that met almost total frustration at Tarkenton's hands in the 20-17 defeat Sunday.

"We'll have to go after him with butterfly nets," said Phil Bengtson, the architect of the Green Bay defence—the most effective in the National Football League this season.

Tarkenton has been good against the Packers before, but never as good as he was Sunday.

"It's a good thing we have a wide-lens camera or we could never follow that guy and his receivers," said Bengtson. "He's simply uncanny."

Bengtson said the Packers knew what to expect. "We alerted our people about his techniques, but he came up with an outstnding game, the best I've seen against us," the coach said. "We only got to him once."

Tarkenton completed 16 of 26 passes for 172 yards while rushing for another 22 yards.

He was at his best on third down plays. Eight different times he ran or passed for first down in the critical situation.

While Tarkenton was impeccable, so were his team-mates, who got off 19 more plays from scrimmage than the Packers, and avoided handing the ball over on either fumbles or interception.

ALSO A CENTRE . . . . . . LOST TO ST. LOUIS

Cards Lose Ace Quarter

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Coach Charley Winner of St. Louis Cardinals is doing a quick repair job on his National Football League Eastern Division leaders because, he says, injuries have knocked out "the hub of our offence."

Quarterback Charley Johnson, who holds four career team passing records, is lost for the season with a torn right knee ligament. He undergoes knee surgery today.

Centre Bob DeMarco, who played in the NFL's 1965 Pro Bowl, will be sidelined for at least four weeks with a partially torn right knee ligament.

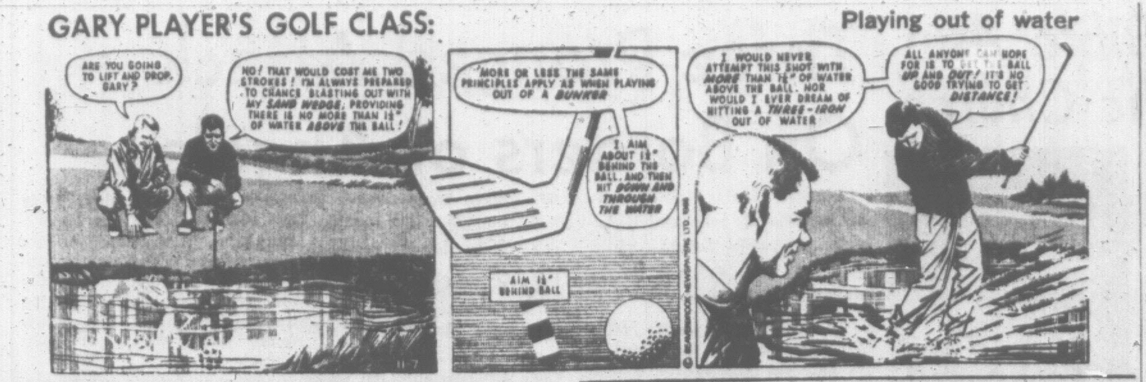
"It can't help but hurt when you lose the two men who put the ball in play for you," said Winner. "But we will be working this week to remedy the situation before the game next Sunday with the Steelers at Pittsburgh."

Johnson and DeMarco were hurt in the 20-17 St. Louis victory Sunday over the Giants in New York.

Irv Goode, a regular offensive guard who usually centres on extra points and field goal attempts, came in for DeMarco.

Second - string quarterback Terry Nofsinger entered the game after Johnson's injury.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS: Playing out of water



ARE YOU GOING TO LIFT AND DROP, GARY?
NO! THAT WOULD COST ME TWO STROKES! I'M ALWAYS PREPARED TO CHANCE BLASTING OUT WITH MY SAND WEDGE, PROVIDING THERE IS NO MORE THAN 1½" OF WATER ABOVE THE BALL!
MORE OR LESS THE SAME PRINCIPLES APPLY AS WHEN PLAYING OUT OF A BUNKER
I AIM ABOUT 1½" BEHIND THE BALL, AND THEN HIT DOWN AND THROUGH THE WATER AIM 1½" BEHIND BALL
I WOULD NEVER ATTEMPT THIS SHOT WITH MORE THAN 1½" OF WATER ABOVE THE BALL. NOR WOULD I EVER DREAM OF HITTING A THREE-IRON OUT OF WATER
ALL ANYONE CAN HOPE FOR IS TO GET THE BALL UP AND OUT! IT'S NO GOOD TRYING TO GET DISTANCE!

Wings' Centre Scoring Leader

MONTREAL (CP) — Norm Ullman, Detroit Red Wings' dependable playmaker, gained first place in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race when he scored a goal and assisted on two others in the Wings' three games last week.

Official statistics released today show the veteran centre with 14 points, two more than his closest rival, Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks.

NORM ULLMAN . . . fast getaway

Ullman leads in assists with an even dozen to go with two goals. Mikita has scored four goals and assisted on eight others.

Paul Henderson of Detroit, the league's top scorer with eight goals, and Bobby Rousseau of Montreal Canadiens are tied in third spot with 11 points.

Henderson, the left winger with the right-hand shot, also has three assists while Rousseau has scored four times and assisted on seven. Rousseau led all scorers last week with a goal and four assists.

HAS 10 ASSISTS

Phil Goyette of New York Rangers hasn't scored a goal this season, but his 10 assists put him fifth in the scoring. Dennis Hull of Chicago, Bobby's younger brother, is tied with Floyd Smith of Detroit in sixth spot. Both have nine points, one more than Don Marshall and Rod Gilbert of New York.

The Toronto goaltenders took over the lead in that department with Johnny Bower, Sawchuk and Bruce Gamble combining for a 2.25 goals-against average.

Gary Bergman of Detroit is the individual penalty leader with 22 minutes spent and his club has recorded 108 minutes in nine games to lead the teams in this department.

The leaders:

RALSTON BEATEN

Brazil Upsets U.S. Net Squad

PORTO ALEGRE (AP)—Jose Adison Mandarino of Brazil upset top-ranked American, Dennis Ralston, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4, 6-1 in the final match Monday and gave Brazil a 3-2 victory over the United States in the Davis Cup inter-zone tennis semi-final.

The victory climaxed an uphill struggle for the Brazilians, who entered the day's play at a 2-1 disadvantage in the best-of-five series.

Brazil's Thomas Koch regained top form and crushed tense, 19-year-old Cliff Richey of Dallas, Tex., 6-1, 7-5, 6-1 to make the score 2-2.

Richey's loss put it squarely up to Ralston.

But Mandarino was more than a match for him.

Stroking calmly and beating the tall Ralston regularly in volleys, the 25-year-old Brazilian wore down the American veteran.

The victory clinched Brazil a spot in the inter - zone finals where they will play the winner of a match between West Germany and India next week.

Brazil is heavily favored to win that match and advance to the challenge round against Australia.

On Sunday, the U.S. team took a 2-1 lead when Ralston and Arthur Ashe combined for a 7-5, 6-4, 4-6, 6-2 doubles win over Koch and Mandarino.

Tag and Boxing On Rasslin' Card

Tag-team champions Dutch Savage and Don Jardine defend their professional wrestling laurels at Memorial Arena tonight at 8:15 p.m.

Challenging them will be Rene Goulet and Don Denucci.

John Tolos and Don Leo Johnathan will be pulling no punches as they don boxing gloves to settle their differences in unusual fashion. Eric Froelich takes on Bad Boy Shields and Paul Jones goes up against Paul DeGaulle in other events.

Canada Enters

ZURICH (AP) — Canada and 77 other countries have entered the 1968 Olympic soccer tournament. A meeting to determine the form of the preliminary competition will be held here Nov. 16.

Only 16 countries can compete in the championship tournament at Mexico City in October, 1968.

Arnie Feels Long Courses 'Ridiculous'

NEW YORK (AP) — Arnold Palmer, one of the game's longest hitters, says extremely long courses are ridiculous.

"A golf course should have versatility," the millionaire professional from Latrobe, Pa., added in a critique on golf course architecture.

Writing in Golf Magazine, Palmer said architects are making courses increasingly difficult, worrying more about a professional or a good club player tearing them up than considering the average golfer.

"I notice we have slipped away from the interesting short par-three holes on which you have to play precision iron shots to get the ball on the green and close to the pin," he said. "Many of today's architects have gone to the long, drab par threes that force the average player to use his woods every time."

The all-time leading money winner in golf said another private peeve was water hazards that are so tough that they lack character.

WEST HAM ERUPTS

Celtic Claims Cup

GLASGOW (Reuters) — Glasgow Celtics, the reigning Scottish First-Division soccer champions, beat Partick Thistle 4-0 to win the Glasgow Cup Monday night.

Inside left Bobby Lennox scored three goals as Celtic displayed all its attacking flare. Outside right Chalmers shot Celtic ahead after 11 minutes.

Celtic, leading 4-0 at half-time, eased up and easily repelled Partick's few raids on its goal.

This was Celtic's second cup success within two weeks. It defeated Glasgow Rangers 1-0 to win the Scottish League Cup Oct. 29.

Meanwhile, in London, West Ham's world cup aces turned in a tremendous offensive display to beat Leeds United 7-0 in the third round of the English League Cup soccer competition.

Geoff Hurst, scorer of three goals in England's World Cup final triumph against West Germany, scored three against Leeds. So did World Cup colleague Martin Peters. The other West Ham goal came from John Sissons.

PARTICIPATION ASKED

Old Country Support For American League

LONDON (AP)—The English Football League said Monday it is trying to persuade English clubs to take part in a summer league in the United States.

Alan Hardaker, league secretary, announced the move as part of a drive to help the North American Soccer League one of two rival organizations trying to establish soccer as a major sport in America.

Hardaker said he had written to all the 44 English first and second division clubs asking whether any of them were interested in the idea.

NASL officials have been visiting England and having talks with the English League about organization problems.

The NASL wants to stage a league tournament next summer, involving teams from Europe and South America, to get the American public interested in soccer. The idea is for each competing team to be based in a different city.

The rival organization — the National Professional League—aims to start a league of American teams next May but is not yet officially recognized. The NASL is the body accepted by the United States Football Association and the World Soccer Federation.

WING BACK FOR SOCCER

APPLEDORE, England (CP) — A Devon soccer club uses carrier pigeons to take results back to fans when playing away from home.

Club secretary John Ladlow explained: "We are a small club and telephone calls to fans are expensive."

Donald Cummins Named President

Members of the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association have elected Donald Cummins as their new president.

Cummins, a 22-year-old driver and car-builder who has been a member of the club for four years, succeeds Reg Midgley, who did not stand for re-election.

Other officers include vice-president John Biggs, secretary Ron Mayell, treasurer Lawrence Fox and directors Bing Foster, Hugh Burkmar and Jack Lang.

FIGHT RESULTS

WALPOLE, Mass. — Frank Depaula, 173, Jersey City, N.J., stopped Billy Crowder, 170, Petersburg, Va., 2.

PARIS—Jacques Marty, 161, France, stopped Ernie Bulford, 154, Memphis, Tenn., 7.

LAS VEGAS, Nev.—Paul Armstead, 146, Los Angeles, outpointed Johnny Brooks, 145, Henderson, Nev., 10.

Gardens Shows Profit Decrease

TORONTO (CP)—Maple Leaf Gardens Ltd. of Toronto had a profit of $829,993 for the year ending Aug. 31 compared to $920,898 in the same 1965 period.

In an annual report, the company, which owns Maple Leaf Gardens and operates the Toronto Maple Leafs hockey club, said the number of sports and entertainment attractions available during the year declined and reduced rental incomes.

WITNESS TESTIFIES

Suspect Not Interested In Talk of Wife's Illness

VANCOUVER (CP) — A crown witness testified Monday that when she asked Rene Castellani what he thought was causing the illness which eventually killed his wife, he replied: "When a house burns down, I don't look for the cause, I look for how to build a new one."

The testimony came from Mrs. Sheila Luond, sister-in-law of the late Mrs. Castellani who died in hospital July 11, 1965. Castellani is charged with capital murder in the death of his wife and the crown is attempting to prove he administered doses of arsenic to her while she was in hospital.

UNUSED FOOD

Mrs. Luond said Castellani made the remark outside his wife's hospital room shortly after he had insisted that unused food he had unsuccessfully tried to feed his wife be flushed down the toilet.

Mrs. Luond said that on July 6. five days before the death of Mrs. Castellani, she visited the hospital earlier than usual and found the accused attempting to feed his wife from a bowl of ground meat and beans, despite Mrs. Castellni's protests.

"I told him that he should put the bowl down," said Mrs. Luond.

"I reached over," she said, "and took the bowl and put it on my side of Mrs. Castellani's bed. Then Rene said 'why not throw it down the toilet.'?"

SILLY TO FUSS

"I asked him why. I said the nurses would be coming in and they would take it away. He kept saying to throw it down the toilet and I said I thought it was silly to fuss over this," she said.

"I tried to ignore him but he kept on saying to throw it away. So I just did it to keep him quiet."

The trial continues.

THIEF TAKES $2,000 MASK FROM MUSEUM

SEATTLE (AP)—Theft of a $2,000 Vancouver Island Indian mask from the Burke Memorial State Museum on the University of Washington campus was reported to police Monday.

Museum authorities said the carved wooden Kwakiutl mask was discovered missing from a wall display sometime between noon Oct. 29 and 5 p.m. Oct. 31.

They described the mask as 11 inches high, 8¾ inches wide and 4½ inches deep. It is painted with black graphite, has protruding red lips and has only one ear, which is painted red. It has human hair on the forehead and chin and eyebrows of bear fur.

Common Bible Aim Of Catholic Church

REV. ABBOTT

. . . to direct study

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican announced today Pope Paul has given orders for the Roman Catholic Church to work with Protestants, Anglicans and Orthodox Catholics to produce a common Bible for all Christians.

The announcement said the Pope, in implementing a decision of the Vatican ecumenical council, had entrusted the task to the Vatican Secretariat of Christian Unity.

Direction of the study will be under Rev. Walter Abbott, a native of Boston.

The various Catholic conferences of bishops around the world have been sent questionnaires asking information on the "needs, possibilities and difficulties of each area with regard to Bible translation and distribution," the announcement added.

A common Bible for all the world's Christians has long been a dream of the ecumenical movement to bring the churches together. Approval of the concept of a common Bible at the ecumenical council that ended last December was a victory for progressive bishops of the Catholic Church.

Three-Pronged Attack On Borders of Angola

LISBON (AP)—Rebel activity has sharply increased in Angola, Portugal's richest African territory, with a three-pronged attack on its borders.

The calm which set in after Portugal quashed the rebellion of 1961 has been broken by the sound of mortars on the Zambian frontier the chatter of modern machine-guns in the northern enclave of Cabinda and by more frequent ambushes in the unruly north.

Portugal has named a tough 46-year-old lieutenant colonel to take charge. Camilo R. Vaz, who in 1961 commanded an infantry regiment of Portugal's 40,000 Angola troops, takes office as governor this month.

Vaz will be directly responsible to Premier Antonio Salazar for the fortunes of Angola, an area that yields oil, diamonds, coffee, sugar tobacco and cotton.

Vaz's toughest military problem lies in the eastern part of Angola, a wedge of rolling hills and small brush jutting into Zambia.

Rebels have made incursions deep into Angola.

The terrorists are apparently agitating along the British-owned Benguela railway, which runs from the port of Lobito to the heart of the Congo-Katanga district through Zambia. It is the shortest outlet for copper, aluminum, manganese, cobalt, zinc and iron ores of the region. Portuguese officials say the rebels will fall short of cutting the railway since such action would handicap their base country Zambia.

Teacher Pay Talks Nearing Arbitration

VANCOUVER (CP)—With but a week left before teachers 1967 salary scale disputes go to arbitration Nov. 15, only one in six of the province's teachers know what his or her salary will be next year.

Three more districts settled during the weekend and Monday, bringing the total to 13 out of 83, covering 16 per cent of the province's 17,000 teachers.

Merritt settled for an increase of 9 per cent over last year's salary scales, Armstrong for an increase of 8.1 per cent and Smithers for 7.3 per cent.

All teachers who cannot settle with their local school boards by next Tuesday must go to arbitration procedure which must arrive at the 1967 salary schedule by Dec. 31.

VICTORIA, B.C., TUESDAY, NOV. 8, 1966—PAGE 17

Arthur Mayse

Whatever else one can say about Mr. Diefenbaker, he is a Canadian landmark, and has been these many years. But time erodes, and the man who will fight to retain his Conservative leadership at Ottawa this long weekend is far removed from the Chief who swept his party to a landslide victory four federal elections past.

Mr. Diefenbaker was fighting for a clearly defined cause then. His powers were at their zenith, his mistakes still to make. Today, with no rational hope of another term as Canada's prime minister and his strength in opposition badly deteriorated, he is struggling with whatever weapons come to hand for his personal political survival.

The change, even to those not of his party, is saddening, and I wish we could be spared the remainder of the tragedy.

Should the strong Tory faction headed by PC Association president Dalton Camp prevail at the Ottawa convention, it is a virtual certainty that Mr. Diefenbaker will be removed as leader by secret ballot next year.

If by some remote chance, his personal magnetism earns him a reprieve, he must contest the next election at an advanced age, with a splintered party's dubious support.

All this adds up to messy political demise for a man who deserves better. I wish—and so today does many another Canadian without regard to party — that Mr. Diefenbaker would spare his people, his country and himself by resigning from the Progressive Conservative leadership before the convention begins.

★

Rarely, in fact, has a man's ethical course been indicated more plainly.

For proof, we have but to look to the state of Tory affairs as it stands today.

The leadership quarrel which was brewing long before Mr. Camp fetched it into full blaze now amounts to a revolution. Through much of Canada, the Progressive Conservative party is split as it never has been before.

Youth will have none of it, a circumstance which, if allowed to continue, means a lingering death by attrition. There are few recruits coming along to replace the gray heads.

It is not enough in politics to be rescued by a platoon of prairie grandmothers, as Dief was when his leadership was challenged in 1965.

True, in the election campaign that followed, he displayed fight and stamina to a degree that startled even the hard-to-impress newsmen of his entourage.

But I don't think even this amazing man can pull off another such rally. The odds against him, within his party and outside it, are too heavy.

★

It is for Mr. Diefenbaker to give his party the chance to re-organize and strengthen itself which it must have if it is to regain decent stature.

Were he to resign now — this very week — the Tories would gain the time they need. A federal election in the Centennial year of 1967 would be most unlikely; in the breathing-space afforded, a successor of sterner metal than Hees, or Fulton, those perennial princes of the Tory court, might be found.

And Canadians of whatever party run to caution; they like to get the heft of a new leader, and are more comfortable when a strong opposition brings checks and balances to their national Parliament.

I am a Liberal in a casual sort of way, but this does not prevent me from considering John Diefenbaker a great Canadian. By resigning now, I think he would guarantee that he would be remembered as such by the country he strove honestly, though not always successfully, to serve.

He brought his party out of the wilderness where it had languished for so many years, to the edge of the promised land. That in itself was an accomplishment which will not be forgotten.

Dief should now yield up the mantle, content himself with the role of elder statesman, and give more time to his fishing.

TWO JAILED FOR THEFT OF LIQUOR

Two of three youths who broke into a downtown restaurant Sunday evening were handed lengthy prison terms today.

"Neither of you has indicated any intention of foresaking your criminal ways," Magistrate Ostler told George Edwards, 24, and Patrick Radford, 19.

Edwards was sentenced to 2½ years in the penitentiary and Radford 18 months in jail.

JUST RELEASED

Both have lengthy criminal records. Radford had just been released from prison a few days ago and Edwards completed a sentence this summer.

The pair, together with Dennis Fontaine, 19, were arrested Sunday night and later admitted stealing five bottles of liquor when they broke into the Coach and Four in Bastion Square.

All three gave a downtown hotel as their address.

Fontaine will be sentenced Nov. 18 after Magistrate Ostler has studied a probation officer's report.

The trio first asked for a week remand when they appeared in court Monday morning but later made a second court appearance to plead guilty to the breaking, entering and theft charge.

$30,000 For City In One Hour

Victoria's assistant assessor Jack Ozard worked at a $30,000 an hour clip for the city Monday.

But only for the one hour devoted to a land tax sale which saw 13 parcels of land quickly sold to the highest bidders.

During the 60-minute stint as auctioneer Mr. Ozard raised the level of the treasury by $29,179.

Regulations require the handful of bidders pay cash for the property on the day of the sale.

STILL TIME

The sale does not mean the end of the line for delinquent taxpayers. They still have one year in which they can raise the money to pay the taxes and retain their property.

There is a penalty clause.

In addition to raising the tax money the delinquent must also contribute six per cent to reimburse the purchaser at the tax sale.

Vandals Again Hit Washrooms In City Square

For the second night in a row vandals have battered washrooms at Centennial Square.

It was the ladies' turn Monday night.

First a fire was doused in a waste paper receptacle about 7 p.m. Three hours later police found six paper dispensers had been pried open and one torn from a wall.

After the second incident the rooms were locked for the night.

Sunday night damage totaled about $200 when a toilet bowl in the men's washroom was smashed after papers stuffed in it were set alight.

TROUBLE ON TRACK NO. 1

Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson will be in Victoria January 9 to officially start the half-mile-long Confederation train on its journey across Canada.

So will Wayne and Schuster and 150 assorted newsmen from all over the world.

But Victorians won't get a chance to see the famous comedians in action. They're being flown west just to get the visiting newsmen in the right mood for their long cross-country trek.

In fact the average resident of Greater Victoria will be lucky if he gets to board the train and take the one-hour tour through the pages of history.

TROUBLES GROW

Ald. Robert Baird, chairman of the train committee, told the Greater Victoria Centennial Society Monday afternoon the headaches surrounding the visit of the train are growing fast.

"It would appear that Ottawa made a mistake when they assigned the train to Victoria for eight days," he said. "They did that because they thought the population of Victoria was 53,000. Apparently they forgot to take into consideration the population of Greater Victoria which now totals 173,000."

RESERVED

School children will get the reserved spots for the week-long visit — and that may take up all the allotted hours during which the train crew welcomes visitors.

"I don't see how the general public are going to get on the train at all," said society chairman Coun. Art Mebs. "If they just go for the school children, that will take up all the allotted time."

Society secretary Cecil Wyatt said the time allotted to Victoria is totally inadequate.

EXTRA DAY

"At first the train was to come here for only seven days," he said. "They gave us a one-day extension but it is still totally inadequate."

In addition to the general problem of how to shuffle a mass movement of people through the train's corridors the society is faced with two financial problems.

First they must find a volunteer to foot the bill for cleaning up the site where the train will stand — between Selkirk Water and Tyee Road north of Point Ellice Bridge.

Ald. Baird said the Victoria engineering department could probably handle the clean-up but that he couldn't commit the city to an expenditure of several thousand dollars.

WHO PAYS?

Then comes the problem of who foots the bill for transporting 28,000 school children from their schools to the train depot and back to school.

Ald. Baird suggested that "maybe we should adopt some unique method like charging the children 10 cents a head for transportation."

Other society members felt the school board should be prepared to pick up the tab.

The problems were tabled for further study.

PIONEERS, YOU CAN DO BETTER

More than 700 pioneer residents of Greater Victoria have applied for Centennial Medals and the total is expected to top 1,000 during the next week.

Even at that Greater Victoria Centennial Society secretary Cecil Wyatt isn't happy with the response.

"We are sure that we have more pioneers than that in the area," he said. Although we feel we have done well to get a thousand applications there must be many more people who qualify."

To receive the medal applicants must have been in Canada before 1892 and, for local applicants, must now be a resident of B.C.

Deadline for applications is Nov. 17.

To date the society has received 12 applications from Central Saanich, 27 from Esquimalt, 90 from Oak Bay, 128 from Saanich and 464 from Victoria.

Asphalt Lawn For Tattoo!

Centennial Stadium next year may have the only asphalt lawn in Canada.

A delay in seeding the playing field, caused by picketing of the construction site during a recent labor dispute, may make the asphalting necessary.

Art Webb, director of campus planning for the University of Victoria, said the playing field must be ready by next May 20 for the national Centennial Tattoo scheduled to appear there.

If grass seeds were planted now there is little chance the ground would be ready for the tattoo. A wet spring would mean the 1,500 performers would put on their show while up to their ankles in mud.

And, siad Mr. Webb, there is no turf available for planting that would be good enough to stand up to the beating.

COST $3,000

The only answer appears to be to cover the playing field with asphalt, a job that would cost at least $3,000, Mr. Webb said.

He said the asphalt would have to be lifted later and might possibly be used as a base for the running track planned for the stadium.

Mr. Webb said university officials are finding out how much of an area would have to be asphalted to serve the needs of the tattoo. He said it may not be necessary to asphalt the entire field.

THREE-WEEK DELAY

Mr. Webb said the problem was caused by the recent labor dispute involving carpenters. The construction site of the stadium was picketted.

The pickets caused a three-weeks delary in moving dirt for topsoil on the playing field. By the time the dispute was settled and work resumed on the seeding, the rains had started.

Mr. Webb said the field was churned up by trucks and seeding had to be stopped.

The stadium, at a cost of $500,000, is being erected on university property near Gordon Head and Ruby Roads.

MONEY, MONEY, MONEY!

Unlike Goldfinger, the Greater Victoria Centennial Society doesn't have the Midas' touch.

"It seems to me that everything we do loses money," chairman Coun. Art Mebs, Esquimalt, said Monday.

"The RCMP Musical Ride lost money, the Emily Carr play lost money. Everything seems to be a losing venture. We shall just have to come to grips with this."

Coun. Mebs made his comment following a gloomy report which stated that the RCMP Ride ran up a $2,000 deficit and that more of the same could be expected when the final figures are totalled for the Emily Carr play.

Society Calls Help To Avoid 'Real Mess' In Staging Pageant

The Greater Victoria Centennial Society will ask the Intermunicipal Committee to back a 1967 pageant to the tune of $24,000.

Program co-ordinator Gerry Gosley told the society Monday afternoon that $28,000 is left in the budget to stage all events in 1967 but that a pageant would gobble up all but $4,000.

Society member Irene Warren said a locally produced pageant would make money and that no backing would be required.

"We had a budget of $28,000 in 1962 and took in $32,000," she said. "Everyone I talk to say 'let's have one great big event' and the pageant would be that."

OUT ON LIMB

Chairman Coun. Art Mebs said he could see no alternative but to ask the Intermunicipal Committee to back the pageant in case of loss.

"I agree it should make money," he said. "But we can't go out on a limb without backing. If we should lose money we could be in a real mess."

The idea of finding a sugar-daddy in the intermunicipal committee received the cold-water treatment from Saanich council Monday night.

"The last thing we need is an extravagant extravaganza," said Reeve High Curtis.

He made the statement after society representative for Saanich, Coun. Digby Kier, advised council the society will be seeking backing for the big event.

Coun. Kier warned council that to date the general public had not been over-enthusiastic over centennial events.

"We have only been charging minimal amounts, but the people are not coming out," he said. "We have received excellent co-operation from the press, everything is in the paper, but no one comes out."

The society decided to appeal to the intermunicipal committee anyway.

"We can go to them and point out that we shall probably break even and may make money," Coun. Mebs said. "If they will back us we shall go ahead."

Asked following the meeting what would happen if the intermunicipal group turned the request down Coun. Mebs answered. "There just won't be a pageant, that's all."

Esquimalt council has already said it will not contribute any more tax dollars to centennial projects.

Reeve Ray Bryant made the announcement some months ago when the pageant idea touched off a furore in the area because the society was considering bringing in United States producers to run the show and push ticket sales.

Two Charges Against Postal Man

A Saanich postal employee will face two charges alleging mishandling of public money when he appears in central court next week.

William Hughes, postmaster at the Mount Tolmie sub post office at 3611 Shelbourne, had his cases remanded a week for election and plea when he appeared this morning.

One charge, under the Post Office Act, reads in part that Hughes "did wilfully and unlawfully fail to deposit with the Registrar-General of Canada public monies entrusted to him . . ." It claims the offences took place between July 21, 1965, and March 23, 1966.

The other charge, under the Financial Administration Act, was not read.

Fallers Back 'Cleaning Up' At Jordan R.

Fallers returned to work today but a Jordan River logging camp remained closed for the rest of the crew.

"They've just got a little cleaning up to do," said D. F. McNeil, manager of the Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber camp.

"There will be a few men working for a while, a week or so that's all."

He declined comment on the company's sudden closure of the camp Monday or on charges by the International Woodworkers of America, which represents 60 loggers at the operation.

DRIVERS FIRED

Before the camp was closed, six truck drivers were dismissed on separate days for refusing to move their vehicles prior to the stated start of working at 8 a.m. Grievances by the union are pending.

Murray Drew, local IWA president, said he is seeking a meeting with the company later this week.

But if satisfactory arrangements cannot be made, "we're going to apply to the Board of Industrial Relations to issue an order to prosecute the company for not adhering to the act."

The dispute involves hours of work, overtime and the posting of notices regarding working times.

Porteous to Quit School Board In Rural Saanich

Alex Porteous, chairman of the rural Saanich school board, will resign at the end of this year.

Mr. Porteous, who is quitting in the middle of his two-year term, said his resignation is for personal reasons and has nothing to do with school affairs.

Mr. Porteous, executive assistant to Health Minister Martin, was first elected to the seven-member board two years ago for a one-year term. He was re-elected at the end of last year and then became chairman.

His resignation means there will be five vacancies to be filled in this year's elections instead of four.

BUNN HITS BACK

Teachers Called Unrealistic

An angry school trustee today accused Greater Victoria teachers of "ignoring the facts of life" in their current dispute with the school board.

Peter Bunn said teachers are being unrealistic, "and they know it," in asking the board to give a firm commitment that it will reduce the size of classes in the system.

Said Mr. Bunn, chairman of the board's building committee, "Why don't they put pressure on the department of education to let us build the schools we have already planned, instead of trying to harass the school board."

MORE SCHOOLS

Mr. Bunn said teachers know that class sizes can only be reduced if more schools are built. They also know the board cannot get government permission to build two schools which it has already planned and budgeted for.

Mr. Bunn was responding to two telegrams sent to the school board by Greater Victoria Teachers' Association. One message again asked for a commitment by the board to improve teaching conditions and the other repeated a demand that the board resume negotiations with the teachers on a salary dispute.

School board chairman John Porteous refused to comment directly on both requests, which have previously been turned down by the board.

But, he emphasized, "We are not trying to dodge negotiations, we are not trying to say that class sizes shouldn't be reduced, and we are not trying to deny teachers a just salary increase."

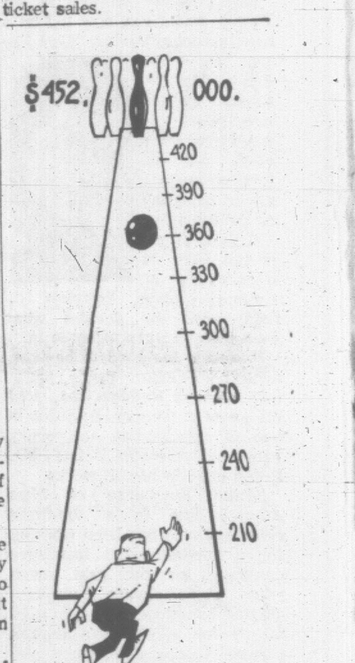
"Negotiations failed to bring about a salary settlement and a government conciliator also failed. Teachers can still ask for conciliation to continue until the statutory time limit runs out."

600 TO QUIT

G.V.T.A. spokesmen have indicated that about 600 teachers will quit the school system if a salary settlement is imposed by arbitration rather than negotiations.

The spokesmen said the teachers would leave at the end of this year and not at the end of the school year, as earlier reported.

Mr. Bunn said that before the board can give teachers any commitment on reduction of class sizes it is necessary to get approval of a school building referendum from the government. It also is necessary for ratepayers to approve the referendum, and government permission is again necessary before contracts for construction can be awarded.



CLOSER to target today by $10,217 was the community chest tenpinner above. His effort (your effort) has now covered 79.6 per cent of the distance toward the $452,000 target. Total collected at noon for Greater Victoria welfare and service agencies was $360,091.

Ask The Times

Q. When did Victoria Maple Leaf star Andy Hebenton's 1000 consecutive league game streak start? D. S.

A. March 8, 1952. Andy was at that time a Victoria Cougars star.

Q. I live in Oak Bay and will vote again in December on fluoridation of water for my municipality. But like many I am unsure. Is fluoridation as good as it proponents say it is? Can it do as much harm as its opponents fear? G. K.

A. According to studies on file, fluoridation indisputably reduces tooth decay in children.

And according to the most comprehensive of these, a two-year report prepared prior to Toronto's fluoridation scheme in 1962, the only proven ill effect is a mottling of tooth enamel if too heavy a concentration of fluorides is accidentally released into a water supply.

Determination Amid the Chaos

This is the first article in a series about artists who live in this area. Some are older and well established, others are young and unknown. But there is an increasing number of them who have come to live on southern Vancouver Island. The series will turn the spotlight on them.

By DESMOND BILL

Marianne Grunert is 18, looks like a model, and intends to be a painter.

At present she lives in one room at the Albany Hotel, passing the time by reading Neitzsche and Dostoevsky or painting herself as she is reflected in a mirror.

Her room is a great chaos: there is a bed, usually piled high with things there is no space for elsewhere, canvases stacked around the walls, a sink, one table covered with paints and brushes, a radiator strewn with clothes, and the mirror. There is no chair.

She sleeps here, eats here, paints here.

She says her boy friend "sees to it that I don't starve."

She is, in fact, the epitome of the struggling artist, although she does not like to think of herself in that way. She is too practical.

She says, matter-of-factly, that she would waste her time going to art school. She spent one semester at Vancouver School of Art but left because she thought it was a place for commercial artists.

'TIES YOU DOWN'

"The students there don't know what they want to do. It is too much of an institution and it ties you down. The courses weren't at all relevant to what I wanted."

Miss Grunert says, "The school teaches everything up to a certain level but everyone comes out the same. It is not personal. There was no room in it for me."

But leaving was a test of her nerve and her seriousness about being an artist.

"I felt safe going to school. It was an easy justification if anyone asked me what I was doing."

Now, if you ask her what she is doing, she'll tell you she is painting.

FAST ANSWER

Trouble is, she is young, unknown and can't tell you she graduated from an approved art school. But she has a fast answer for anyone who questions her credentials.

"People who say I should study at an art school for a few years before trying to earn a living as a painter have not seen the work I do."

She is beginning to get a few commissions, mainly for portraits. She still hesitates to ask a lot of money for paintings often asking only enough to keep herself going in art supplies and groceries for a week.

Her main concern at present is to get enough work to live without having to take a casual job in order to get by.

Says the green-eyed artist: "I want to be a worthwhile painter and the only way to do it is by painting, painting, painting."

Home Ransacked

Thieves ransacked an Oak Bay home overnight but apparently left empty-handed.

Police said entry was forced through the basement at 620 Newport, the home of Mrs. Hazel Wood.

Faulty Fireplace Blamed in Blaze On Fairfield Road

A blaze in a wall behind a fireplace brought firemen to a Fairfield Road residence at about 4 a.m. today.

A department spokesman estimated it would cost about $200 to replace the wall pulled apart to get at the fire in the home of Fred Lang, 962 Fairfield.

A defective fireplace is believed to have started the trouble.

Patients at Mount St. Mary, as well as the staff, volunteers and their friends, are eagerly anticipating the Home's annual bazaar, to be held on Wednesday, November 16, beginning at 1 p.m. Ask anyone you meet in the corridors, they'll tell you it's the event of the year for them! Seen in this group are Sister Mary Anne Cecilia, nursing supervisor; patient Mrs. Lillian Knight and Miss Maureen Taylor, one of the student volunteers at Central Junior Secondary School. During the bazaar, tea will be served from 2 to 4:30 p.m., and stalls will offer everything from home cooking and candy to aprons and a chance in the Lucky Seven contest. Scene of the bazaar? Naturally it's at the Home, on 999 Burdett Avenue.

WHY GROW OLD?

They Can Try New Business Out for Few Working Days

Guess what? Women in the United States can now try on a new business "for size" just like you can a new dress. For instance, a girl can work in publishing for a week or so, then go on to a movie company or TV for a few days then switch over to banking or some other field, until she decides what career she wishes to settle in.

Lowman

It sounds too good to be true, doesn't it? George Rubin, president of Staff Builders Inc., told me about it. This organization is one of the leading temporary personnel services. Let Mr. Rubin explain how it works.

"Take the case of Miss Adams. She is a top-flight secretary who has been working for a medium-sized insurance company for the past seven years. She's always been fascinated by movies but hesitated to try for a job in a motion picture company because she didn't know if it would work out. She came to Staff Builders during her vacation and was sent out for a week's assignment with a major motion picture company.

"Miss Adams decided to stick with insurance. However, other girls try out new fields and like them. We let the gals pick their temporary spots. They can work where and when they want, sometimes selecting specific locations and hours."

If you wish, you can work a couple of nights a week or on Saturday when you are not occupied with your regular job or usual activities.

Not all women who work on temporary assignments do so because they want to find out whether or not they like a certain type work. According to George Rubin, many are housewives who find it exciting to get away from the dishes and household chores for a few hours and still have time for hubby and the kids. Others find it exhilarating to go out on different kinds of jobs from week to week rather than work at the same job all the time.

There is a terrific demand for temporary help in all fields of work. There are temporary personnel services in practically all large cities and in most small towns. There is almost sure to be one near where you live.

Mr. Rubin points out that secretaries and typists are in the greatest demand and therefore have the widest choice. Staff Builders and other similar organizations can place all types of office and data-processing personnel in interesting assignments immediately. Even just a clerk can be sent out right away and learn while she is earning, and move up gradually into better paying jobs.

There are also opportunities for temporary work in the moving picture industry, advertising, publishing, TV, banking, insurance — you name it!

DEAR ABBY . . .

Friend's Hobby Going Too Far!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have a best friend I'll call "Agatha," who has come in for a lot of criticism behind her back because she takes her knitting everywhere she goes. People say Agatha is very rude because she sits in company, knitting away without even picking her head up or saying a word.

What they don't know is that Agatha knits all the time so she won't have to look people in the eye or say anything. You see, she is terribly shy, Abby, and self-conscious.

Please print this so Agatha's friends will understand why she knits all the time, and maybe they will be more understanding and quit criticizing her.

AGATHA'S FRIEND.

DEAR FRIEND: If you really want to help Agatha, tell her to leave her knitting home and to make an effort to contribute something to the conversation. She needs desperately to build her self-confidence. If Agatha continues to use her knitting needles for "crutches," she'll become even more socially handicapped.

DEAR ABBY: Someone gave me what is supposed to be a thoroughbred German police dog. I have the papers on him, but the older this dog gets the more he looks like a mutt. How about this?

WONDERING.

DEAR WONDERING: Don't be deceived by his looks. Maybe he's in the secret service.

DEAR ABBY: I am a recent divorcee with an unusual problem. My husband's parents are the most wonderful people I have ever known. I couldn't love my own parents more than I love "Moms" and "Pops," which is what I've always called my in-laws.

Pops paid for my lawyers when I divorced their no-good son, who must have been a throw-back to the apes, but I won't go into that. I am welcome to visit their ranch any time I wish. As an ex-daughter-in-law, what should I call them? And how do I introduce these grand, generous people who were once my in-laws?

STUMPED.

DEAR STUMPED: Continue to call them "Moms" and "Pops" if you wish. And introduce them by their names. And if, and when, further identification seems necessary, they are your "former in-laws."

Wendy Strong Says Wedding Vows On Birthday of Her Grandmother

Mrs. A. Kater, who was celebrating her 73rd birthday that day, attended the wedding of her granddaughter, Wendy Elaine Strong and Arthur Edward Taylor, recently, in St. John's Anglican Church.

Canon Grahame Baker officiated at the ceremony, uniting the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. A. T. Strong, 2837 Inez Drive, and the son of Mr. A. F. Taylor, Vancouver, and the late Mrs. Taylor. The church was decorated with arrangements of chrysanthemums.

Mr. Strong gave his daughter in marriage and W. Paterson sang "The Lord's Prayer" while the couple signed the register.

The bride's floor-length gown was fashioned of embossed velvet over silk. The sheath dress featured a bateau neckline and sleeves ending in lily points. Back interest was a detachable watteau train which extended back from a bridal bow at the empire waist. Her veil was four-tiered, with three short tiers and one which misted over her train. Her headpiece was a tiara of rhinestones and pearls. She carried a crescent bouquet of yellow roses and stephanotis. Jewelry was a gold caged pearl, the groom's gift, and her mother's blue sapphire ring worn as "something old."

The bride's trio of attendants was dressed in sheath gowns of imported duchesse satin in jade green tones. Overskirts of blue and green chiffon extended from the empire waists. Headpieces were jade-toned bows with matching veils and they carried crescent bouquets of chrysanthemums in shades from yellow to coral.

Mrs. Gordon Davies was matron of honor for her sister. Bridesmatron was Mrs. H. H. Gaunt and bridesmaid, Miss Lynne Shaw.

Richard Brown, Vancouver, was best man, and ushering guests to pews marked with white satin bows were Allan Watters and Gordon Davies.

The bride's mother and sister made and decorated the three-tier wedding cake that centred the head table at the reception in Holyrood House. A. Gray proposed the toast to his niece.

For travelling on honeymoon to Portland, Ore., the new Mrs. Taylor chose a double-breasted suit of French wool in deep coral tone. She complemented her outfit with a matching hat, black patent accessories and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

The couple will make their home at the Ponderosa Apartments, 1184 Esquimalt Road.

ST. SAVIOUR'S BAZAAR

Merriment—Not Marriages At City's Gretna Green

On first impressions, it looked as if Victoria was in for an unlimited rash of weddings, Saturday, with the location chosen being the parish hall of St. Saviour's Church.

In realistic fashion, parishioners had transformed the hall into a colorful facsimile of Gretna Green's blacksmith shop in Scotland, to which hundreds of marriage-bent couples from England had fled without the consent of their parents.

But the Victoria version was all in fun with the prime purpose of ensuring that those attending the church's annual bazaar had a good time and recalled when their church had its beginnings in a blacksmith's shop.

The ring of the anvil set the tone as guests were invited by Miss Connie Bottomley to take a chance at the cake walk which she organized on the hall's stage.

Nothing seemed to be missing in the temporary blacksmith's shop. Even a forge was there to add authenticity. Mrs. J. A. Robertson, who opened the bazaar, had donated most of the 'props' for the occasion.

Mrs. P. Small transformed the hall into Gretna Green through her paintings and posters. One large drawing was of a couple racing along in a horse-drawn carriage, towards the stage.

The entrance to the tea room was made to look like the outside of the Gretna Green blacksmith's shop. Inside, tables were decorated with horse shoes.

HUSBAND AND WIFE

Mr. and Mrs. J. Bottomley convened the affair, which realized more than $435.

"The Blacksmith Trio" provided entertainment. Dressed in blacksmith's aprons, members of this group were Rev. P. V. Atkinson, T. Wilson and K. Mitcham. C. F. Boulter accompanied the group on the piano.

Convening the various stalls were: Gretna Green bakery, Mrs. D. Fyvie; delicatessen, Mrs. T. Wilson; knitting and fancywork, Mrs. G. Crocker; candy and children's stall, Mrs. D. Phelps; white elephant, Mrs. D. Hughes and fish pond, T. Evans.

Mrs. S. Hulford convened the tea and in charge of tickets were Mrs. C. A. Rusk and Mrs. J. M. Tolley.

A corsage of yellow roses was presented to Mrs. Robertson by Ross Smith.

Battle-Scarred Pots Cleaned With This

By Penny Saver

I've been cleaning out my cupboards during the last few days and some of the things that I've found are absolutely unbelievable. Way in the back of one I found a pot that looked like it had been through a bush fire. It was burned and tarnished and looked dreadful. My first impulse was to throw it away, but then the pot itself, I thought, could be used if only it could be cleaned up somehow.

One shop has a type of metal cleaner that did the job perfectly. This special cleaner will make any metal shine like new. Simply apply sparingly with a cloth until a black residue appears, then wash off with a mild soap.

I now have a new pot in my collection. Not only that, my new ally is ideal for cleaning all metal kitchen utensils, storm doors and windows, outdoor furniture, and metal on cars and boats.

Pick up a bottle of this cleaner for 99 cents. It will be a great help with all your metal cleaning.

I don't know about you, but when I'm addressing hundreds of holiday letters, the one thing that makes the job seem longer is writing out the return address on top of each letter. I thought of an idea that will stamp out that problem.

My suggestion is to have a rubber stamp made with your name and address. I found a stamp pad that will be a boon to you. This never needs inking. The surface of these is just over three inches by six inches. Ink comes in colors of black, blue, red, green or purple. Price is $2.25.

What every home needs, especially when parties are starring the calendar, is a beverage index. They are like those telephone indexes that you find the letter of the name you require, then press the tab at the bottom. These have a magnetic catch and sell for $9.50.

Give Penny a call at 382-3131 if you want to know where she shopped for these items.

Miss Jacqueline Mary Burling, 19-year-old daughter of Major H. G. Burling and Mrs. Burling, 1724 St. Anne Street, will be among the debutantes to be presented to His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. George R. Pearkes at the Debutante Ball, to be held in the Empress Hotel on Wednesday, December 7. Miss Burling, a former student at the University of Victoria, is presently studying to be a laboratory technician at London University in England. She will return to Victoria on November 23 to spend two weeks in the city and make her social debut. She will be sponsored by her father. (Campbell Studio.)

TODAY'S RECIPE

LAMB STUFFED PEPPERS

Four sweet green peppers, 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 1½ cups chopped cooked lean lamb, ¼ cup chopped onion, 1½ cups cooked rice, ½ teaspoon salt, few grains pepper, ¼ teaspoon sweet basil, 3 tablespoons tomato ketchup, ⅓ cup chopped celery, 1 tomato, peeled and diced, ¼ cup grated cheddar cheese.

Cut slice from stem end of peppers and remove seeds and pulp. Cook for 5 minutes in boiling salted water. Remove and stand peppers, cut side down, to drain thoroughly. Melt butter in pan and add lamb and onions, stirring and cooking over medium heat until lightly browned. Add rice, salt, pepper, sweet basil, ketchup, celery and tomato and combine thoroughly. Fill peppers with mixture and top with cheese.

Stand upright in baking pan and add hot water to pan to a depth of about ½ inch. Bake in preheated 350 degree F. oven for 30 minutes. Makes four servings.

CLUB CALENDAR

MENU Magic from the TEST KITCHEN

Lunch Box Tip

Here's a tip for you mothers who are looking for ways to get a little more milk into the lunch boxes you pack every day. Add some milk powder to sandwich fillings when you're mixing them. Peanut butter, cheese spreads and salad mixtures take to it perfectly!

Smart Snacks

Keeping plenty of milk on hand for between meal snacks means the whole family will get their daily quota. Encourage everyone to pour a big glassful to go along with your crisp home-made cookies or delicious quick breads. What a boost!

Supper Highlight

Speaking of treats, nothing brightens up a dull supper like hot rolls—especially sweet ones. Spoon a mixture of 1 tablespoon melted butter, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, ¼ cup finely-chopped walnuts, and 1 teaspoon cinnamon into 10 buttered muffin cups. Add a spoonful of well-drained crushed pineapple. Then top with biscuit dough from a can of refrigerated, oven-ready biscuits. Bake in a 475°F oven 10 to 12 minutes. Quick and easy!

A La Mode It!

For a reminder that the best desserts are served à la mode, try this cranberry crumble. Wash and drain 4 cups cranberries, then toss with 1½ cups granulated sugar. Cream ⅓ cup soft butter and beat in 1 cup brown sugar. Blend in ½ cup all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 cup rolled oats. Press half of this mixture into an 8-inch square pan. Spread with cranberries. Sprinkle with remaining crumble mixture, spreading evenly. Bake in a 375°F oven 45 to 50 minutes and serve warm with lots of vanilla ice cream.

Refreshing Flavors

The quickest dessert in the dairy case these days is flavored yogurt. This thick smooth-textured milk product comes in many flavors: strawberry, coffee, vanilla, orange and pineapple to name just a few. Serve it just "as is" or overtop sliced fruit or sparkling jelly for a refreshing change.

MILITARY FLAVOR

Several of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor's commitments this week have a military flavor, in keeping with Remembrance Day on Friday when His Honor will lay a wreath at the Cenotaph and take the salute at the march past which follows the ceremony. Later, he will attend a luncheon in the Bay Street Armory, to be given by the commanding officer and officers of the Fifth (British Columbia) Field Battery, Royal Regiment of Canadian Artillery. Thursday evening, His Honor will attend the Fourandex No. 6 Company's Armistice dinner, to be held in the Bay Street Armory. He will be accompanied by aide-de-camp Major Norman Featherstone. His Honor will inspect the company on his arrival.

Three Baptized

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles (Chuck) Bennett was baptized Dale Ronald in a ceremony in St. Columba Church, Sunday. His godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Jerald Harris and Mr. Ken Oliver. Grandparents of the little boy are Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bennett, Mrs. A. Preece and the late Mr. W. R. Preece. In the same ceremony, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. David Gale were baptized Michelle Ann and Sharon Lynn. Their godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Thornton and Mr. and Mrs. Art Young. Rev. John Vickers officiated. Later, more than 12 guests attended a tea in the Bennett home on Alexander Road while Mr. and Mrs. Gale entertained at a tea in their Lambie Drive home.

Travel Overseas

British Columbia House continues to be a pivot for people from Vancouver Island who call there while in London, Eng. Recent signatures in the visitors' book include those of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Holroyd, Mr. and Mrs. J. Morton Jones, Mr. John H. F. Turner, all of Victoria; Mrs. Doris MacConnachie, Sidney; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Klein of Duncan, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Estlin of Parksville.

Far East Trip

An extended holiday touring Japan is in store for Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Goodridge of Forshaw Road, who left Vancouver recently in the P and O Liner Iberia for the far eastern country. Mr. Goodridge, who has been studying Japanese for a number of years, is making his second visit to that country. This is Mrs. Goodridge's first visit to the Orient.

Up-Island Party

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Baker will travel to Nanaimo on Saturday, Nov. 19, to hold an "open house" for Mr. Baker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Baker. There will be about 200 guests at the affair which will be in celebration of the honor couple's golden wedding anniversary. They were married on Nov. 23, 1916. Mr. Baker is their only child. There are four grandchildren. Also attending the celebration, which will last from 2 to 6 p.m. in the honor couple's home at 1020 Breckin Road, will be Mrs. Harvey Baker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. K. O. Bell, also of Victoria. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Baker moved to Nanaimo three years ago after living in Lantzville for 20 years. Prior to this, Mr. Baker was a grocer at Coombs for 15 years.

Mainland Guests

Out-of-town guests travelling from Vancouver to attend the Taylor-Strong wedding included Mr. A. F. Taylor, Mr. Richard Brown, Mr. Robert Brown and Mr. and Mrs. D. Fairful. Other guests here in Victoria for the wedding were Mr. A. Watters of Gold River, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Butler of Nanoose Bay.

Will Represent Canadian Mothers

TORONTO (CP) — Great-grandmother Josephine Stephens of Toronto will pin three Silver Crosses to her coat Nov. 11 — each representing a son killed in the Second World War — to place a wreath in the Remembrance Day ceremonies at Ottawa.

She was recently chosen by the Royal Canadian Legion as national motherhood representative for the ceremonies.

"The ceremony will bring back lots of sad memories, but I can live with them now," she said in an interview.

"I'm proud to be still here to represent my boys and all the others who were killed in the war."

Her sons, all pilots, were William Colville, 25, lost off the coast of Newfoundland in 1942; Alexander Colville, 28, who died in France in 1944; and Sandy Colville, 24, killed on a strafing mission over France in 1944.

VETERAN HUSBAND

Later Mrs. Stephens' husband and oldest daughter died. In 1949 she married her present husband, George, a First World War veteran.

Mrs. Stephens, in her 60s, lived during the war in Bowmanville, Ont., where her house became home to hundreds of servicemen from all over the world.

She still receives many letters from those who survived the war.

Mrs. Stephens, the 12th Silver Cross mother chosen to be present at the Ottawa ceremonies, is the first from Toronto.

The program was started by the Royal Canadian Legion in the belief that the presence of women at the national ceremony would be "more representative of Canadian citizens everywhere."

HONOR MISS MURIEL BERTRAND

Parties Herald Coming Wedding

Many parties and gifts have starred the days which precede the wedding of Miss Muriel Bertrand, who will become the bride of Zolden Banman on Thursday.

Her chosen maid of honor, Miss Louise Merriam, and her mother, Mrs. A. L. Merriam gave a shower in their Wark Street home. Corsages were presented to the honor guest and her mother, Mrs. Douglas Bertrand. Streamers and bows of pink, blue and white decorated Miss Bertrand's chair and the laundry basket that contained gifts. Refreshments were served.

Invited to attend were Mrs. G. Ellis, Mrs. A. Duncan, Mrs. C. Willis, Mrs. T. Boyle and Rosetta, Mrs. S. Wilson, Mrs. M. Parker, Mrs. C. Reid, the Misses Cheryl Redden and Linde Baker.

Mrs. Gordon Ellis entertained at a tea and bathroom shower in the Empress Hotel. Pink carnations were presented to the bride-elect and her mother. Gifts were in a gold Chinese wicker basket. Those invited were Mrs. A. Duncan, Mrs. A. Merriam, Mrs. N. Howard, Mrs. M. Parker, Mrs. I. Sellers, Mrs. J. Lennox, the Misses Louise Merriam and Cheryl Redden.

A novelty corsage of dish cloths and utensils was presented to Miss Bertrand when Mrs. A. Duncan held a kitchen shower in her Dallas Road home. Gifts were displayed in a life-size mannequin, dressed in the groom-elect's work clothes. The refreshments featured a decorated shower cake.

Invitations to attend were received by Mrs. R. Duncan, Mrs. S. Duncan, Mrs. Merriam, Mrs. William Hamilton, Mrs. B. Birch, Mrs. W. Cubbon, Mrs. T. Affleck, Mrs. M. Parker, Mrs. R. Hitchot, Mrs. C. Mills, Mrs. G. Drier, Mrs. G. Ellis and Miss Louise Merriam.

Gifts of linen were presented to Miss Bertrand when Mrs. N. Howard gave a shower in her Maddison Avenue home. Replacing the conventional corsage, the hostess gave her honor guest ceramic ash trays and a candy dish which she had made herself. Refreshments were served.

Those invited were Mrs. C. Scroggs, Mrs. T. Dundon, Mrs. E. Strudwicke, Mrs. S. Wilson, Mrs. I. Sellers, Mrs. G. Waller, Mrs. D. Manson, Mrs. J. Maloney, Mrs G. Lintaman, Mrs. G. Aldridge, Mrs. Merriam, Mrs. R. Howard, Mrs. V. Sommers and Mrs. M. Parker.

Pink roses were received by Miss Bertrand and her mother when Mrs. M. Parker entertained at a china shower in her Simcoe Street home. Gifts were in a giant teacup and saucer, decorated in pink and white ribbons and flowers. Refreshments were served.

Guests included the groom-elect's mother, Mrs. Eva Banman, here from Porcupine Plains, Sask., for the wedding. Others were Mrs. S. Wilson, Mrs. A. Duncan, Mrs. R. Duncan, Mrs. William Hamilton, Mrs. B. Birch, Mrs. A. Affleck, Mrs. A. Merriam, Mrs. A. Edwards, Mrs. G. Ellis, the Misses Louise Merriam and Cheryl Redden.

All women guests who will attend the wedding in Fairfield United Church were invited to a trousseau tea and display of gifts, given by Mrs. Bertrand in her home on Quamichan Avenue.

Mini-Pants Make Debut

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was bound to happen. First, it was the mini-skirt which swept the fashion world. Now, look for mini-pants.

Several ready-to-wear manufacturers featured the abbreviated trousers in their spring collections which have opened for the nation's store buyers. Shows for the buyers will continue through the next two weeks.

The once conservative coat firm of Originala, now branched out into suits and dresses, featured two types of mini-pants. One tailored version showed narrow legged trousers under hip-length jackets. Example: A "shorts suit," as the firm called it, in white wool with the pants chopped off at Bermuda shorts length and with brass buttons for jacket and trimming the pants legs.

Originala also showed culotte suits, with wider legs, but still cropped Bermuda length. Other firms including versions of mini-pants were Matty Talmack, Robert Sloan and Oscar de la Renta.

It took Jacques Tiffeau to take the trousers kick one step further. This youthful French-born designer, part owner of Tiffeau and Busch, showed brightly colored Jersey dresses with short, box-pleated skirts that swung wide to reveal lace drawers, yep, beneath. Tiffeau mounted the lacy jobs on separate waistbands but insisted they'll be sold with the tunic-like dresses as a package deal. Example: An orange jersey top with white lace drawers beneath.

Several Tiffeau outfits of tunics that came to about mid-thigh were worn over bloomers — black bloomers topped by a charcoal grey flannel top slit up the sides, or pale window-checked bloomers coupled with checked sleeveless tunics, also slit up the sides.

Tiffeau, never a designer afraid to experiment, dared what hasn't happened in the feminine fashion industry in several seasons. He cinched in waistlines with belts. He showed a group of low V-fronted jersey dresses with wide waist cinchers. Other outfits came with wide leather belts and big buckles.

First United Church Bazaar Nets $1,442

SOLD OUT SIGNS HOISTED EARLY

There must have been a magician at the bazaar of the United Church Women of First United Church, held in the Fellowship Hall Saturday. In no time at all, poof—all that was left of the home baking and mincemeat stalls, which extended around half of the auditorium, was a lone "Norwegian crinkle" and a package of cookies.

The centennial carousel opened at 11 a.m., with a luncheon featuring delicious turkey burgers served at 11:30. Mrs. Marvin Fowler, wife of the associate minister, and Mrs. Jack Howell, greeted luncheon guests.

Guests seated at the head table were Rev. and Mrs. Robert J. D. Morris, Rev. and Mrs. Fowler, Dr. and Mrs. H. McLeod, Mrs. W. McPherson, Mrs. R. M. Thompson, Rev. and Mrs. J. G. G. Bompas and Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Wilson.

Luncheon hostesses were Mrs. J. Muir, Mrs. R. S. Niven, Mrs. W. Harrison and Mrs. B. Bradley.

LUNCHEON CONVENERS

Mrs. T. Lumsden and Mrs. J. Calvert convened the luncheon, assisted by Mrs. J. W. Stephens and Mrs. M. Scott. Helping out were Mrs. A. Campbell, Mrs. L. Brenen, Mrs. B. Acreman, Mrs. H. Henderson, Mrs. A. B. Squires, girls of the Canadian Girls in Training, the Misses Nancy Willerton, Janis Powley, Diane Pierce and Jennifer Syme.

Even some of the men offered their help with the luncheon by carving turkeys. They were H. Henderson, W. Hudson, D. Mackinnon and W. Thomson. The Clover Park Group and the Uplands Group made sandwiches.

In charge of luncheon tickets was Miss H. Elliott, assisted by Mrs. Gordon Houston and Mrs. J. Lockhart.

The entire bazaar was convened by Mrs. Sidney Ash.

Mrs. H. McLeod, wife of the former minister of the church and former moderator of the United Church of Canada, opened the tea at 2 p.m.

Greeting guests were Mrs. R. J. D. Morris and Mrs. J. D. Martin, president of the UCW.

Convening the tea were Mrs. A. Glenday and Mrs. A. Mackinnon, assisted by CGIT members, the Misses Nancy Willerton, Janis Powley, Diane Pierce and Jennifer Syme.

In charge of the home-baking stall was Mrs. Harold Menzies, assisted by Mrs. Maurice Wright, Miss Lillian Kirk, Mrs. K. M. Andrews, Mrs. Elsie Litkenhaus, Mrs. Peter Neilson, Miss Joan Adye, Mrs. Mary Nicholson, Mrs. Agnes McConachy, Mrs. J. W. Dickie, Mrs. W. C. Thomson, Miss Dorothy Stacey, Mrs. W. Nicholson and Mrs. C. L. Wilson.

Convening other stalls were: Novelties, Mrs. S. C. Ward, assisted by Miss J. Brenton, Mrs. T. W. Bleakley, Mrs. C. Chatfield, Miss Amy Dawson and Mrs. R. A. Marquis; aprons, Mrs. J. Walker, Mrs. B. M. Derkson, Miss B. Rogers; Miss A. Loomis, Mrs. S. H. Shaw, Miss L. Greenfield and Mrs. A. T. Hunkin; Christmas and gift cards, Mrs. L. C. Thomas, Mrs. S. Smart, Mrs. M. Paone and Mrs. T. Harker; mincemeat, Mrs. P. R. Risdale, Mrs. P.M. Derkson and Mrs. A. Hughes; jewelry, Mrs. E. J. Capling and Mrs. H. H. Henderson, assisted by Mrs. P. A. Forster, Mrs. C. Annett, Miss L. Trenholme, Mrs. C. L. Whitby, Mrs. A. Halliday, Mrs. W. T. Straith, Mrs. E. Brookband, Mrs. A. Oakley and Mrs. W. Brooks.

Special highlights of the affair, which realized the sum of $1,442, was an art display of the works of Edward Goodall, and a junior art contest.

Mrs. W. Collier and Mrs. P. Beere were in charge of the check room. Assisting were CGIT members, the Misses Frances Harker, Roseanne Boadley, Cathy MacLean, Heather Collier, Gwen Mynott, Sally Gray, Karen Johnson, Rosemary Vaughan, Pauline Beere, Jinx Barber, Lorraine Aitken, Maureen Cuson, Diane Colver and Elaine Lett.

Looking after youngsters were the Misses Barbara Denike, Barbara Braithwaite, Karen Stephens and Maureen Allen.

Makes Rough Wrinkled Necks Smoother

If your throat is rough, wrinkled and old-looking, let me suggest you apply a delightful lotion-like substance you can get at any drug or department store. It's called 2nd Debut and it exclusively contains the Wiesbaden Discovery known scientifically as CEF 600 which carries needed moisture into and under the skin. Not only is wrinkled, loose, flabby skin pushed up and made smooth again but at the same time the aging look of a crepe paper throat disappears and you look years younger fast. You can also get "2nd Debut" with CEF 1200 for double strength moisturizing action. Remember the name . . . 2nd Debut. Special introductory offer to my readers only! You will be mailed postpaid the $1.25 demonstration size of the regular $3.75 value 2nd Debut with CEF 600 if you send only $1.00 to me, Lila Hamilton, Beauty Staff Writer, Dept. AFTER VISIT TO MOSCOW

V.O.W. Head Gives Views

HALIFAX (CP) — The national president of the Voice of Women said Monday night the concern of people in the Soviet Union and Europe over the war in Viet Nam "is more intense than ours here."

Kay Macpherson of Toronto told a news conference she thinks the attitude of Russians towards United States military intervention is that "anybody is in the wrong when they invade a country."

Mrs. Macpherson and five other V.O.W. delegates arrived after a tour of the Soviet Union and visits to Paris, London and Warsaw.

Mrs. Macpherson and Mrs. Fernande Simard, acting president of Quebec's La Voix des Femmes, also attended an international conference in Rome on the participation of women in public life.

She said the V.O.W.'s stand on the Vietnamese conflict is simple.

"We want it to stop as soon as possible.

"I would opt for the Americans getting out and see what would happen, although it may not be as easy as that."

Mrs. Macpherson, head of 3,000-4,000 Voice of Women members, said the Canadian organization is planning to hold an international conference during Canada's centennial year to "the part women can play in promoting peace."

She said the V.O.W. met with the wife of the Chinese ambassador in Moscow and discussed the possibility of an exchange visit between Canadian and Chinese women. The V.O.W. also would like to have women from Viet Nam visit Canada.

Other members of the Canadian delegation were Ruth Kettner of Winnipeg, Lydia Sayle of Vancouver and Beverley McPhee of Courtenay, B.C.

It all started when I decided to sail on the Ilya Crespsinkin. It was a wild idea! Wilder still, I invested in a whole wardrobe of Little Nothings before I left. (You know, that funny, crinkly little stocking made of Cantrece by Cameo). Plainstitch. Mesh. Nude heel. The idea was to knock my fellow passengers on their ear, at least. And sensation! First night out, the captain invited me to sit at his table. Said he'd never seen such beautiful legs. (Little Nothing fits like wow). Turned out he was a bachelor. P.S. The rest of the trip was clear sailing!

“Honestly, Cameo, where have you been all my life?”

PEACEKEEPING

France, Russia To Pay UN Bill

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Authoritative sources have predicted that the Soviet Union and France will make voluntary contributions by the end of this month to help pay off the deficit piled up by United Nations peacekeeping forces in the Congo and Cyprus.

The prediction came after the General Assembly unanimously approved recommendations holding down UN spending. The recommendations came from a special committee of 14 financial experts set up last year on a proposal from France.

MUM ON AMOUNT

Nothing was said about how much the two countries would give. But unconfirmed speculation was that the French contribution would be about $17,000,000 and the Soviet contribution even higher. The peacekeeping deficit is estimated at about $50,000,000.

The authorative sources asked not to be identified. But Soviet Ambassador Nikolai Fedorenko indicated Moscow would contribute at the "proper time." Another diplomat in a position to know said he expects some word from Paris on the subject before November is over.

Fedorenko heads the Soviet delegation, one of 71 that sponsored a French - drafted resolution by which the assembly's budgetary committee and then the Assembly itself endorsed the expert committee's recommendaions.

"PROPER TIME"

He was asked after the assembly vote how soon he now expected some more voluntary contributions to remove the UN's financial difficulties. He replied, "in proper time."

"From your delegation?" was the next question.

"From everybody, because everybody has taken the obligations."

The obligations date back to the Assembly's paralyzed 19th session, strung out from Dec. 1, 1964, to Sept. 1, 1965.

YEARS BEHIND

When that session began, the Soviet Union and France were among a dozen countries that were counted two years behind in total UN dues because they refused to pay General Assembly peace - keeping assessments.

They contend the assessments are illegal on the grounds that only the Security Council is authorized to start and finance peacekeeping operations. Any payments they make, they still say, are voluntary contributions.

But the United States upheld the assessments and insisted that whenever the assembly voed, the "delinquents" should be penalized under article 19 of the UN charter, which says any member two years behind in its dues "shall have no vote."

The assembly avoided voting on the issue until the United States finally dropped its campaign in August, 1965, for lack of support.

On the day the session ended, the assembly agreed that it would resume voting, that nobody's vote would be challenged, and that UN members should make voluntary contributions to solve the organization's financial difficulties.

Since then, 24 of the 121 members, including Canada, have paid or pledged $23,338,324 in such contributions, But Britain is the only big power among them.

France and the Soviet Union have been waiting for the financial committee to report and the assembly to approve the report. The United States has refused to contribute unless the French and Russians do.

Rhodesians Charge U.S. Missionary

LONDON (UPI) — An American missionary has been accused of violating Rhodesia's law and order statute for charging that one of his black African parishioners was tortured by police.

The case of the Rev. Charles Blankney was disclosed here by Noel Saltar, an official of the British council of churches.

Saltar said Blakney told his congregation in a sermon on July 24 at Salisbury's Congregational Church that police used a live electric wire to torture the African.

The charges against Blakney said the missionary's sermon was likely to cause hostility to the police.

He is scheduled to appear in court Nov. 21. Conviction could mean a $280 fine or a jail term of up to one year.

Pension Hike 'Moral Duty' Of Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP)—The Public Service Alliance of Canada said today the federal government has a moral obligation to improve the pensions of all former civil servants, servicemen and Mounties.

The alliance said it has forwarded a 12-page brief to Prime Minister Pearson advising him that it intends to "pick up the cudgels" for retired federal employees whose annuities are being eroded by rising costs.

The 115,000-member alliance will be formally founded this week in a merger of the Civil Service Association of Canada and the Civil Service Federation.

In its brief, it asks for legislation to provide for an immediate increase in pensions for those who retired before 1953 and periodic reviews and increases for those who have retired since.

THE MOTIVES: ECUMENICAL, ECONOMICAL

THE HAGUE (UPI)—Roman Catholics and Protestants are jointly planning to build a church at Leeuwarden, a provincial capital in the north of The Netherlands.

The reports said the venture, a novelty for Holland, was jointly announced by Rev. M. Vijverberg and his Reformed Church colleague L. G. Wagenaar at a press conference.

They explained each congregation will remain on its own and there will be no joint activities. They also said the idea, born from behind cups of coffee in August, had "both ecumenical and economical motives, but the latter motives were not of the extent that they resulted in a kind of forced marriage."

RESIGNING his seat in parliament is Frank Cousins, 61, who earlier stepped down as technology minister in Britain's Labor government.

School Strike Ends

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Swedish teachers have accepted a government-approved mediation committee's offer of a pay increase, ending a 26-day conflict with the state which left 500,000 students without supervision.

PETULA YEARNS FOR HIGH LIFE

By HAL BOYLE

CLARK
. . . small wonder

NEW YORK (AP) — It is hard to figure whether Petula Clark was born — or minted.

Every time the teentsy-weentsy strawberry blonde British singer lifts her voice in song she makes echoes in the bank.

She sang first at the age of seven and a quarter-century later she has become a one-woman international hit parade. Best known in North America for three smash successes in a row — Downtown, I Know a Place, and My Love — she has sold 25,000,000 records throughout the world, more than any other woman vocalist in history

"I'd really rather not think about it — it makes me sound like a factory or a sausage machine," said Petula, who opened at the Copacabana here recently.

"I'm very much interested in the artistic side of music, and leave the rest to others."

Wearying of being called "the English Shirley Temple," Miss Clark moved to France and became an instant success there. A multilinguist, she has also had top-selling records in Denmark, Germany, Switzerland, Holland and Italy. During her present three-month night club tour in the U.S., she also will be featured on variety programs over the three major television networks.

PERTURBED AND PETITE

Petula is pretty, petite and perturbed, but not at all petulant, prissy or pontifical. She is perturbed by her size. She has a big, big voice but she is only five-foot-two and weighs only 108. And although she is the mother of two daughters, even in a mink wrap she still looks like a little girl who has lost her teddy bear.

She hates that, because she feels her size kept her in child star movie roles — 25 in all — for too many grim years when she yearned to move into a grown-up world.

"I have a complex about being so small," she admitted. "I have a feeling that when people meet me, they are disappointed. Because I have a big voice, they expect me to be a big person.

"That puts me on the defensive. To be four inches taller I'd give, well — would you take a Rolls-Royce?"

Her new Rolls — she also owns three homes — is long and slinky and very, very modern, and the only one of its kind on the continent. It was given to her by her husband-manager, Claud Wolff, a French recording executive.

MORGAN!
Offbeat Comedy
Fox Cinema

Despite its very favorable reception back east, I was prejudiced against this British film because it sounded like a callous, way-out comedy build on the fantasies of a demented mind.

On seeing it, I felt differently. While Morgan is demonstrably sick in the head, he is never really pathetic; on the contrary he is robust, funny and often lovably human.

His fantasies are not delusions of grandeur like Walter Mitty's, or escapist ideas of self-justification like those of Billy Liar, but ready-made fantasies taken from old movies he has seen.

While swimming out to a raft to visit his unfaithful wife, Morgan suddenly becomes Tarzan rescuing the lovely Jane from a crocodile — and shots from an old Johnny Weismuller film are so skilfully inter-cut that you hardly know which is which.

Another time, Morgan fancies he is the mighty King Kong, a 100-foot gorilla battling U.S. warplanes to keep Fay Wray, a 1933 beauty, to himself.

* * *

Dreams, fantasies and nightmares are acted out with consummate skill by David Warner as Morgan — a long-haired disciple of London's beatnik art set. He has married the lovely daughter of a prosperous family (Vanessa Redgrave), but cannot hold her.

She loves him physically and often laughs at his outrageous antics, yet craves the more conventional world she knew before. She divorces Morgan and takes up with a fashionable art dealer (Robert Stephen).

When they plan to bed together, Morgan bugs the house with fearsome jungle noises produced by hidden tape recorders. He also plants a bomb under the bed, with a plunger almost touching the mattress so that any strong depression will "Boom!"

This disaster is averted but Morgan, obsessed by his King Kong fantasy, is far from discouraged. While his ex-wife and her new husband are being feted at their wedding reception, he appears in a King Kong costume and smashed up the party so thoroughly that women fly screaming from the building.

When charged in court, Morgan sees himself as a stately giraffe, racing across the African plains before being snared by hunters.

At such moments the film comes close to poetry in motion, but its general context is one of elaborate madness sustained by fin acting and imaginative direction.

Beatles Splitting? No One Denies It

LONDON (Reuters)—Beatles manager Brian Epstein today refused to scotch rumors the famous quartet may break up until he has had a chance to talk to them.

Epstein, who guided the mop-topped group from obscurity in Liverpool to international fame, said nothing has been decided as to whether they would appear in public again as a group.

"The Beatles have changed their thoughts as their career has been altered by their attitudes in the past," he said. "I'd be a fool to forecast exactly how it will be."

(The Associated Press quoted a spokesman as saying: "There certainly are no plans for a tour or appearance by the group in hand at the moment.")

Last week Epstein turned down an appeal for the Beatles to appear in a special television gala to raise money for the Welsh village of Aberfan, where a sliding mountain of slag crushed a school killing 144 persons, mostly children.

GONE SEPARATE WAYS

The Beatles' last full-scale tour was in September when they were in the United States for three weeks. Since then they have gone their separate ways.

John Lennon, 26, has just returned home after making a film in Spain and Germany. His Beatle haircut was cropped for the movie.

George Harrison, 23, has been vacationing in India, where he grew a moustache and took lessons learning to play an Indian stringed instrument, the Sitar.

Paul McCartney, 24, lone bachelor of the group, has also grown a moustache and is overseas working on the score for a film, All In Good Time.

Drummer Ringo Starr has just returned from a vacation abroad.

Nazi Agent 'Decorated' By Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Britain awarded the military cross to a Gestapo agent who sent scores of French, Dutch and Belgian resistance workers to their death, a British author claims in a new book on the Second World War cloak and dagger operations.

The award went to Nazi infiltrator Richard Christmann in 1942 after he had successfully passed himself off as a Belgian resistance leader. When the truth came known two years later, the British government hastily annulled the award.

Author Edward Cookridge told the story in his book "Inside SOE"

He said Christmann, a Gestapo agent, was ordered to infiltrate the Allied resistance movement to give away thousands of workers, was so brilliant the British government awarded him the military cross "for services to the Allied cause."

Cookridge was himself an espionage agent with the SOE, Special Operation Executive.

BUT STAGE 67 RATINGS STAGGER

Noon Wine Encourages High Hopes

By BOB THOMAS

De HAVILLAND
. . . imported

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Can ABC Stage 67 be saved

Many serious-minded followers of the U.S. television scene hope so, despite the anemic ratings of the Wednesday night anthology series. Rod Serling sees it as the season's single hope that quality programming can find a place in television.

Another booster for Stage 67 is Olivia De Havilland, who came from Paris to appear in her first television drama as part of the series. The play, which was taped for showing Nov. 23, is from a Katherine Anne Porter story called Noon Wine. It also stars Jason Robards, Per Oscarsson and Theodore Bikel.

"The fact that ABC would bring two performers from Europe is evidence of the network's serious intent," said Miss De Havilland.

"I came from Paris, and Per left a revue in which he was appearing in Sweden. I was delighted to come; the script is as fine as anything I have read recently.

"I sincerely hope that ABC can make a go of Stage 67. It seems to me that it is a brave and serious effort to do good things on television. It deserves all the support it can get."

The Tokyo-born actress, winner of two Academy Awards, admitted that she was not a fan of television either as a performer or viewer. Before Noon Wine, her appearances in the medium had been limited to brief excepts from Romeo and Juliet and her Broadway play A Gift of Time, plus a reading with Bette Davis on Hollywood Palace.

"I don't like to watch television, either here on in Paris," she remarked. "Watching TV is a passive activity, and I would rather be doing something that is active, such as writing a letter, reading a book or just thinking. It seems to me that people in this country spend too much time in passive pursuits, especially the children."

Saanich Grants Extra Holidays

Saanich council agreed Monday night to give all its employees a holiday on Dec. 27 and Jan. 2.

The provincial government has proclaimed both days as holidays because Christmas Day and New Year's Day fall on Sundays.

Comptroller-treasurer John Tribe said Saanich was bound by a union contract to give these dates to policemen but not to firefighters and municipal staff.

Reeve High Curtis said he doesn't like long holidays at Christmas and New Year's although this view may be unpopular.

But, he added, he was not prepared to be dogmatic to the point where employees might report sick.

ONLY FAIR

Coun. William Campbell said it is "only fair" to grant the holidays and Couns. Edward Lum and Harold Todd said Saanich shouldn't be different to other municipalities.

The decision to grant the two days as holidays affects more than 300 firefighters and municipal workers.

In other business, council:

- Referred to its personnel committee formal notification by the firefighters union to reopen its contract with Saanich;
- Heard from comptroller-treasurer John Tribe that a comprehensive report on the proposed sewer utility will be ready next week;
- Referred to Victoria-Saanich Beaches and Parks Committee suggestions for cutting fire access roads and cutting of snags on Mount Douglas following the recent fire;
- Heard it will be another week or two before a consultant's report is ready on recreational needs;
- Responded cooly to a suggestion the Greater Victoria Centennial Society organize a $24,000 pageant next summer;
- Endorsed the planner's report that the city-owned Game Farm property near Elk Lake be retained for recreational use;
- Approved a provincial government motor vehicle testing station at McKenzie-Cedar Hill Cross Road-Borden which will serve southern Vancouver Island;
- Rejected an application by B.C. Hydro for an administration centre on Quadra just north of Beckwith.

HOME GARDEN

Without Salt Water Parsley Needs Help

By HILDA BEASTALL

Hilda

Gardeners in areas near salt water can rely on a supply of parsley, mint and chives being available from their gardens during each week of the winter months.

They may even have some of the annual herbs untouched by frost until after Christmas and enjoy sprigs of fresh summer savory and sweet marjoram.

However, the rest of us need to contrive various ways to continue even occasional pickings.

With a heated sunroom or utility room, or a slightly heated greenhouse, there is every chance of success if we start now.

Low broad clay pots five or six inches in diameter will be suitable, with saucers or other pans of sufficient size to hold them so that enough water can be supplied without flooding the floors.

Lift a young clump of chives which still shows signs of fresh growth. Shake off some of the old soil and replant into a large pot. See that a piece of crock is over the drainage hole.

The soil mixture should be dark rich soil from the summer compost heap with a little sharp sand added. A half teaspoon of complete fertilizer such as 6-8-6 added in each pot will encourage growth as soon as the roots begin to grow again.

Several pieces of root from one's favorite mint will soon produce shoots if potted up into rich soil and kept in a warm place.

Parsley is not so easy to keep growing in the confined space of a pot, so dig up a couple of small plants and put them into deep pots to give root space.

The warmest spot and the least direct sun will suit parsley.

Careful watering and an occasional liquid feeding of nitrogen fertilizer should keep these herbs producing indoors through most of the winter.

Shoplifter Put On Probation

Mrs. Kathleen Tenhave, 22, of 101 Island Highway, was placed on probation for six months Monday when sentenced for shoplifting.

She had earlier pleaded guilty to taking $128.98 worth of clothing and groceries from Woodward's Oct. 28, including the coats she and her son were wearing.

Water Main Petition Falls Short of Mark

A local improvement petition to extend the Saanich municipal water mains into the Prospect Lake area has failed to gain sufficient support, council was told Monday night.

Clerk Gordon Hayward said the petition, circulated in two parts for past months, was insufficient to pass.

He said there were 142 property ownerships involved and the requirement was two-thirds to pass, or 95.

The total cast in favor was 77 for 54 per cent approval.

Council moved that no action be taken, the customary procedure where a petition fails.

Coun. William Noel urged "another good hard look" at the problem. He had been informed that a dead rat and a dead snake were found in one well.

Coun. Edith Gunning said she is "very disappointed" but hoped a new petition would be circulated early next year.

She noted the much greater support for this petition than a similar one more than two years ago.

An area resident, Mrs. Mavis Edwards, 445 Sparton, complained of "an irresponsible health board, council and self-centred residents. Council would earn more respect by putting the waterline through."

But Coun. Leslie Passmore, who supported the extension, said the petition was a democratic choice and "we're not the dictators of the municipality, we are the representatives."

The existing water main ends near the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory.

It's Not Only No But Don't Even Ask

Party politics in civic government was thrown out the window Monday night by Saanich council.

"A very dangerous suggestion," said Coun. Edith Gunning.

"It lends itself to patronage," said Coun. Leslie Passmore.

"I said it is a provocative question and I am happy to withdraw it," said Reeve Hugh Curtis.

The reeve suggested the question — should civil government be operated on party lines — after council agreed to a proposed public opinion survey by the Victoria Junior Chamber of Commerce on municipal matters.

He made it clear, however, that his answer is "a definite no" but the question might provide an interesting one for the opinion survey.

Coun. Alan Newberry said it is a "very good" question but agreed with the reeve's viewpoint.

Coun. Gunning said she agreed "so much I would rather not see the question go forward. Even to put it on the survey gives it a certain amount of credence."

But she did note that party politics exist in municipal government in the United Kingdom.

Council agreed to pass on to the Jaycees several questions from Coun. Gunning on such subjects as municipal grants, financing hospital construction costs and education, the sewer survey, municipal cost sharing and possibly holding municipal elections in October of November rather than December.

NEVER, NEVER! SAYS ENGINEER

Could Oak Bay Fluorides Sneak Into City's Water?

Holy water main!

In the latest of a barrage of communications to Oak Bay council a Victoria-based group vigorously opposed to fluoridation has warned councillors that fluorides in Oak Bay water may "find their way" into Greater Victoria's water systems.

The third letter in 10 days from the Individual Rights Association, 2318 Florence, was tabled at a council meeting Monday.

It quotes the London, England Metropolitan Water Board as authority for the statement that fluorides in part of a water system would "permeate" the whole.

'COULD SUE'

The association says if council gets a 60 per cent vote in favor of fluoridation on its proposed Dec. 10 referendum "citizens of Victoria could sue Oak Bay council for damages."

It said these citizens would be "subjected to illegal fluoridation of their water supply."

The Association added that "this is an additional reason for not putting the question of fluoridation to the vote at the next municipal election."

Reeve Allan Cox said there was "no substance to the allegation."

The reeve said municipal engineer Geoffrey White had assured him it could not happen.

The association's other objections to fluoridation as outlined in a petition and a letter both dated Oct. 21 were that "adding chemical fluorides is in the field of mass medication and a violation of individual rights" and that "guarding against dental decay is an individual responsibility."

In a 1965 referendum Oak Bay ratepayers voted 58.6 per cent for fluoridation.

60 PER CENT NEEDED

A 60 per cent majority is needed.

Just 42 per cent voted in favor in a 1959 referendum.

The vote Dec. 10 will be the 85th municipal vote on fluoridation in B.C since 1954. About 30 B.C. communities have instituted fluoridation of water as a result of referendums.

"Fluoridation would cost the municipality an estimated $10,000 for equipment installation and about $4,000 a year for maintenance.

A Canadian Dental Association 1965 report on fluoridation said that more than 4,000,000 Canadians drink fluoridated water and more than 30 per cent of United States water systems are treated.

Fluoridated water contains one part of the chemical to a million parts of water. Greater Victoria water currently contains one-tenth of one part of natural fluoride per million parts of water.

CYC Official Speaks at Uvic

Stewart Goodings, associate director of the Company of Young Canadians, will take part in a 'speak-easy' next Monday at the University of Victoria.

Mr. Goodings will speak at 12:30 p.m. at a public meeting in the Students' Union Building on Gordon Head campus.

Attending with him will be other members of the C.Y.C. who will answer questions about their activities and outline the methods of the Company.

MARINAS TOLD TO BUY FIRE BOAT

Marina operators should buy their own fire boat to ensure protection of their marinas, North Saanich council decided Monday.

Council's views follows a proposal by Steve Dickinson, owner of Van Isle Marina, for a fire boat to protect small craft and harbor facilities in the area.

Reeve J. B. Cumming pointed out that marinas already charge boat owners for a protective service.

It was up to them to provide a fire boat, he said.

CANADIAN PACIFIC COMINCO PAVILION
This is Cominco in B.C.
More than 7,500 people are employed by Cominco in B.C., in its mines, plants and power facilities. They may be your neighbours, friends . . . or even . . . you. If you were to follow Cominco through B.C. . . . these are some of the things you would see:—
Suppose you choose Trail as your starting point. Here you will find a giant metallurgical and chemical plant complex which forms the nucleus of Cominco's operations.
Your next step might be in the direction of Kimberley where the famous concrete portal marks the entrance to Cominco's Sullivan Mine—the world's largest single producer of lead and zinc. Kimberley also produces iron, steel and chemical fertilizers.
Then you could work your way up to the Yukon border and back again, spotting Cominco's exploration crews continually searching B.C. for new mines.
After that you might care to drop by New Westminster where a Cominco subsidiary—Pacific Coast Terminals Co. Ltd., owns and operates deep-sea docking, loading and bulk handling facilities. Across the water at the north end of Vancouver Island you could look in on Cominco's copper concentrator at Benson Lake. It treats ore from the nearby Coast Copper Company mine, a Cominco subsidiary.
Finally, back on the mainland, you might watch the sparks fly in Vancouver at another Cominco subsidiary, Western Canada Steel Ltd. This is an ultra modern steel making and fabricating complex growing to meet B.C.'s ever increasing markets.
Cominco in B.C. also means two other active mines, large hydro power installations and added farm profits wherever Elephant Brand fertilizer is used.
Cominco is many places, people and payrolls.

Opening lead—♦ J

"Haste makes waste" is an adage that might well have been meant to apply to bridge. We don't recommend slow play but we know that careful planning at the start of play will actually speed up your game since you won't have to waste time later on trying to recover from carelessness.

South's first thought was to lead a trump at trick two. He could draw trumps with two leads, concede a spade trick and eventually throw two spades on dummy's ace and king of diamonds and ruff the last remaining spade. Then he noted that West might hold all three trumps and that he could guard against this by leading out ace and another spade. He did it and when both opponents followed to the second spade South was able to ruff two spades in dummy and set up his last spade. He never tried to get a discard on a diamond. He didn't need one because he had made his own hand good.

If South had played just one trump he would not have been able to make his contract. If he tried to establish two spade ruffs West would gain the lead with his king of spades and lead a second trump.

It is interesting to note that if West had opened a trump South should still make the hand. He would go after spades. A second trump lead by West would hold South to one spade ruff but he would run off all his trumps and wind up with a diamond-spade squeeze against East.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

CBC-TV launched its highly-touted public affairs rocket, "Sunday," with the hope it will get off the ground and reach the stellar and controversial heights achieved by its predecessor, This Hour Has Seven Days.

Stephen

The initial airing, lacking dash and fire, produced sputtering fizz.

The opening of the show was more comic than the herald of big things to come. The theme song lyrics were inaudible, therefore the ecstatic audience reaction to it was puzzling.

This was followed by a good camera study of perplexed reporter Larry Zolf, who didn't know wheter to join in the wild clapping, sing, dance, cry or speak while waiting for his cue on camera.

(FYI: He finally clapped with the enthusiasm reserved for hitting the bottom of a catsup bottle in a tightly-packed restaurant.)

The following acts saw an interview with Dalton Camp marred by a violent hum on the videotaped recording and a heavy-handed comedy bit surrounding U.S. President Johnson.

At this point, visions danced through the mind's eye of a Commons courtmartial trying to ascertain why the Sunday night effort will cost a strongly-rumored $50,000 per outing for the product received.

The people responsible for "Sunday" are professionals in the strongest meaning of the term. Let's see it.

TIDBITS: NBC-TV will start the new version of the "Dragnet" police series Jan. 5, replacing "The Hero," a cancelled situation comedy . . . ABC-TV estimated that the network's September showing of the movie, "The Bridge on the River Kwai," attracted about 71 million viewers in the U.S. The figure for the Canadian CTV airing is not known.

CBS-TV plans to present three productions of England's Royal Shakespeare Company, "King Lear," "MacBeth" and "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in two seasons starting next fall . . . The same network will air "Inside Red China," an hour documentary filmed by a West German crew on Nov. 22.

If local stations across the country will agree, both NBC-TV and CBS-TV hope to expand their daily evening newscasts to an hour . . . Phyllis Diller's "The Pruitts of Southampton," about a rich family that goes broke, has been renewed for the remainder of the season by ABC-TV.

150 HOUSES FOR SALE

LANGFORD
Fifteen houses in this area, presently occupied by tenants, now being offered for sale. These are nearly all three-bedroom houses. Several are only a year or two old. None have basements, but most have Oil-o-Matic heating, plumbing for automatic washers and wiring for electric range and dryer, paved driveways, carports.
Taxes are low! (In most cases only $25-$60 a year to the owner.) Best of all, only $1,000 down and the balance like rent. No mortgages to raise or commissions to pay. All financing arranged for you. Only one payment to make. These are certainly not mansions, but good comfortable family homes, particularly suited to a young family starting out. Most prices range from $10,400-$12,400. Some older houses are even less.
We will be happy to arrange to show you these houses by appointment.
If you wish to drive past them first we will mail you a list showing the addresses and prices. (Please do not disturb the tenants.) Simply call 478-4446 or 478-4116 and leave your name and address. No one will call on you unless requested.

Use of Telephone Reduces Syphilis

The telephone is proving to be as effective in cutting down the incidence of infectious syphilis as was the introduction of penicillin 20 years ago.

Dr. H. K. Kennedy, director of the provincial Venereal Disease Control Division, said Monday that reporting of only 35 cases of syphilis during the first half of this year "is a major victory in public health."

It confirms that the turning point in a sudden resurgence of the disease — which reached epidemic proportions in 1964 when 340 cases were reported — was reached last year when special measures were instituted to fight it.

Key to the new program is rapid communication.

CONTACTS HUNTED

As soon as a private doctor diagnoses a case of syphilis, he phones the public health authorities who immediately interview the patient to find out every possible contact.

These contacts are traced wherever they may be in the province — again by telephone — and they are given treatment too.

In 1946, when penicillin was just beginning to be available in large quantities, there were 834 cases of infectious syphilis reported in the province and the incidence was 83 per 100,000 population.

NOT LICKED

Ten years later this had been cut to 11 cases and a .4 rate and public health authorities believed the problem had been licked.

For a variety of reasons, syphilis made a comeback all across the continent in the 1960s and in B.C. the number of cases rose annually from 64 in 1961 to 183, 280 and a peak of 304 in 1964 when the rate climbed to 17.5 per 100,000 people

SYPHILIS WAR

Alarmed, the health department appointed a full-time medical director to the division, put its best epidemologist on full-time VD control, added nursing staff and set up the fast-communications system between private physicians and public health units.

Results were immediate.

Last year the cases reported dropped to 178 and the rate to 10 and this year the total is expected to drop to 70 cases.

Highest incidence of the disease has been found in Vancouver's skid road and Prince George, where the rate reached one in every 100 persons at the peak. Both are areas where transients congregate.

GONORRHEA NEXT

Dr. Kennedy said a special emphasis no wwill be placed on controlling gonorrhoea which also has followed the syphilis cycles over the years, but climbed from 3,670 cases reported in 1961 to 6,146.

The same techniques will be used that proved so successful in reducing syphilis and a special clinic already has been set up on Vancouver's skid road. A public health nurse now is working full time on gonorrhoea control in northern areas.

The communications network includes liaison with Washington State health authorities — because so many of the contacts travel freely between Vancouver and Seattle — and the federal health division that is responsible for visiting seamen.

ISLAND CONTEST

Top Musician To Win Place In Bowl Band

A chance to march with the renowned I.O.F. Robin Hood Band in the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Parade New Year's Day will be won by a Vancouver Island high school musician Wednesday night when some 20 finalists ply off at S. J. Willis Jr. High, on Quadra above Hillside.

Judging by Canadian Forces Music School Director Lieut. Cdr. Tudor Jones begins at 7 p.m. It will be open to the public.

Winners fly to Los Angeles Christmas night, rehearse with the 155-piece Robin Hood Band and for a week see the sights of Hollywood. All expenses are paid by the Independent Order of Foresters.

ROSE BOWL GAME

Finally they appear on network TV in the Rose Parade, see the Rose Bowl game and fly home in time for school January 3.

The finalists, all between 14 and 17 years of age, were chosen for the playoff by Island high school music directors.

Finalists are: Bryce Gibney, 15, trumpet, Port Alberni; Howard Mar, 15, euphonium, Nanaimo; Kahlen Wood, 17, trombone, and Robert Baxter, 17, euphonium, Mount Douglas; Glen Thompson, 17, trumpet, Donna Zapf, 16, clarinet, Ian Fetterley, 15 trombone, and Don Mayer, 17, clarinet, Mount View: Walter Kellythorne, 17, drums, James Gayfer, 17, trombone, and Greg Stone, 17, trumpet, Oak Bay; Patricia McKenzie, 17, trumpet, Larry Witmer, 17, tuba, and Stafford Horne, 14, clarinet, Lansdowne; Paul Iverson, 14, cornet, Colquitz; Denis Johnston, 15, alto saxophone, and Kelly James Tippett, 16, percussion, Victoria High.

Lansdowne High's Stafford Horne won first prize in the 1966 Victoria Day Parade.

Reserved tickets for the playoff are available by phoning the I.O.F. office, 2618 Quadra, at 383-9921.

Recording tapes of winning contestants will be made Thursday for shipment to Los Angeles, where entries from all over Canada, United States and United Kingdom will be judged.

MEETINGS CALENDAR

Kinsmen Club of Vic Van Isle, 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Century Inn Hotel. Provincial Civil Defence Co-ordinator John Erb to Speak.

Craigflower Women's Institute, Thursday at 1:30 p.m., View Royal Community Hall. Annual meeting.

Uvic Watches Vote, Checks Guest List

Among the keenest viewers of tonight's American general election results will be the organizers of the University of Victoria's Political Science Forum.

If today's balloting goes well for them, seven of the leading campaigners will come to Victoria to speak before the student-run forum, Gordon Pollard, president of the forum, said today.

If Ronald Reagan wins his hard-fought contest for the governorship of California he will likely be the forum's guest this month. If he loses and incumbent Pat Brown hangs on to the reins of power then Brown will take time off from his gubernatorial chores in January to come to Victoria.

Senatorial candidates Henry Jackson of Washington, Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Edward Brook of Massachusetts are also on the forum's guest list, as are Alabama's notorious running mates Gov. George and Lurleen Wallace.

Add to this all-star cast Conservative leader John Diefenbaker who plans to speak to the forum Nov. 28 if he survives the machinations of his Camp followers and Penn Jones of anti-Warren Commission fame speaking on Nov. 16 on Dallas and the Aftermath, and you have the highlights of a busy month for Victorian political scientists.

Boat There But It's Not Easy

Pagan I, an aging 27-foot sailboat which left Victoria Oct. 17 with its skipper and a crew of girls, has reached San Francisco.

It is the first leg of a planned trip to Montreal.

One of the girls, Beverly Stephens, 21, was taken ill off San Francisco and had to be removed from the sailboat with the aid of a passing ship.

Still on board is the skipper, Karl Darwin, 20, and Jackie Shaw, 22. They plan to reach Ensenada, Mexico, in about another week.

The trip so far hasn't been smooth sailing.

The captain and crew reported they had been in "one storm after another" in their engineless craft and when they weren't in a storm they were in fog.

Editors Resign

TORONTO (CP)— The daily Ryersonian failed to appear this morning for the first time in Ryerson Polytechnical Institute's 18-year history. Eighteen student editors resigned Monday, claiming that the paper was being censored by the school's board of governors.

Swirling Flood Waters Pour Over Gates of Paradise

By LEO J. WOLLEMBORG
The Washington Post

ROME — The floods that have battered Italy and left well over 100 dead and thousands homeless have also dramatized the fact that many of the nation's greatest art treasures face dangers more immediate than neglect and the slow bite of time.

Florence and Venice provide the most telling evidence of this.

In Florence, the River Arno surged over its embankments and submerged most of the old renaissance city under several feet of water, causing more havoc than all the bombing and fighting of the Second World War.

For a moment, the bell tower of the city's cathedral, built by Giotto more than 600 years ago, appeared on the verge of collapse. Severe but not irreparable damage was done to the doors of the nearby baptistry, sculpted in gold over a period of 28 years in the 15th century by Lorenzo Ghiberti and known ever since as "The Gates of Paradise."

IRON GRATE

Five of the 10 scenes which Ghiberti portrayed were ripped from their panels. They were found behind an iron grate, badly scratched. Two gold and bronze scenes were also pulled off the baptistry's oldest doors, the work of Pisano. Both were found, one of them 200 feet away in the cathedral square. Neither was damaged.

The cathedral itself was flooded. The water, thick with mud and fuel oil from broken mains, disfigured many of the city's other landmarks, including the Church of Santa Croce.

According to Prof. Ugo Procacci, the superintendent of Florence's art galleries, 90 per cent of the works housed in the Uffizi Gallery escaped unscathed. But quite a few masterpieces stored on the ground floors of the gallery were damaged and some may be completely lost.

MEDICI CHAPEL

These include works by Giotto, Lorenzo Lotto, Botticelli, Filippo Lippi, Masaccio and Simone Martini. The flood also dirtied and otherwise damaged the Church of San Lorenzo, which contains the Medici Chapel and its sacristy with the famous sculptured groups of Michelangelo.

Even worse damage was done to the national library, to the Italian state archives and to several museums and monasteries. Innumberable precious books, documents, collections of ancient arms and musical instruments and some frescoes must be considered a total loss.

Farther north, the Adriatic Sea broke through the sea walls guarding the lagoon of Venice. The waters, surging an unprecedented six feet above sea level, flooded St. Mark's Square and most other districts of the city.

While there were no reports of damage to art treasures, the impact must have weakened further the already shaky foundations of many famous churches and palaces.

Venice, which is built on a series of soggy islands, has been in danger of collapsing for centuries. In recent years this danger has grown because of the increasing backwash of motorboats and the dredging of new canals to accommodate more traffic.

From a broader standpoint, the disastrous consequences of the floods and storms point to the effect of centuries of mistakes and neglect.

These have upset the hydrogeological balance of most of the Italian peninsula. Indiscriminate deforestation has hastened erosion, the effects of which have been magnified by the failure to implement co-ordinated water control programs.

Now, a few days of rain can turn every mountain stream into a raging torrent that sends tremendous amounts of water and soil into the valleys, sometimes within a few hours. The river beds are not sufficiently wide or otherwise equipped to receive the flood and convey it safely to the sea.

NORMAL FLOW

Along the Adriatic coast, moreover, the prevailing winds push the sea inland to block and sometimes to reverse the normal flow of rivers themselves.

In 1962, a master plan for the country's main rivers was finally enacted. But the $200 million appropriated for it proved inadequate to cover even the most pressing needs.

The current five-year program for economic development is now being discussed in Parliament. It calls for an allocation of $600 million to finance public works, mostly in connection with flood control. The amount will almost certainly be increased as a result of the latest disasters.

BIFF! BANG! POW! SHE'S TOP BEAUTY

By NICK FILLMORE

TORONTO (CP) — What's it like for a 19-year-old secretary to be named Miss Canada

"Like being hit on the head with a 100-pound bag of cement," said blue-eyed Barbara Kelly of Vancouver. "It was wonderful. The greatest thing that could happen to any girl."

Barbara, five feet, six inches and with dark brown hair, was selected Miss Canada 1967 Monday night from a group of 26 regional beauty queens

"I'm a secretary for the British Columbia Telephone Company . . . or I was until today," said Barbara at a party for pageant officials. "I'll have to leave my job because of the duties I'll have as Miss Canada."

She was named pageant winner from a group of five finalists.

During the Centennial Year, Barbara will represent Canada at several functions, including Expo 67 in Montreal. She will also receive a $5,000 cash prize, a $1,000 scholarship, two cars, a two-week vacation in Florida, a complete wardrobe and other gifts.

First runner-up was Susan Cousens, 22, of Muskoka, Ont., a secretary and graduate of Lawrence collegiate in Muskoka. Joanne Holm, 20, of Winnipeg, a student at the University of Manitoba, was second runner-up.

Miss Victoria, Susan Smythe, did not reach the finals.

"What I do in the future depends on what happens while I'm Miss Canada," said Barbara. "I'd like to go to university and study business administration."

Barbara, who measures 34-23-34 was accompanied to Toronto for the competition by her mother, Mrs. Sadie Kelly of Vancouver.

"It was a hectic week but there wasn't as much pressure as I thought there might be," she said. "All the girls helped each other and we got along great."

Heather Spear, 19, of Ottawa, a major in sociology at Carleton University, was third runner-up, and Dayle Haddon, 18, of Montreal, a model and representative of the Red Cross, was fourth runner-up.

The 26 contestants, sponsored by regional committees and organizations, were judged on personality, talent and beauty.

Ten of the girls in the competition were from Ontario. Four were from Quebec, three from Alberta, three from British Columbia, two from Manitoba, and one each from Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Prince Edward Island was not represented.

ESTATE OF DOROTHY KILLAM

$30 Million Goes to Universities

OTTAWA (CP)—Terms of an estate that will mean $30,000,000 for five Canadian institutions were announced Monday.

Trustees for the estate of the late Dorothy Killam, who died in Halifax last year, announced that under her will scholarships and fellowship funds will be established at Dalhousie University, Halifax; the University of Alberta, Edmonton; the University of British Columbia, Vancouver; the Montreal Neurological Institute and the Canada Council.

A statement said the trustees estimate that when the estate has been liquidated, "a total of about $30,000,000 will become available for division among the five institutions."

She was the widow of Isaac Walton Killam, a Canadian financier and industrialist whose fortune was estimated at $100,000,000 at his death in 1955.

He was born in Nova Scotia and Mrs. Killam was born in St. Louis, Mo.

Trustees said Mrs. Killam expressed the hope that the bequests would "in some measure increase the scientific and scholastic attainments of Canadians" and develop the work of Canadian universities.

The will specifies that the scholarships, fellowships and other grants be held for "advanced study or research at universities, hospitals, research or scientific institutes, or other equivalent or similar institutions, both in Canada and in other countries."

The statement said the three universities involved plan to use the income from their funds to establish similar Killam scholarship and fellowship awards.

Detailed announcements were expected later this fall.

Each university would submit its own candidates to a selection committee on which the Killam trustees will be represented. Dr. A. W. Trueman, former director of the Canada Council, will act as consultant and assistant to the trustees.

The trustees are Maj.-Gen. E. C. Plow, former lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia; Montreal lawyer Donald N. Byers; G. Arnold Hart, chairman and president of the Bank of Montreal; and C. F. Harrington, president of the Royal Trust Co.

December Vote On Recreation Not In Cards

A referendum on new recreational facilities in Saanich will not go before ratepayers in December.

But ratepayer approval may be sought early in the new year depending on the new council's views and the tight money situation then.

Reeve Hugh Curtis said today a December vote coinciding with the annual municipal elections is out.

He added: "This is so important that a little more time is not to be worried about."

His personal opinion, depending on what the new council wants to do, is that a referendum in the early spring "could be a far more favorable time for putting a vote."

There were a number of organizations which would want to work for a yes vote "and even if we had it in hand now and said go they might not be ready."

FROZEN BONDS

Council was informed Monday night by the consulting company of A. B. Sanderson that its report on recreation will not be ready for another week or two.

In addition, the municipal affairs department has frozen new municipal bond issues for borrowing until existing approved borrowing is marketed.

The consulting company was appointed last September after council had spent a number of private sessions discussing plans for new recreational facilities and public briefs were presented by several interested groups to the parks and recreation committee.

At that time, Saanich said council has realized "that the entire question is most complicated, has far-reaching effects and must be carefully considered before a final scheme is readied for presentation to the electorate."

Saanich also said then it had been hoped for several months to seek a December vote and the goal "may still be realized even though considerably more research has proved necessary and appropriate."

The merits of one large sports centre or seveal smaller ones was a major point in the public briefs.

Screwdriver Studied In Break-In Trial

A paint-flecked screwdriver could determine the guilt or innocence of a man charged in Victoria Law Courts with breaking and entering and theft.

Police claim that flecks of pale green paint taken from the tip of a screwdriver are the same as paint chipped from the front door of the Sam Kee confectionery, 143 Moss Street, when it was forced open early Sunday Aug. 15.

The screwdriver is said to have been found in a car driven by Wayne Albert Brown, formerly of 46 South Turner Street.

Brown has pleaded not guilty to breaking and entering and theft from the store and being in possession of housebreaking tools.

Crown prosecutor E. George MacMinn said Monday that flecks of paint taken from the screwdriver were examined at the RCMP laboratory in Vancouver and found to be the same.

He said he would call a witness from the RCMP laboratory to present a scientific account of the examination.

Mr. MacMinn alleged that Brown was the driver of a car stopped at Fisgard and Douglas at about 4:15 a.m. on Aug. 15 — after the Sam Kee store was broken into.

Under the front seat, police found a 14-inch screwdriver, a hammer, a pair of pliers and a glove. The glove compartment of the car contained five more gloves of the same pattern.

Mr. MacMinn said the store at 143 Moss Street was broken into by smashing a pane of glass in the front door and prising it open with a screwdriver.

Missing from the store were cans of beans and spaghetti, packages of cigarettes, packages of buns, loaves of bread jars of peanut butter and cash amounting to not more than $5.

FOODSTUFFS

The Crown alleged that the cigarettes and foodstuffs were later found in a kitchen cupboard at 46 South Turner Street, where the accused was staying at that time.

Brown was arrested at this address, charged with breaking and entering and committed for trial.

Constable Blake Hamilton Green told of stopping a car driven by Brown at the intersection of Fisgard and Douglas. He said another male passenger was sitting beside Brown in the front seat.

Defence counsel Jack Gatehouse asked Constable Green if Brown made any effort to run away when he stopped his car.

"No," the constable replied.

"The gloves you found in the car were working men's gloves, were they not?" asked Mr. Gatehouse.

"Yes, they could be called that," Constable Green replied.

RCMP Sgt. William Robertson of the Vancouver crime detection laboratory was expected to give evidence when the trial resumed today.

Film Raises $2,300

VANCOUVER (CP)—Sponsors of the Canadian aid for Viet Nam civilians group said Monday that $2,300 was raised by a film showing Sunday of life in the battle-torn country.

Councils Mourn Death Of Alderman

Municipal councils in Greater Victoria paused Monday night to mourn the sudden death of former Victoria alderman Millard H. Monney.

Saanich council stood to observe one minute of silence.

Oak Bay council moved a vote of sympathy.

Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox said Mr. Mooney "was a most conscientious and hard-working" figure in municipal affairs.

A letter of condolences to the family was also approved by Esquimalt council.

FUNERAL WEDNESDAY

Mr. Mooney, who served the city and district for 13 years in municipal office, died in a Cowichan River boat tragedy Sunday.

A large turnout of district municipal dignitaries is expected to attend the funeral service Wednesday at 3:45 p.m. in Fairfield United Church. Rev. H. W. Kerley and Canon George Biddle will officiate. Cremation will follow.

PREMIER JOHNSON:

'Quebec Seeking To Build Canada'

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson said Monday Quebec's efforts to achieve greater fiscal and political autonomy are not intended either to isolate the province or weaken Canada.

Quebec's aim, he said, is to fulfil itself at all levels and by this "to be in a position to bring a more effective contribution to the cultural enrichment and the economic growth of the whole country."

The Quebec premier, guest speaker at the 13th annual meeting of the French-Canadian Association of Broadcasters, discussed the stand on tax-sharing taken by his province at last month's federal-provincial conference at Ottawa.

He said that while not fully satisfied because only provisional arrangements resulted, he returned to Quebec "with cause for new hope."

"One of the reasons for this optimism is the remarkable identity of views that was apparent amongst the various provinces," he said.

Premier Johnson said his attitude to the future was:

"I long for the day we have assured the harmonious coexistence of our two great families, in justice and equality, by means of new fiscal and constitutional arrangements. I long for the day that we will finally be able, all together, to devote all our energy to the economic development of Canada and of all its parts.

"For the future of Canada does not depend solely on the solution of our fiscal and constitutional problems. It depends even more on the solution of our economic problems. And whatever may be the status of Quebec in the Canada of tomorrow, closer co-operation at the economic level will always be necessary, both for Quebec and for the rest of the country."

When Quebec called for wider autonomy and greater fiscal liberty it was not to co-operate less with the whole of Canada but to "co-operate more greatly and more effectively."

Swart to Retire

PRETORIA, South Africa (UPI)—South African President Charles Swart, 71, will retire from office next May, one year before his present term would expire, it was announced today. Swart has been president since May 31, 1961.

DISTRESSED

Church Group Criticizes Injunctions

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Inter-Church Committee on Church and Industry issued a statement Monday criticizing the use of ex-parte court injunctions in labor disputes.

Said the statement: "We wish to publicly register our concern over the prevailing atmosphere in industrial relations in British Columbia. We have recently made a study of the B.C. labor legislation and are particularly distressed at the use of ex-parte injunctions.

"These are granted without both parties being present in the same court of law and we are convinced that this is a violation of the principle that justice must not only be done but must seem to be done."

The statement was signed by five ministers and two laymen from Lutheran, Anglican, United, Presbyterian, Roman Catholic and Mennonite denominations.

The statement said the comment represented only the view of the committee and did not commit any of the denominations to the same view. However, one of the members, Rev. Ray Gostelow, chairman of the United Church's evangelical and social service committee, said he expects the injunction question will be discussed at a United Church denominational meeting Nov. 24.

Defy Law If Needed

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)— Ontario unionists were urged Monday to defy the law if necessary to get injunctions in labor disputes abolished.

Gordon Lambert of the United Auto Workers local at St. Catharines told the Ontario Federation of Labor the time has come to start demanding and demonstrating to eliminate injunctions.

"I'm talking about civil disobedience.

"We must not be content to continue with our hat-in-hand attitude" toward the Ontario government.

The federation opened its 10th annual convention Monday.

Murray Tate of the Toronto Labor Council said that for laws to be respected they must be respectable laws.

SUN ECLIPSE TARGET FOR WORLD'S CAMERAS

WASHINGTON (WP) — What promises to be the most scrutinized eclipse of the sun in history is due to occur next Saturday over South America.

The first of its kind in 18 months and only the 39th this century, the eclipse will begin just after sunrise in the Pacific Ocean west of the Galapagos Islands and end less than three hours later in the Atlantic, southeast of Buenos Aires.

But in that time it will have been seen and studied by at least 500 scientists from more than a dozen nations, who spent 20 million dollars just getting men and equipment to South America for the event.

Before it ends, the eclipse will have its picture taken more than one million times.

Shipboard cameras will photograph it at sea, balloons and planes will race it across Peru and Bolivia into Argentina and Brazil. And along its 55-mile path, 33 rockets will be launched to heights of up to 150 miles for space cameras to photograph not only the sun during eclipse, but the moon causing it and the earth below feeling its effects.

Even the Gemini space twins due to bel lfted into space on Wednesday will try to photograph the eclipse.

Present flight plans call for astronauts James A. Lovell and Edwin E. (Buzz) Aldrin to spot the eclipse during the third day of their four-day space flight. If they should come on it, Buzz Aldrin will open the hatch of the Gemini capsule, stand in his seat and take black and white pictures with a movie camera of the sun in eclipse.

What Aldrin will see — if only for five to six seconds — is one of nature's most spectacular treats.

For it is only when a new moon lines itself up directly between the sun and earth and only when the new moon is at its closest distance to earth that a total solar eclipse takes place.

BREATHTAKING

When it does take place, the effects are breathtaking.

Just before the sun is covered, small spots of bright light — called Bailey's Beads for the British astronomer who first described them — can be seen speckled around the forward edge of the moon. The spots are the sun's last rays shining through the valleys and gorges of he moon's rim.

When the moon completely covers the sun, the solar corona suddenly bursts into view, revealing the normally invisible outer layer of solar atmosphere. At the same time, scarlet tongues of flaming hydrogen — called solar prominences — can be seen from in back of the moon's rim as they stream out from the sun into space for thousands of miles.

The final phase of the exlipse may see Bailey's Beads flickering across the moon again as it begins to drift away from the sun.

The most noticeable effects of a solar eclipse can be felt right on earth, and it is these effects that eclipse watchers will most be looking for.

BLACKOUT PERIOD

Scientists would like to know more about what it is that gives the air a glow during blackout periods like exlipses, what it is during an eclipse that causes a buildup in ozone in the atmosphere and in electrical currents on the ground itself.

One thing biologists will be watching is the reaction of animals to a sudden loss of sunlight and the quick cooling of the air that comes with it.

Most of the airborne experiments — there are 40 — will focus on the sun's corona, which because it is only one-millionth as bright as the sun can be studied only during total eclipse.

One thing scientists know about the corona: Its shape depends on sunspot activity. Since astronauts soon will be venturing for longer periods than ever before in space, anything science can learn about radiation-causing sunspots is considered useful.

CARS AND PLANES MEET

Since the only road leading from Gibralter into Spain crosses an airfield, a stoplight must control traffic between landings and take-offs.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: How do you tell whether a horse is sick or just sleepy? I'm not too worried about Prince because he has been this way since last spring. But I'm writing because if he was sick, I would want to get him well so I could ride him more. Now he's no fun to ride because he stops and goes to sleep all the time. — L.V.

DEAR L.V.: The time involved would tend to rule out an acute attack of equine sleeping sickness, but one of many diseases certainly could be involved here. While it's true that a nervous horse isn't necessarily a desirable riding companion, Prince is a little too tranquil for anyone's good, including his own. I agree a check-up is in order. Whether the veterinarian may be able to get a little more power out of this particular horse depends, obviously, on the cause of Prince's poor performance.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My sister is a practical nurse and twice now she has tried to cure her birds of pneumonia with a shot of penicillin. She "cured" the pneumonia both times. But the birds died. She says they would have died anyway, but I wonder if maybe the needles aren't what killed them. What do you think? — P.E.

DEAR P.E.: Your sister, the nurse, has found a rather impractical — but effective — way of eliminating parakeets, regardless of their original ailments. Injectable penicillin is frequently fatal to parakeets. Injections in themselves are often indicated, and prove beneficial to birds, be they parakeets, parrots or canaries. However, an injection must be in the right place, in the right amount and, obviously, it must contain the right drug.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Tuffy is, I know, too fat, but his big problem is this greasy dandruff. I have been told to give him some corn oil in his food every day and this would help the coat. But won't this oil make him even fatter? What should I do? — C.B.

DEAR C.B.: You didn't mention whether Tuffy is a fat feline or a corpulent canine, but the answer is basically the same. Let the doctor decide, after an examination, whether or not additional fatty acids are indicated in the diet. Tubby Tuffy may have a seborrheic condition of the skin which may be aggravated, rather than helped, by additional fats or oils. Obviously, the oil would compound the corpulence, too, and this may lead to additional problems.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: It has been my custom, in my later years, to sip a little sweet sherry before I retire. One night my Poodle, Tar Baby, discovered she liked it, too. So, of course, she now shares a little with me in the evening. Is this harmful to her in any way? — R.Y.

DEAR R.Y.: Sweet sherry sipping may cause decalcification of the human tooth, but this has not — yet — been proven in the canine. Most likely, Tar Baby's sweet sherry sipping is relatively harmless if, indeed, she is only sipping.

ASK ANDY

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to Jean Robins, age 12, of Westbrook, Maine, for her question:

How do they determine the age of a fossil?

Years ago the remains of an ape-type creature were unearthed in East Africa. The ancient owner of the fossils was given the name Zinjanthropus and a new technique was used to discover when he lived. Chemists knew that through the ages certain atoms of potassium are breaking into isotopes of calcium and argon. Potassium 40 breaks into calcium 40 and argon 40. This decay is slow but it goes on at a steady rate like perfect clockwork. After 1.3 billion years, half the original potassium 40 in every rock sample has changed to calcium 40 and argon 40. Each potassium 40 atom becomes eight small isotopes of calcium and one of argon.

This ratio can be used to figure the age of a rock sample. The amount of remaining potassium 40 is compared with the amount of argon 40. This ratio tells how long the decaying process has been going on. This potassium-argon technique was used to find the age of the rocks in which the famous African fossils were buried. The experts figured that Zinjanthropus lived and died about 1,750,000 years ago.

The remains of plants and animals soon become covered with dirt and debris. A layer of newly formed rock encases them and in time more layers are formed to bury them deeper. We can assume that the fossils and the rocks around them grow old together. The age of the rocks in which a fossil is found is likely to be the age of the fossil.

Loses Its Radioactivity

Radioactive carbon, however, may be used to date the substance of the fossil itself. Cosmic rays smash into air molecules as they zoom down on us from outer space. A number of ordinary carbon atoms become radioactive isotopes called carbon 14 or radiocarbon. Plants and animals are faintly radioactive because they absorb traces of this radiocarbon. The carbon isotope loses its radioactivity at a steady rate, but more traces are added as long as life continues. Then no more is absorbed.

The final quota of radiocarbon is trapped in the remains. It begins to decay and the fossil loses its radioactivity at a steady rate. Experts can tell when a plant or animal lived by figuring the amount of radiocarbon remaining in the fossilized remains. However, radiocarbon is not dependable for dating fossils that are older than 50,000 years.

The normal radioactive carbon and potassium 40 in the air is nothing to scare us. In about a trillion atoms of ordinary carbon, only about one of them is radiocarbon. In about 8,400 atoms of potassium in the air, only one is radioactive potassium. We absorb them with the air we breathe. We have been absorbing a small quota of radioactivity all our lives and our bodies are used to it as are all living things.

LARGE FIRMS FACING BUSINESS FEE BOOST

Large businesses in Esquimalt will likely have their licence fees increased considerably in 1967.

Esquimalt finance committee chairman Art Mebs told council Monday night there is a wide gap between business licence fees in the city and those in Esquimalt.

The VMD operation in James Bay is charged $1,400 for a city licence, he said, while Yarrows, in Esquimalt, pay only $300.

The draft of a new bylaw to close the gap has been prepared and will be presented to council early next year. Licence fees come due May 1.

Although it will be much less than in the city, the fee will definitely be increased, said Couns. Mebs.

The change will affect the bigger businesses only, he said.

GOVERNMENT BLAMED

Gorge Bridge Lag Irks Esquimalt

Esquimalt Council doesn't care how long it took to build Rome.

Councillors think it shouldn't take years to build a new Gorge Bridge.

Monday night a strong protest was sent to the provincial government over its part in the delay in building the bridge.

A proposed four-lane span, to cost $150,000, plus a $28,000 temporary structure while the bridge is being built, would be half paid by the provincial government.

Esquimalt and Saanich would split the remaining 50 per cent, as the bridge connects the two municipalities over the Gorge on Tillicum Road.

"We've been ready to proceed, and I'm sure Saanich has, for two years now," said Coun. Jim Bryant.

NOT COMMITTED

Municipal funds have been set aside for four years, said public works committee chairman Ed DeCosta.

But no word has come from the department of highways, "and the deputy minister of highways (H. T. Miard) hasn't committed himself at all," said Reeve Ray Bryant.

Even though "I phone about once a week," he added.

The delay is slowly and surely pushing up the cost of the bridge, said the reeve.

"But as long as our costs are going up, their costs are going up, too."

Said Coun. Walter Lock: "The premier has asked the municipalities to hold the line on their expenditures but we can't hold the line on increasing costs."

PIECE OF PROPERTY

Monday night council approved an agreement with Gorge Hotel owners for Esquimalt to acquire a piece of property and a right-of-way to build the temporary bridge.

The agreement was described as "merely a formality" by the reeve.

Salvage Work Draws Fire From Reeve

Oak Bay council Monday decided private garbage dumpers should stick to dumping garbage.

Commenting on the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal committee's technical report on garbage disposal, council agreed with Reeve Allan Cox that the "initial vice "of private dumpers is their salvage operations — burning car bodies and rubberized cable.

Council agreed to propose that salvage operations be banned, even though garbage disposal costs to the municipalities be hiked.

COSTLY

Council was told alternatives to the present open dump on Millstream Road would be sanitary landfill or incineration, either of which would increase costs more than twofold.

But Reeve Cox said "in time we are going to have to go into something else."

PRESS BREAKFAST

In other business council:

- Agreed to share costs of a breakfast for 150 reporters Jan. 9 at the inaugural run of the Centennial train. (Prime Minister Pearson and Premier Bennett are to be guests of honor.)
- Decided to hold a public hearing Nov. 21 at 7:30 p.m. into a new zoning bylaw, given first reading Monday. It consolidates a previous zoning bylaw and amendments to it.
- Ratified a motion by "B" committee to buy 500 Canadian Centennil tulip bulbs, a variety developed in Holland exclusively for Canada's 100th birthday and sold by the Canadian Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. Cost is $125.

"Our family money goes further at North West Trust . . .

Here's why:"

- We used to get 3% interest on our savings account. North West Trust pays 4½%. Now you don't have to be an Einstein to see that's half as much again. And it follows that our money grows 50% faster.
- Our current account earns 4½% interest, too. And another nice thing about North West Trust is that, on current accounts, you get free chequing privileges. No service charges at all.
- And for a safe and sure investment, we've yet to find anything that matches North West Trust Guaranteed Savings Certificates. For example: $55.84 can buy you right now a $100 certificate which matures in ten years. Your original deposit increases by 79% . . . an average yearly increase of 7.9%. And they're cashable at any time!

I'll bet your money can go further at North West Trust, too. Why not call in soon and see. They're open from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday and till 6:00 p.m. on Fridays.

Union Meeting Found 'Bugged'

President Died In Hotel Room

VANCOUVER (CP)—Angus Macphee, a vice-president of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, charged today that a rival pulp union had planted listening devices at its convention.

Mr. Macphee said in a statement that an investigation by his union showed that persons who bugged their convention at the downtown Ritz Hotel were in contact with officials of the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Police said today they seized electronic equipment valued at $600 after a pulp union convention claimed Monday its hotel rooms were "bugged".

Seizure of the equipment came after a day-long investigation triggered by the finding of a listening device in a room where a union president had died Saturday.

A search warrant and the seizure came under the Radio Act which stipulates that a search may be carried out where it is believed there is an unwarranted radio transmitter operating.

David McLeod, an inspector with the department of trans port, was assisting Vancouver police in the case.

Angus McPhee, vice-president of the 2,000-member Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada meeting in convention, said a device was discovered Saturday when delegates attempted to move a portable wall closet in the downtown Ritz Hotel.

"We were shifting the closet when this thing fell off," he said.

He said other delegates examined the device but none thought the convention was being spied upon.

"Sunday, we changed our minds," he said.

Two Anonymous Phone Tips

"We had two anonymous phone tips warning that the whole affair was going down on tape."

He said an electronics company was called in to check the area, and it found a second device on top of a closet in his room.

Equipment, including an amplifier, tape recorder, speaker and headphones, was seized from a room one floor above those where the listening devices were found.

Police said a man found with the equipment was questioned three hours. He was not identified and refused to speak to reporters when he left the hotel.

A hotel spokesman said the room was occupied by two men who signed the register as William J. Dawson and Bud Graham. Both gave addresses in interior Kamloops.

"Both men checked out about noon and said their luggage would be picked up later in the day," the spokesman said.

Police said the electronic equipment was packed inside the luggage.

North Van Private Detectives

A check by reporters showed that men named Graham and Dawson worked for Graham Investigation Services Ltd., a private detective agency in North Vancouver.

When their office was contacted, a woman who answered the telephone said both men were out of town until Nov. 9.

Lloyd D. Craig, 50, the union's president, died in his hotel room early Saturday of a heart attack. He had been union president two years. A lab technicican at a Castlegar pulp mill, Mr. Craig was up for re-election at the convention.

Mr. MacPhee and other union officials refused to speculate the purpose of the "bugging."

"We don't know, but we're going to find out," Mr. MacPhee said.

His union is formed of men who broke away from the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers over a lack of local autonomy.

OFF-YEAR TEST

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Heavy voting appeared today in some key areas as Americans ballotted for a 90th Congress and a broad range of state officials.

President Johnson, who had urged a heavy turnout along with Republican spokesman Richard Nixon, appeared a half hour too soon at Johnson City, Texas, but was allowed to vote away in a kitchen polling place.

A massive early vote appeared in New York, Michigan, Maryland and some other points which have vital national significance.

Racial overtones were involved in Maryland, where the Democratic candidate for governor has appealed to white resentment against the Negro. A heavy number of early Negro votes materialized there today.

The political outlook: An estimated 59,000,000 voters will maintain over-all Democratic control but endorse a swing back toward the centre and right wing after two years of far-reaching liberal legislation.

Main interest focussed on these races:

LOS ANGELES—Republican Ronald Reagan, a political newcomer, today challenged two-term Democrat Edmund G. Brown for California's governorship in an election that could affect the 1968 presidential campaign.

Official sources estimated about 6.2 million voters of the record 8.3 million registered would cast their ballots after the longest, most bitter and probably the most costly gubernatorial campaign in California's history.

Democrat Brown, 61, wound up his campaign Monday night in his home town of San Francisco.

Reagan, 55, a movie and television actor until he ran for governor, closed out his campaign with a 1,200-mile flying tour of metropolitan areas Monday.

Public opinion polls gave Reagan a narrow edge ranging from 2 to 5 per cent over Brown, who hopes to become the first Democrat in history elected to three terms as California governor.

A win for Reagan was certain to make him a force in the 1968 race for the Republican presidential nomination.

NEW YORK—Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller today placed his famous name, his record of eight years in office and his future as a GOP kingmaker in the hands of six million New York voters.

At the close of a long and expensive campaign to patch up his own political vulnerability, the wear and tear of two terms in Albany, it was a toss-up whether the voters would give Rockefeller four more years.

The alernative was to turn the reins of the empire state over to an effective vote-getter but generally colorless Democratic regular, New York city council president Frank D. O'Connor.

The result of today's balloting was expected to turn on the showings of two minor party candidates, Liberal Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. and Conservative Paul Adams. Neither was given any chance of winning but either could swing the election to one of the front-runners.

The election was also expected to have an effect on the presidential ambitions of two recently adopted New Yorkers, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D—N.Y., and former vice-president Richard M. Nixon.

★ ★ ★

DETROIT—Republican Gov. George Romney and his highly acclaimed vote-pulling power received the supreme test today in an election that could boom or bust the Michigan candidate's 1968 presidential ambitions.

That Romney would swamp his Democratic opponent, Zolton Ferency, was a foregone conclusion, according to political observers. The big question was whether Romney's coattails were broad enough and strong enough to retain in office Sen. Robert P. Griffin (R—Mich.).

The GOP governor has long been anxious to prove he can alter his reputation as a big winner among Republican losers. He got the chance in the tight race between Griffin and former Democratic Gov. G. Mennen ("Soapy") Williams.

CHICAGO—Illinois voters today decide a senatorial race that pitted a veteran lawmaker and a political machine against youthful enthusiasm and an appealing "image".

The veteran, white-haired Sen. Paul H. Douglas and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's Democratic organization were the underdogs. The pre-election polls favored Douglas' opponent, the industrial "golden boy" turned politician, Charles H. Percy.

A Percy win—and he expected to win if the turnout ran close to the record 4.3 million forecast—could lead him into the ranks of Republican possibilities for future national office.

The campaign was interrupted for some time after the still-unsolved murder of Percy's daughter.

AS DEBATE DRAGS ON

Money Supply Crisis Looms for Government

OTTAWA (CP)—With the skirmishing going into its seventh day today, the battle lines remain just where they started in the Commons money supply debate.

Conservatives continued to shoot for committee study of Defence Minister Hellyer's bill to unify the armed forces before the Commons is asked to give its second reading — approval in principle.

Mr. Hellyer stands fast on his line that such a study should come after second reading.

New Democrats continued to snipe at the government's approval of a pipeline from the West that would loop south into the United States to avoid stiff construction costs in the rugged Northern Ontario bush.

And Creditiste Leader Caouette took advantage of the wide-open scope of a supply debate to give MPs a dollop of his party's monetary policy.

NEEDS PAYROLL MONEY

Looming over the battleground is the need for the government to get spending authority to meet payrolls and other upcoming bills. The first civil service payroll of the month comes up next Thursday, with others following Monday and Tuesday.

New Democratic Leader Douglas said the stage was set for a rerun of the extended 1964 flag debate, delaying handling of important legislation until after Christmas.

Near the end of Monday's sitting, Mr. Hellyer answered some of the defence questions posed by Conservative critics.

He rejected their complaints that there was a lack of information on steps leading to unification.

In the three years since the Liberals created the defence committee, it has held 81 meetings, heard 103 witnesses and compiled 2,355 pages of written records. The sessions had covered every aspect of defence—the roles assigned to each service, the capabilities and the equipment it would be given.

He repeated his argument that opposition attempts to equate certain manpower shortages in the forces with low morale are off base. The problem was that the forces had to compete with a booming economy for manpower.

The government was making improvements in pay and other benefits to be competitive in the

50-Cent Profit On Bacon

OTTAWA (CP) — Supermarkets were selling bacon at $1.42 a pound in September when at least one meat packer was charging them a wholesale price of only 92 cents a poind, Senator David Croll (L — Ontario), said Monday.

He quoted other wholesale-retail price spreads just as big in questioning officials of Burns Foods Ltd. before the Senate-Commons committee on living costs.

It was an "inordinately high profit," he suggested.

Burns President A. J. E. Child said it was possible the chain stores were taking a high markup on bacon to balance a low markup on another item.

The Senator said this didn't satisfy him.

The country was crying and shouting about food costs.

"You've heard it too. Aren't you concerned . . . at what the merchants are doing with your product?"

Mr. Child said the volume of bacon sales is rising even at the higher prices. The price obviously was not driving the consumer away from the product.

Senator Croll took his wholesale figures from Burns' own selling prices for September. His retail figures were from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Italy Charges Pair With Spy Activities

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Police today filed espionage charges against a Hungarian commercial attache and an Italian who illegedly exchanged information about military bases in Italy.

A state attorney issued arrest warrants against Ferenc Budai, first secretary in the Hungarian commercial office here, and Domizio Villa, 24, who works for a transportation company.

They had been held without charges since Nov. 3, when police said they were caught "exchanging military information concerning Italy's northeastern area" in a Milan square.

Authorities did not say what information was involved. The northeastern area includes a U.S. NATO base in Verona.

'LIFE'S WORK IS GONE'

Florence Pleads for Aid

FLORENCE, Italy (AP)—Emilio Pucci, internationally-known designer and leader of the Florence fashion industry, appealed to the world today to help this flood-stricken city.

He said unless massive financial aid came, the city of arts, antiquities, leather work and higher fashion might never recover. He expressed hope for long-term credits.

Pucci spoke as a fashion arbiter and member of Parliament.

Standing near his wrecked workshop, he pointed to ruined heaps of garments and clothes being shoveled into trucks for disposal.

"My entire life's work is gone. Yet I know that I personally shall begin again. I'm sure of it. But look what happened to the smaller artisans of Florence. More than 6,000 of the shops here have been destroyed."

He said Florence could never manage to raise the money needed to salvage its ruined economy "and I'm afraid the state's finances are too limited to help us substantially."

$160 MILLION DAMAGE TO TREASURES

ROME (Reuters) — Floods caused damage totalling about $160,000,000 to the art treasures of Florence Giovanni Elkan, Italian education ministry undersecretary, said today. (See story Page 31.)

He told reporters more than 600 paintings were damaged and the famous Crucifixion by Cimabue, 1240-1302, was ruined.

More than 1,000 manuscripts and books of incalculable historical value in the national library in Florence were partly destroyed.

302 CONG FOUND DEAD AFTER BATTLE

SAIGON (AP) — United States infantrymen battled an estimated 1,000 charging Viet Cong for four hours in Tay Ninh province today and reported 302 enemy bodies counted after the fighting ended.

The battle resumed at 6 a.m. for troops of the U.S. First Division who lost contact almost completely Monday with the tough Viet Cong force that had battled U.S. troops for four days.

Swift's President Lacks Facts

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator David Croll asked today for a special recall of Swift Canadian Co. Ltd. executives to be cross-examined on their sales figures by the Senate-Commons committee on living costs.

Senator Croll made his request after Swift president P. L. Ayers appeared before the committee without bringing along any facts on gross sales.

Asked whether he could even estimate Swift sales for the last three years in round figures, he said he could not.

"I'm surprised that the president of the company doesn't know what its gross sales are," the senator said.

Ron Basford, committee co-chairman, promised that a steering committee meeting Wednesday will consider recall of Swift soon for corss-examination after the figures have been made available.

Mr. Ayers also said he did not know what share of the meat packing industry Swift holds, nor what Swift pays its parent Swift and Co. of Chicago for research and other services.

Jewel Thieves Grab $200,000 in Loot

HALIFAX (CP) — Police today were investigating theft of between $150,000-$200,000 worth of jewelry and stock from a downtown Halifax store Monday night. Police said it was one of the biggest hauls from a single break-in in the city's history.

Leon Neima, president of Leon Neima Ltd., said items taken included loose diamonds, rings, watches and valuable collections of gold coins and old coins. The coins alone were valued at $50,000.

Police said it appeared the thieves hid in a washroom on the second floor of the Barrington Street building which houses the jewelry store. Sometime during the night they made their way to a stockroom, tore up flooring and cut their way through a ceiling down into the store.

Moon Shot on Beam After Minor Mishap

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Lunar Orbiter II lost and then regained its lock on the guiding star Canopus today midway in its 250,000-mile flight to photograph potential astronaut landing sites on the moon.

Regaining the celestial guidepost increased chances of success in a critical steering manoeuvre scheduled later today.

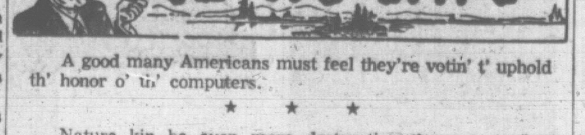
The manoeuvre, an 18½-second firing of a rocket motor expected to increase the craft's 2,200-mile-an-hour speed by 47 miles an hour, is designed to aim Lunar Orbiter II closer at the moon.

GEMINI FLIGHT DELAYED

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The Gemini 12 wrapup mission of astronauts James Lovell and Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin was postponed today from Wednesday to Thursday because of a problem in one of the program's most trouble-free Titan 2 boosters.

The United States Space Agency said the four-day rendezvous and spacewalk mission was tentatively rescheduled to start at 2:16 p.m., EST. (11:16 A.M. PST.) Thursday with the launch of Gemini's Atlas-Agena target rocket.

Lovell and Aldrin will follow 98 minutes later.



A good many Americans must feel they're votin' t' uphold th' honor o' th' computers.

Crestbrook Profits Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Crestbrook Timber Ltd., which plans to build a pulp mill in partnership with a Japanese company, reported an increased net profit Monday of $684,710 for the nine months ended Sept. 30.

Earnings for the same period in 1965 were $440,736.

V. C. Brown, company president, said there has been progress on an application to the Japanese government for its approval of a Crestbrook deal with Honshu-Mitsubishi to build the pulp mill in the Kootenay region of B.C.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP)—Grain prices held to a narrow range today at the Winnipeg grain exchange. The closing of American markets for U.S. elections limited trading.

Oilseeds showed some activity. Hedging sales were in evidence early in the day but were well absorbed in later trading. Impending news on the Argentine exchange situation limited trading.

There were no reports of export business in oilseeds, although some light shipping orders were established.

Oats and barley prices were steady with trading mostly of domestic interest. Rye prices firmed after an irregular start.

Lakehead prices for IWA: class two and domestic wheat were unchanged.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Gains Recorded At Vancouver

All sections moved upwards in improved trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange today.

The industrial section saw Home A and North West Life up $1.25 and Gill was .50 better at $6.75.

In the oils, Futurity improved .05 to .72 and Royal American also put on .05.

The mining section was paced by Highmont which reached a new high of $1.94 before retreating to $1.84, up .10 on the morning.

Dynasty recovered some of its recent losses and gained .75 to $7. Pyramid was also strong and was up .15 at $6.20.

Buchanan, however, went the other way and reached a new 1966 low of .35.

New York exchange and most other U.S. securities and commodities markets were closed today for the congressional elections.

AT TORONTO in the industrial list, Moore Corp. was up ⅝ to 82, Massey-Ferguson and Alcan ⅜ each to 22⅝ and 29¾. Interprovincial Pipe Line declined ¾ to 76½ and Royal Bank ½ to 67½.

Western oils were higher with Banff and Central Del Rio up ¼ each to 13 and 10⅝ while Union Oil was off ⅛ to 29⅞.

Base metals were lower with Cominco down ⅜ to 32⅝ while Area jumped 20 cents to 3.60 in speculative mines.

Golds showed slight improvement with Dome up ¼ to 36¾ and Kerr-Addison ⅛ to 11½.

AT MONTREAL the market was mixed today in light trading.

Industrials were up with Massey-Ferguson adding ½ at 22⅝ and Moore Corp. ¾ at 82¼. Labatt was ahead ½ at 17¾ and Du Pont and Steinberg's A exdividend each were up ¼ at 36 and 18½ respectively.

Fraser companies lost one point at 22½ and Calgary Power ½ at 20½.

AT LONDON equities moved lower on the stock exchange today as recent company statements underlined the effects of the British credit squeeze. A sharp rise in U.S. bill rates and the unlikelihood of an early lowering of British interest rates made for caution.

However, Gilts recovered initial widespread falls and were little changed on balance.

Dollar stocks were easier on balance. General Motors gave ground on a dividend cut. Consolidated Mining was a firm spot but other Canadian stocks were little changed.

Canadian banks were easier and home banks, discount houses and insurances lost a little ground. Leading industrial stocks were dull.

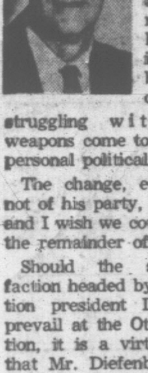
Whatever else one can say about Mr. Diefenbaker, he is a Canadian landmark, and has been these many years. But time erodes, and the man who will fight to retain his Conservative leadership at Ottawa this long weekend is far removed from the Chief who swept his party to a landslide victory four federal elections past.



Mr. Diefenbaker was fighting for a clearly defined cause then. His powers were at their zenith, his mistakes still to make. Today, with no rational hope of another term as Canada's prime minister and his strength in opposition badly deteriorated, he is struggling with whatever weapons come to hand for his personal political survival.

The change, even to those not of his party, is saddening, and I wish we could be spared the remainder of the tragedy.

Should the strong Tory faction headed by PC Association president Dalton Camp prevail at the Ottawa convention, it is a virtual certainty that Mr. Diefenbaker will be removed as leader by secret ballot next year.

If by some remote chance, his personal magnetism earns him a reprieve, he must contest the next election at an advanced age, with a splintered party's dubious support.

All this adds up to messy political demise for a man who deserves better. I wish—and so today does many another Canadian without regard to party — that Mr. Diefenbaker would spare his people, his country and himself by resigning from the Progressive Conservative leadership before the convention begins.

★

Rarely, in fact, has a man's ethical course been indicated more plainly.

For proof, we have but to look to the state of Tory affairs as it stands today.

The leadership quarrel which was brewing long before Mr. Camp fetched it into full blaze now amounts to a revolution. Through much of Canada, the Progressive Conservative party is split as it never has been before.

Youth will have none of it, a circumstance which, if allowed to continue, means a lingering death by attrition. There are few recruits coming along to replace the gray heads.

It is not enough in politics to be rescued by a platoon of prairie grandmothers, as Dief was when his leadership was challenged in 1956.

True, in the election campaign that followed, he displayed fight and stamina to a degree that startled even the hard-to-impress newsmen of his entourage.

But I don't think even this amazing man can pull off another such rally. The odds against him, within his party and outside it, are too heavy. heavy.

★

It is for Mr. Diefenbaker to give his party the chance to re-organize and strengthen itself which it must have if it is to regain decent stature.

Were he to resign now — this very week — the Tories would gain the time they need. A federal election in the Centennial year of 1967 would be most unlikely; in the breathing-space afforded, a successor of sterner metal than Hees, or Fulton, those perennial princes of the Tory court, might be found.

And Canadians of whatever party run to caution; they like to get the heft of a new leader, and one more comfortable when a strong opposition brings checks and balances to their national Parliament.

I am a Liberal in a casual sort of way, but this does not prevent me from considering John Diefenbaker a great Canadian. By resigning now, I think he would guarantee that he would be remembered as such by the country he strove honestly, though not always successfully, to serve.

He brought his party out of the wilderness where it had languished for so many years, to the edge of the promised land. That in itself was an accomplishment which will not be forgotten.

Dief should now yield up the mantle, content himself with the role of elder statesman, and give more time to his fishing.

TWO JAILED FOR THEFT OF LIQUOR

Two of three youths who broke into a downtown restaurant Sunday evening were handed lengthy prison terms today.

"Neither of you has indicated any intention of foresaking your criminal ways," Magistrate Ostler told George Edwards, 24, and Patrick Radford, 19.

Edwards was sentenced to 2½ years in the penitentiary and Radford 18 months in jail.

JUST RELEASED

Both have lengthy criminal records. Radford had just been released from prison a few days ago and Edwards completed a sentence this summer.

The pair, together with Dennis Fontaine, 19, were arrested Sunday night and later admitted stealing five bottles of liquor, when they broke into the Coach and Four in Bastion Square.

All theree gave a downtown hotel as their address.

Fontaine will be sentenced Nov. 18 after Magistrate Ostler has studied a probation officer's report.

The trio first asked for a week remand when they appeared in court Monday morning but later made a second court appearance to plead guilty to the breaking, entering and theft charge.

$30,000 For City In One Hour

Victoria's assistant assessor Jack Ozard worked at a $30,000 an hour clip for the city Monday.

But only for the one hour devoted to a land tax sale which saw 13 parcels of land quickly sold to the highest bidders.

During the 60-minute stint as auctioneer Mr. Ozard raised the level of the treasury by $29,179.

Regulations require the handful of bidders pay cash for the property on the day of the sale.

STILL TIME

The sale does not mean the end of the line for delinquent taxpayers. They still have one year in which they can raise the money to pay the taxes and retain their property.

There is a penalty clause.

In addition to raising the tax money the delinquent must also contribute six per cent to reimburse the purchaser at the tax sale.

Vandals Again Hit Washrooms In City Square

For the second night in a row vandals have battered washrooms at Centennial Square.

It was the ladies' turn Monday night.

First a fire was doused in a waste paper receptacle about 7 p.m. Three hours later police found six paper dispensers had been pried open and one torn from a wall.

After the second incident the rooms were locked for the night.

Sunday night damage totaled about $200 when a toilet bowl in the men's washroom was smashed after papers stuffed in it were set alight.

TROUBLE ON TRACK NO. 1

Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson will be in Victoria January 9 to officially start the half-mile-long Confederation train on its journey across Canada.

So will Wayne and Schuster and 150 assorted newsmen from all over the world.

But Victorians won't get a chance to see the famous comedians in action. They're being flown west just to get the visiting newsmen in the right mood for their long cross-country trek.

In fact the average resident of Greater Victoria will be lucky if he gets to board the train and take the one-hour tour through the pages of history.

TROUBLES GROW

Ald. Robert Baird, chairman of the train committee, told the Greater Victoria Centennial Society Monday afternoon the headaches surrounding the visit of the train are growing fast.

"It would appear that Ottawa made a mistake when they assigned the train to Victoria for eight days," he said. "They did that because they thought the population of Victoria was 53,000. Apparently they forgot to take into consideration the population of Greater Victoria which now totals 173,000."

RESERVED

School children will get the reserved spots for the week-long visit — and that may take up all the allotted hours during which the train crew welcomes visitors.

"I don't see how the general public are going to get on the train at all," said society chairman Coun. Art Mebs. "If they just go for the school children, that will take up all the allotted time."

Society secretary Cecil Wyatt said the time allotted to Victoria is totally inadequate.

EXTRA DAY

"At first the train was to come here for only seven days," he said. "They gave us a one-day extension but it is still totally inadequate."

In addition to the general problem of how to shuffle a mass movement of people through the train's corridors the society is faced with two financial problems.

First they must find a volunteer to foot the bill for cleaning up the site where the train will stand — between Selkirk Water and Tyee Road north of Point Ellice Bridge.

Ald. Baird said the Victoria engineering department could probably handle the clean-up but that he couldn't commit the city to an expenditure of several thousand dollars.

WHO PAYS?

Then comes the problem of who foots the bill for transporting 28,000 school children from their schools to the train depot and back to school.

Ald. Baird suggested that "maybe we should adopt some unique method like charging the children 10 cents a head for transportation."

Other society members felt the school board should be prepared to pick up the tab.

The problems were tabled for further study.

PIONEERS, YOU CAN DO BETTER

More than 700 pioneer residents of Greater Victoria have applied for Centennial Medals and the total is expected to top 1,000 during the next week.

Even at that Greater Victoria Centennial Society secretary Cecil Wyatt isn't happy with the response.

"We are sure that we have more pioneers than that in the area," he said. Although we feel we have done well to get a thousand applications there must be many more people who qualify."

To receive the medal applicants must have been in Canada before 1892 and, for local applicants, must now be a resident of B.C.

Deadline for applications is Nov. 17.

To date the society has received 12 applications from Central Saanich, 27 from Esquimalt, 90 from Oak Bay, 128 from Saanich and 464 from Victoria.

Two Charges Against Postal Man

A Saanich postal employee will face two charges alleging mishandling of public money when he appears in central court next week.

William Hughes, postmaster at the Mount Tolmie sub post office at 3611 Shelbourne, had his cases remanded a week for election and plea when he appeared this morning.

One charge, under the Post Office Act, reads in part that Hughes "did wilfully and unlawfully fail to deposit with the Registrar-General of Canada public monies entrusted to him . . ." It claims the offences took place between July 21, 1965, and March 23, 1966.

The other charge, under the Financial Administration Act, was not read.

Asphalt Lawn For Tattoo!

Centennial Stadium next year may have the only asphalt lawn in Canada.

A delay in seeding the playing field, caused by picketing of the construction site during a recent labor dispute, may make the asphalting necessary.

Art Webb, director of campus planning for the University of Victoria, said the playing field must be ready by next May 20 for the national Centennial Tattoo scheduled to appear there.

If grass seeds were planted now there is little chance the ground would be ready for the tattoo. A wet spring would mean the 1,500 performers would put on their show while up to their ankles in mud.

And, siad Mr. Webb, there is no turf available for planting that would be good enough to stand up to the beating.

COST $3,000

The only answer appears to be to cover the playing field with asphalt, a job that would cost at least $3,000, Mr. Webb said.

He said the asphalt would have to be lifted later and might possibly be used as a base for the running track planned for the stadium.

Mr. Webb said university officials are finding out how much of an area would have to be asphalted to serve the needs of the tattoo. He said it may not be necessary to asphalt the entire field.

THREE-WEEK DELAY

Mr. Webb said the problem was caused by the recent labor dispute involving carpenters. The construction site of the stadium was picketted.

The pickets caused a three-weeks delary in moving dirt for topsoil on the playing field. By the time the dispute was settled and work resumed on the seeding, the rains had started.

Mr. Webb said the field was churned up by trucks and seeding had to be stopped.

The stadium, at a cost of $500,000, is being erected on university property near Gordon Head and Ruby Roads.

MONEY, MONEY, MONEY!

Unlike Goldfinger, the Greater Victoria Centennial Society doesn't have the Midas' touch.

"It seems to me that everything we do loses money," chairman Coun. Art Mebs, Esquimalt, said Monday.

"The RCMP Musical Ride lost money, the Emily Carr play lost money. Everything seems to be a losing venture. We shall just have to come to grips with this."

Coun. Mebs made his comment following a gloomy report which stated that the RCMP Ride ran up a $2,000 deficit and that more of the same could be expected when the final figures are totalled for the Emily Carr play.

Society Calls Help To Avoid 'Real Mess' In Staging Pageant

The Greater Victoria Centennial Society will ask the Intermunicipal Committee to back a 1967 pageant to the tune of $24,000.

Program co-ordinator Gerry Gosley told the society Monday afternoon that $28,000 is left in the budget to stage all events in 1967 but that a pageant would gobble up all but $4,000.

Society member Irene Warren said a locally produced pageant would make money and that no backing would be required.

"We had a budget of $28,000 in 1962 and took in $32,000," she said. "Everyone I talk to say 'let's have one great big event' and the pageant would be that."

OUT ON LIMB

Chairman Coun. Art Mebs said he could see no alternative but to ask the Intermunicipal Committee to back the pageant in case of loss.

"I agree it should make money," he said. "But we can't go out on a limb without backing. If we should lose money we could be in a real mess."

The idea of finding a sugar-daddy in the intermunicipal committee received the cold-water treatment from Saanich council Monday night.

"The last thing we need is an extravagant extravaganza," said Reeve High Curtis.

He made the statement after society representative for Saanich, Coun. Digby Kier, advised council the society will be seeking backing for the big event.

Coun. Kier warned council that to date the general public had not been over-enthusiastic over centennial events.

"We have only been charging minimal amounts, but the people are not coming out," he said. "We have received excellent co-operation from the press, everything is in the paper, but no one comes out."

The society decided to appeal to the intermunicipal committee anyway.

"We can go to them and point out that we shall probably break even and may make money," Coun. Mebs said. "If they will back us we shall go ahead."

Asked following the meeting what would happen if the intermunicipal group turned the request down Coun. Mebs answered: "There just won't be a pageant, that's all."

Esquimalt council has already said it will not contribute any more tax dollars to centennial projects.

Reeve Ray Bryant made the announcement some months ago when the pageant idea touched off a furore in the area because the society was considering bringing in United States producers to run the show and push ticket sales.

MARIANNE GRUNERT
. . . painter who looks like a model

SHE PAINTS, PAINTS, PAINTS

Determination Amid the Chaos

This is the first article in a series about artists who live in this area. Some are older and well established, others are young and unknown. But there is an increasing number of them who have come to live on southern Vancouver Island. The series will turn the spotlight on them.

By DESMOND BILL

Marianne Grunert is 18, looks like a model, and intends to be a painter.

At present she lives in one room at the Albany Hotel, passing the time by reading Neitzsche and Dostoevsky or painting herself as she is reflected in a mirror.

Her room is a great chaos: there is a bed, usually piled high with things there is no space for elsewhere, canvases stacked around the walls, a sink, one table covered with paints and brushes, a radiator strewn with clothes, and the mirror. There is no chair.

She sleeps here, eats here, paints here.

She says her boy friend "sees to it that I don't starve."

She is, in fact, the epitome of the struggling artist although she does not like to think of herself in that way. She is too practical.

She says, matter-of-factly, that she would waste her time going to art school. She spent one semester at Vancouver School of Art but left because she thought it was a place for commercial artists.

'TIES YOU DOWN'

"The students there don't know what they want to do. It is too much of an institution and it ties you down. The courses weren't at all relevant to what I wanted."

Miss Grunert says, "The school teaches everything up to a certain level but everyone comes out the same. It is not personal. There was no room in it for me."

But leaving was a test of her nerve and her seriousness about being an artist.

"I felt safe going to school. It was an easy justification if anyone asked me what I was doing."

Now, if you ask her what she is doing, she'll tell you she is painting.

FAST ANSWER

Trouble is, she is young, unknown and can't tell you she graduated from an approved art school. But she has a fast answer for anyone who questions her credentials.

"People who say I should study at an art school for a few years before trying to earn a living as a painter have not seen the work I do."

She is beginning to get a few commissions, mainly for portraits. She still hesitates to ask a lot of money for paintings often asking only enough to keep herself going in art supplies and groceries for a week.

Her main concern at present is to get enough work to live without having to take a casual job in order to get by.

Says the green-eyed artist: "I want to be a worthwhile painter and the only way to do it is by painting, painting, painting."

Home Ransacked

Thieves ransacked an Oak Bay home overnight but apparently left empty-handed.

Police said entry was forced through the basement at 620 Newport, the home of Mrs. Hazel Wood.

Fallers Back 'Cleaning Up' At Jordan R.

Fallers returned to work today but a Jordan River logging camp remained closed for the rest of the crew.

"They've just got a little cleaning up to do," said D. F. McNeil, manager of the Canadian Puget Sound Lumber and Timber camp.

"There will be a few men working for a while, a week or so that's all."

He declined comment on the company's sudden closure of the camp Monday or on charges by the International Woodworkers of America, which represents 60 loggers at the operation.

DRIVERS FIRED

Before the camp was closed, six truck drivers were dismissed on separate days for refusing to move their vehicles prior to the stated start of working at 8 a.m. Grievances by the union are pending.

Murray Drew, local IWA president, said he is seeking a meeting with the company later this week.

But if satisfactory arrangements cannot be made, "we're going to apply to the Board of Industrial Relations to issue an order to prosecute the company for not adhering to the act."

The dispute involves hours of work, overtime and the posting of notices regarding working times.

Porteous to Quit School Board In Rural Saanich

Alex Porteous, chairman of the rural Saanich school board, will resign at the end of this year.

Mr. Porteous, who is quitting in the middle of his two-year term, said his resignation is for personal reasons and has nothing to do with school affairs.

Mr. Porteous, executive assistant to Health Minister Martin, was first elected to the seven-member board two years ago for a one-year term. He was re-elected at the end of last year and then became chairman.

His resignation means there will be five vacancies to be filled in this year's elections instead of four.

Faulty Fireplace Blamed in Blaze On Fairfield Road

A blaze in a wall behind a fireplace brought firemen to a Fairfield Road residence at about 4 a.m. today.

A department spokesman estimated it would cost about $200 to replace the wall pulled apart to get at the fire in the home of Fred Lang, 962 Fairfield.

A defective fireplace is believed to have started the trouble.

BUNN HITS BACK

Teachers Called Unrealistic

An angry school trustee today accused Greater Victoria teachers of "ignoring the facts of life" in their current dispute with the school board.

Peter Bunn said teachers are being unrealsistic, "and they know it," in asking the board to give a firm commitment that it will reduce the size of classes in the system.

Said Mr. Bunn, chairman of the board's building committee, "Why don't they put pressure on the department of education to let us build the schools we have already planned, instead of trying to harass the school board."

MORE SCHOOLS

Mr. Bunn said teachers know that class sizes can only be reduced if more schools are built. They also know the board cannot get government permission to build two schools which it has already planned and budgeted for.

Mr. Bunn was responding to two telegrams sent to the school board by Greater Victoria Teachers' Association. One message again asked for a commitment by the board to improve teaching conditions and the other repeated a demand that the board resume negotiations with the teachers on a salary dispute.

School board chairman John Porteous refused to comment directly on both requests, which have previously been turned down by the board.

But, he emphasized, "We are not trying to dodge negotiations, we are not trying to say that class sizes shouldn't be reduced, and we are not trying to deny teachers a just salary increase."

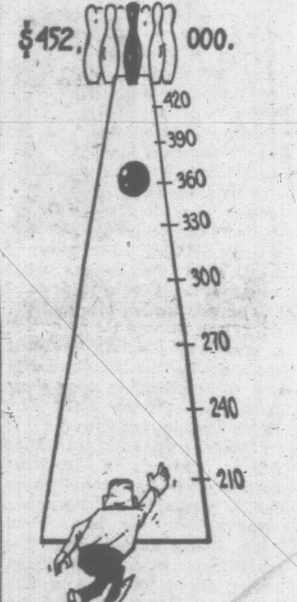
"Negotiations failed to bring about a salary settlement and a government conciliator also failed. Teachers can still ask for conciliation to continue until the statutory time limit runs out."

600 TO QUIT

G.V.T.A. spokesmen have indicated that about 600 teachers will quit the school system if a salary settlement is imposed by arbitration rather than negotiations.

The spokesmen said the teachers would leave at the end of this year and not at the end of the school year, as earlier reported.

Mr. Bunn said that before the board can give teachers any commitment on reduction of class sizes it is necessary to get approval of a school building referendum from the government. It also is necessary for ratepayers to approve the referendum, and government permission is again necessary before contracts for construction can be awarded.



CLOSER to target today by $10,217 was the community chest tenpinner above. His effort (your effort) has now covered 79.6 per cent of the distance toward the $452,000 target. Total collected at noon for Greater Victoria welfare and service agencies was $360,091.

Ask The Times

Q. When did Victoria Maple Leaf star Andy Hebenton's 1000 consecutive league game streak start? D. S.

A. March 8, 1952. Andy was at that time a Victoria Cougars star.

Q. I live in Oak Bay and will vote again in December on fluoridation of water for my municipality. But like many I am unsure. Is fluoridation as good as it proponents say it is? Can it do as much harm as its opponents fear? G. K.

A. According to studies on file, fluoridation indisputably reduces tooth decay in children.

And according to the most comprehensive of these, a two-year report prepared prior to Toronto's fluoridation scheme in 1962, the only proven ill effect is a mottling of tooth enamel if too heavy a concentration of fluorides is accidentally released into a water supply.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to the Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily

All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest. The Times does not undertake to solve conundrums or legal problems. Nor will it attempt to put a value on old coins, stamps or antiques. These should be submitted to a dealer.

MILITARY FLAVOR

Several of His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor's commitments this week have a military flavor, in keeping with Remembrance Day on Friday when His Honor will lay a wreath at the Cenotaph and take the salute at the march past which follows the ceremony. Later, he will attend a luncheon in the Bay Street Armory, to be given by the commanding officer and officers of the Fifth (British Columbia) Field Battery, Royal Regiment of Canadian Artillery. Thursday evening, His Honor will attend the Fourandex No. 6 Company's Armistice dinner, to be held in the Bay Street Armory. He will be accompanied by aide-de-camp Major Norman Featherstone. His Honor will inspect the company on his arrival.

Three Baptized

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles (Chuck) Bennett was baptized Dale Ronald in a ceremony in St. Columba Church, Sunday. His godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Jerald Harris and Mr. Ken Oliver. Grandparents of the little boy are Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bennett, Mrs. A. Preece and the late Mr. W. R. Preece. In the same ceremony, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. David Gale were baptized Michelle Ann and Sharon Lynn. Their godparents are Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Thornton and Mr. and Mrs. Art Young. Rev. John Vickers officiated. Later, more than 12 guests attended a tea in the Bennett home on Alexander Road while Mr. and Mrs. Gale entertained at a tea in their Lambie Drive home.

Travel Overseas

British Columbia House continues to be a pivot for people from Vancouver Island who call there while in London, Eng. Recent signatures in the visitors' book include those of Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Holroyd, Mr. and Mrs. J. Morton Jones, Mr. John H. F. Turner, all of Victoria; Mrs. Doris MacConnachie, Sidney; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Klein of Duncan, and Mr. and Mrs. Henry P. Estlin of Parksville.

Far East Trip

An extended holiday touring Japan is in store for Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Goodridge of Forshaw Road, who left Vancouver recently in the P and O Liner Iberia for the far eastern country. Mr. Goodridge, who has been studying Japanese for a number of years, is making his second visit to that country. This is Mrs. Goodridge's first visit to the Orient.

Up-Island Party

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Baker will travel to Nanaimo on Saturday, Nov. 19, to hold an "open house" for Mr. Baker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Baker. There will be about 200 guests at the affair which will be in celebration of the honor couple's golden wedding anniversary. They were married on Nov. 23, 1916. Mr. Baker is their only child. There are four grandchildren. Also attending the celebration, which will last from 2 to 6 p.m. in the honor couple's home at 1020 Breckin Road, will be Mrs. Harvey Baker's parents, Mr. and Mrs. K. O. Bell, also of Victoria. Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Baker moved to Nanaimo three years ago after living in Lantzville for 20 years. Prior to this, Mr. Baker was a grocer at Coombs for 15 years.

Mainland Guests

Out-of-town guests travelling from Vancouver to attend the Taylor-Strong wedding included Mr. A. F. Taylor, Mr. Richard Brown, Mr. Robert Brown and Mr. and Mrs. D. Fairful. Other guests here in Victoria for the wedding were Mr. A. Watters of Gold River, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Butler of Nanoose Bay.

Will Represent Canadian Mothers

TORONTO (CP) — Great-grandmother Josephine Stephens of Toronto will pin three Silver Crosses to her coat Nov. 11 — each representing a son killed in the Second World War — to place a wreath in the Remembrance Day ceremonies at Ottawa.

She was recently chosen by the Royal Canadian Legion as national motherhood representative for the ceremonies.

"The ceremony will bring back lots of sad memories, but I can live with them now," she said in an interview.

"I'm proud to be still here to represent my boys and all the others who were killed in the war."

Her sons, all pilots, were William Colville, 25, lost off the coast of Newfoundland in 1942; Alexander Colville, 28, who died in France in 1944; and Sandy Colville, 24, killed on a strafing mission over France in 1944.

VETERAN HUSBAND

Later Mrs. Stephens' husband and oldest daughter died. In 1949 she married her present husband, George, a First World War veteran.

Mrs. Stephens, in her 60s, lived during the war in Bowmanville, Ont., where her house became home to hundreds of servicemen from all over the world.

She still receives many letters from those who survived the war.

Mrs. Stephens, the 12th Silver Cross mother chosen to be present at the Ottawa ceremonies, is the first from Toronto.

The program was started by the Royal Canadian Legion in the belief that the presence of women at the national ceremony would be "more representative of Canadian citizens everywhere."

Lt.-Cmdr. Arthur P. Howard and Mrs. Howard, 925 Parklands Drive, announce the forthcoming marriage of their younger daughter, Joanne Elizabeth, to Mr. Ronald Gary Nicholls, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Bernie Nicholls, 1182 Colville Road. The wedding will take place on Saturday, November 26, in St. Andrew's Chapel, Canadian Forces Base, Esquimalt. Chaplain Gordon Faraday will officiate.

HONOR MISS MURIEL BERTRAND

Parties Herald Coming Wedding

Many parties and gifts have starred the days which precede the wedding of Miss Muriel Bertrand, who will become the bride of Zolden Banman on Thursday.

Her chosen maid of honor, Miss Louise Merriam, and her mother, Mrs. A. L. Merriam gave a shower in their Wark Street home. Corsages were presented to the honor guest and her mother, Mrs. Douglas Bertrand. Streamers and bows of pink, blue and white decorated Miss Bertrand's chair and the laundry basket that contained gifts. Refreshments were served.

Invited to attend were Mrs. G. Ellis, Mrs. A. Duncan, Mrs. C. Willis, Mrs. T. Boyle and Rosetta, Mrs. S. Wilson, Mrs. M. Parker, Mrs. C. Reid, the Misses Cheryl Redden and Linde Baker.

Mrs. Gordon Ellis entertained at a tea and bathroom shower in the Empress Hotel. Pink carnations were presented to the bride-elect and her mother. Gifts were in a gold Chinese wicker basket. Those invited were Mrs. A. Duncan, Mrs. A. Merriam, Mrs. N. Howard, Mrs. M. Parker, Mrs. I. Sellers, Mrs. J. Lennox, the Misses Louise Merriam and Cheryl Redden.

A novelty corsage of dish cloths and utensils was presented to Miss Bertrand when Mrs. A. Duncan held a kitchen shower in her Dallas Road home. Gifts were displayed in a life-size mannequin, dressed in the groom-elect's work clothes. The refreshments featured a decorated shower cake.

Invitations to attend were received by Mrs. R. Duncan, Mrs. S. Duncan, Mrs. Merriam, Mrs. William Hamilton, Mrs. B. Birch, Mrs. W. Cubbon, Mrs. T. Affleck, Mrs. M. Parker, Mrs. R. Hitchot, Mrs. C. Mills, Mrs. G. Drier, Mrs. G. Ellis and Miss Louise Merriam.

Gifts of linen were presented to Miss Bertrand when Mrs. N. Howard gave a shower in her Maddison Avenue home. Replacing the conventional corsage, the hostess gave her honor guest ceramic ash trays and a candy dish which she had made herself. Refreshments were served.

Those invited were Mrs. C. Scroggs, Mrs. T. Dundon, Mrs. E. Strudwicke, Mrs. S. Wilson, Mrs. I. Sellers, Mrs. G. Waller, Mrs. D. Manson, Mrs. J. Maloney, Mrs G. Lintaman, Mrs. G. Aldridge, Mrs. Merriam, Mrs. R. Howard, Mrs. V. Sommers and Mrs. M. Parker.

Pink roses were received by Miss Bertrand and her mother when Mrs. M. Parker entertained at a china shower in her Simcoe Street home. Gifts were in a giant teacup and saucer, decorated in pink and white ribbons and flowers. Refreshments were served.

Guests included the groom-elect's mother, Mrs. Eva Banman, here from Porcupine Plains, Sask., for the wedding. Others were Mrs. S. Wilson, Mrs. A. Duncan, Mrs. R. Duncan, Mrs. William Hamilton, Mrs. B. Birch, Mrs. A. Affleck, Mrs. A. Merriam, Mrs. A. Edwards, Mrs. G. Ellis, the Misses Louise Merriam and Cheryl Redden.

All women guests who will attend the wedding in Fairfield United Church were invited to a trousseau tea and display of gifts, given by Mrs. Bertrand in her home on Quamichan Avenue.

Mini-Pants Make Debut

NEW YORK (UPI) — It was bound to happen. First, it was the mini-skirt which swept the fashion world. Now, look for mini-pants.

Several ready-to-wear manufacturers featured the abbreviated trousers in their spring collections which have opened for the nation's store buyers. Shows for the buyers will continue through the next two weeks.

The once conservative coat firm of Originala, now branched out into suits and dresses, featured two types of mini-pants. One tailored version showed narrow legged trousers under hip-length jackets. Example: A "shorts suit," as the firm called it, in white wool with the pants chopped off at Bermuda shorts length and with brass buttons for jacket and trimming the pants legs.

Originala also showed culotte suits, with wider legs, but still cropped Bermuda length. Other firms including versions of mini-pants were Matty Talmack, Robert Sloan and Oscar de la Renta.

It took Jacques Tiffeau to take the trousers kick one step further. This youthful French-born designer, part owner of Tiffeau and Busch, showed brightly colored Jersey dresses with short, box-pleated skirts that swung wide to reveal lace drawers, yep, beneath. Tiffeau mounted the lacy jobs on separate waistbands but insisted they'll be sold with the tunic-like dresses as a package deal. Example: An orange jersey top with white lace drawers beneath.

Several Tiffeau outfits of tunics that came to about mid-thigh were worn over bloomers — black bloomers topped by a charcoal grey flannel top slit up the sides, or pale window-checked bloomers coupled with checked sleeveless tunics, also slit up the sides.

Tiffeau, never a designer afraid to experiment, dared what hasn't happened in the feminine fashion industry in several seasons. He cinched in waistlines with belts. He showed a group of low V-fronted jersey dresses with wide waist cinchers. Other outfits came with wide leather belts and big buckles.

First United Church Bazaar Nets $1,442

SOLD OUT SIGNS HOISTED EARLY

There must have been a magician at the bazaar of the United Church Women of First United Church, held in the Fellowship Hall Saturday. In no time at all, poof—all that was left of the home baking and mincemeat stalls, which extended around half of the auditorium, was a lone "Norwegian crinkle" and a package of cookies.

The centennial carousel opened at 11 a.m., with a luncheon featuring delicious turkey burgers served at 11:30. Mrs. Marvin Fowler, wife of the associate minister, and Mrs. Jack Howell, greeted luncheon guests.

Guests seated at the head table were Rev. and Mrs. Robert J. D. Morris, Rev. and Mrs. Fowler, Dr. and Mrs. H. McLeod, Mrs. W. McPherson, Mrs. R. M. Thompson, Rev. and Mrs. J. G. G. Bompas and Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Wilson.

Luncheon hostesses were Mrs. J. Muir, Mrs. R. S. Niven, Mrs. W. Harrison and Mrs. B. Bradley.

LUNCHEON CONVENES

Mrs. T. Lumsden and Mrs. J. Calvert convened the luncheon, assisted by Mrs. J. W. Stephens and Mrs. M. Scott. Helping out were Mrs. A. Campbell, Mrs. L. Brenen, Mrs. B. Acreman, Mrs. H. Henderson, Mrs. A. B. Squires, girls of the Canadian Girls in Training, the Misses Nancy Willerton, Janis Powley, Diane Pierce and Jennifer Syme.

Even some of the men offered their help with the luncheon by carving turkeys. They were H. Henderson, W. Hudson, D. Mackinnon and W. Thomson. The Clover Park Group and the Uplands Group made sandwiches.

In charge of luncheon tickets was Miss H. Elliott, assisted by Mrs. Gordon Houston and Mrs. J. Lockhart.

The entire bazaar was convened by Mrs. Sidney Ash.

Mrs. H. McLeod, wife of the former minister of the church and former moderator of the United Church of Canada, opened the tea at 2 p.m.

Greeting guests were Mrs. R. J. D. Morris and Mrs. J. D. Martin, president of the UCW.

Convening the tea were Mrs. A. Glenday and Mrs. A. Mackinnon, assisted by CGIT members, the Misses Nancy Willerton, Janis Powley, Diane Pierce and Jennifer Syme.

In charge of the home-baking stall was Mrs. Harold Menzies, assisted by Mrs. Maurice Wright, Miss Lillian Kirk, Mrs. K. M. Andrews, Mrs. Elsie Litkenhaus, Mrs. Peter Neilson, Miss Joan Adye, Mrs. Mary Nicholson, Mrs. Agnes McConachy, Mrs. J. W. Dickie, Mrs. W. C. Thomson, Miss Dorothy Stacey, Mrs. W. Nicholson and Mrs. C. L. Wilson.

Convening other stalls were: Novelties, Mrs. S. C. Ward, assisted by Miss J. Brenton, Mrs. T. W. Bleakley, Mrs. C. Chatfield, Miss Amy Dawson and Mrs. R. A. Marquis; aprons, Mrs. J. Walker, Mrs. B. M. Derkson, Miss B. Rogers, Miss A. Loomis, Mrs. S. H. Shaw, Miss L. Greenfield and Mrs. A. T. Hunkin; Christmas and gift cards, Mrs. L. C. Thomas, Mrs. S. Smart, Mrs. M. Paone and Mrs. T. Harker; mincemeat, Mrs. P. R. Risdale, Mrs. P.M. Derkson and Mrs. A. Hughes; jewelry, Mrs. E. J. Capling and Mrs. H. H. Henderson, assisted by Mrs. P. A. Forster, Mrs. C. Annett, Miss L. Trenholme, Mrs. C. L. Whitby, Mrs. A. Halliday, Mrs. W. T. Straith, Mrs. E. Brookband, Mrs. A. Oakley and Mrs. W. Brooks.

Special highlights of the affair, which realized the sum of $1,442, was an art display of the works of Edward Goodall, and a junior art contest.

Mrs. W. Collier and Mrs. P. Beere were in charge of the check room. Assisting were CGIT members, the Misses Frances Harker, Roseanne Boadley, Cathy MacLean, Heather Collier, Gwen Mynott, Sally Gray, Karen Johnson, Rosemary Vaughan, Pauline Beere, Jinx Barber, Lorraine Aitken, Maureen Cuson, Diane Colver and Elaine Lett.

Looking after youngsters were the Misses Barbara Denike, Barbara Braithwaite, Karen Stephens and Maureen Allen.

AFTER VISIT TO MOSCOW

V.O.W. Head Gives Views

HALIFAX (CP) — The national president of the Voice of Women said Monday night the concern of people in the Soviet Union and Europe over the war in Viet Nam "is more intense than ours here."

Kay Macpherson of Toronto told a news conference she thinks the attitude of Russians towards United States military intervention is that "anybody is in the wrong when they invade a country."

Mrs. Macpherson and five other V.O.W. delegates arrived after a tour of the Soviet Union and visits to Paris, London and Warsaw.

Mrs. Macpherson and Mrs. Fernande Simard, acting president of Quebec's La Voix des Femmes, also attended an international conference in Rome on the participation of women in public life.

She said the V.O.W.'s stand on the Vietnamese conflict is simple.

"We want it to stop as soon as possible.

"I would opt for the Americans getting out and see what would happen, although it may not be as easy as that."

Mrs. Macpherson, head of 3,000-4,000 Voice of Women members, said the Canadian organization is planning to hold an international conference during Canada's centennial year to "the part women can play in promoting peace."

She said the V.O.W. met with the wife of the Chinese ambassador in Moscow and discussed the possibility of an exchange visit between Canadian and Chinese women. The V.O.W. also would like to have women from Viet Nam visit Canada.

Other members of the Canadian delegation were Ruth Kettner of Winnipeg, Lydia Sayle of Vancouver and Beverley McPhee of Courtenay, B.C.

It all started when I decided to sail on the Ilya Crespsinkin. It was a wild idea! Wilder still, I invested in a whole wardrobe of Little Nothings before I left. (You know, that funny, crinkly little stocking made of Cantrece by Cameo). Plainstitch. Mesh. Nude heel. The idea was to knock my fellow passengers on their ear, at least. And sensation! First night out, the captain invited me to sit at his table. Said he'd never seen such beautiful legs. (Little Nothing fits like wow). Turned out he was a bachelor. P.S. The rest of the trip was clear sailing!

Bonneville Speedway Flooded

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah (AP) — A rainstorm swept across the Great Salt Lake Desert today, flooding the Bonneville Speedway and threatening an attempt next week to break the world land speed record.

Former record holder Art Arfons, 40, of Akron, Ohio, was scheduled to bring his jet-powered racer, the Green Monster, to the 11-mile speedway Sunday for an attempt to regain the world speed crown.

Explosion Threatens Tankers

MONTREAL (UPI)—A fuel-laden tank car jumped its rails today and overturned on the Montreal waterfront, touching off an explosion and flames which threatened nearby tankers full with high-octane gasoline and propane.

Horse Escapes Injury in Crash

LAUREL, Miss. (AP)—Diplomat Way, winner of the 1966 Arlington Park futurity in Chicago, escaped injury today when a tractor-trailer rig in which he was being transported was wrecked. The accident happened in a thick fog.

Winnipeg Financier Named to Senate

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson announced today the appointment of a 39-year-old Winnipeg lawyer and businessman, Douglas Donald Everett, to the Senate.

A native of Vancouver, Mr. Everett now is president of the Royal Canadian Securities Company and vice-president of Dominion Motors, both in Winnipeg.

Lemay Appears at Montreal Hearing

MONTREAL (CP)—Georges Lemay, 41, appeared today on preliminary hearing on charges of breaking and entering, burglary of $500,000 and conspiracy to commit the burglary, in the 1961 Dominion Day looting of a city branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

OFF-YEAR TEST

Times News Services

WASHINGTON — Heavy voting appeared today in some key areas as Americans ballotted for a 90th Congress and a broad range of state officials.

President Johnson, who had urged a heavy turnout along with Republican spokesman Richard Nixon, appeared a half hour too soon at Johnson City, Texas, but was allowed to vote away in a kitchen polling place.

A massive early vote appeared in New York, Michigan, Maryland and some other points which have vital national significance.

Racial overtones were involved in Maryland, where the Democratic candidate for governor has appealed to white resentment against the Negro. A heavy number of early Negro votes materialized there today.

The political outlook: An estimated 59,000,000 voters will maintain over-all Democratic control but endorse a swing back toward the centre and right wing after two years of far-reaching liberal legislation.

Main interest focussed on these races:

★ ★ ★

LOS ANGELES—Republican Ronald Reagan, a political newcomer, today challenged two-term Democrat Edmund G. Brown for California's governorship in an election that could affect the 1968 presidential campaign.

Official sources estimated about 6.2 million voters of the record 8.3 million registered would cast their ballots after the longest, most bitter and probably the most costly gubernatorial campaign in California's history.

Democrat Brown, 61, wound up his campaign Monday night in his home town of San Francisco.

Reagan, 55, a movie and television actor until he ran for governor, closed out his campaign with a 1,200-mile flying tour of metropolitan areas Monday.

Public opinion polls gave Reagan a narrow edge ranging from 2 to 5 per cent over Brown, who hopes to become the first Democrat in history elected to three terms as California governor.

A win for Reagan was certain to make him a force in the 1968 race for the Republican presidential nomination.

★ ★ ★

NEW YORK—Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller today placed his famous name, his record of eight years in office and his future as a GOP kingmaker in the hands of six million New York voters.

At the close of a long and expensive campaign to patch up his own political vulnerability, the wear and tear of two terms in Albany, it was a toss-up whether the voters would give Rockefeller four more years.

The alernative was to turn the reins of the empire state over to an effective vote-getter but generally colorless Democratic regular, New York city council president Frank D. O'Connor.

The result of today's balloting was expected to turn on the showings of two minor party candidates, Liberal Franklin D. Roosevelt Jr. and Conservative Paul Adams. Neither was given any chance of winning but either could swing the election to one of the front-runners.

The election was also expected to have an effect on the presidential ambitions of two recently adopted New Yorkers, Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D—N.Y., and former vice-president Richard M. Nixon.

★ ★ ★

DETROIT—Republican Gov. George Romney and his highly acclaimed vote-pulling power received the supreme test today in an election that could boom or bust the Michigan candidate's 1968 presidential ambitions.

That Romney would swamp his Democratic opponent, Zolton Ferency, was a foregone conclusion, according to political observers. The big question was whether Romney's coattails were broad enough and strong enough to retain in office Sen. Robert P. Griffin (R—Mich.).

The GOP governor has long been anxious to prove he can alter his reputation as a big winner among Republican losers. He got the chance in the tight race between Griffin and former Democratic Gov. G. Mennen ("Soapy") Williams.

★ ★ ★

CHICAGO—Illinois voters today decide a senatorial race that pitted a veteran lawmaker and a political machine against youthful enthusiasm and an appealing "image".

The veteran, white-haired Sen. Paul H. Douglas and Chicago Mayor Richard J. Daley's Democratic organization were the underdogs. The pre-election polls favored Douglas' opponent, the industrial "golden boy" turned politician, Charles H. Percy.

A Percy win—and he expected to win if the turnout ran close to the record 4.3 million forecast—could lead him into the ranks of Republican possibilities for future national office.

The campaign was interrupted for some time after the still-unsolved murder of Percy's daughter.

302 CONG FOUND DEAD AFTER BATTLE

SAIGON (AP) — United States infantrymen battled an estimated 1,000 charging Viet Cong for four hours in Tay Ninh province today and reported 302 enemy bodies counted after the fighting ended.

The battle resumed at 6 a.m. for troops of the U.S. First Division who lost contact almost completely Monday with the tough Viet Cong force that had battled U.S. troops for four days.

Meeting 'Bugged' Rival Union Claims

O'Neal Denies Involvement

VANCOUVER (CP) — Angus Macphee, a vice-president of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, charged today that a rival pulp union had planted listening devices at its convention.

Mr. Macphee said in a statement that an investigation by his union showed that persons who bugged their convention at the downtown Ritz Hotel were in contact with officials of their rivals.

He named Pat O'Neal, western regional organizer for the rival International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

Mr. O'Neal, contacted in Nanaimo on Vancouver Island, categorically denied involvement.

He said when someone in a rival union gets the measles, he gets blamed.

Listening devices were found by Mr. Macphee and other union delegates during the weekend. The devices, valued at $600, were seized by police under federal law.

"Out of our investigation into this matter, we have determined that regular phone calls were made from 309 where electronic receiving and recording equipment was found to an unlisted number," Mr. Macphee said, "which proved to be that of E. P. O'Neal, Western regional organizer for the international."

Seizure of the equipment came after a day-long investigation triggered by the finding of a listening device in a room where a union president had died Saturday.

A search warrant and the seizure came under the Radio Act which stipulates that a search may be carried out where it is believed there is an unwarranted radio transmitter operating.

David McLeod, an inspector with the department of transport, was assisting Vancouver police in the case.

Angus Macphee, vice-president of the 2,000-member Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada meeting in convention, said a device was discovered Saturday when delegates attempted to move a portable wall closet in the downtown Ritz Hotel.

"We were shifting the closet when this thing fell off," he said.

He said other delegates examined the device but none thought the convention was being spied upon.

"Sunday, we changed our minds," he said.

Two Anonymous Phone Tips

"We had two anonymous phone tips warning that the whole affair was going down on tape."

He said an electronics company was called in to check the area, and it found a second device on top of a closet in his room.

Equipment, including an amplifier, tape recorder, speaker and headphones, was seized from a room one floor above those where the listening devices were found.

Police said a man found with the equipment was questioned three hours. He was not identified and refused to speak to reporters when he left the hotel.

A hotel spokesman said the room was occupied by two men who signed the register as William J. Dawson and Bud Graham. Both gave addresses in interior Kamloops.

"Both men checked out about noon and said their luggage would be picked up later in the day," the spokesman said.

Police said the electronic equipment was packed inside the luggage.

A check by reporters showed that men named Graham and Dawson worked for Graham Investigation Services Ltd., a private detective agency in North Vancouver.

When their office was contacted, a woman who answered the telephone said both men were out of town until Nov. 9.

Lloyd D. Craig, 50, the union's president, died in his hotel room early Saturday of a heart attack. He had been union president two years. A lab technicican at a Castlegar pulp mill, Mr. Craig was up for re-election at the convention.

Mr. Macphee's union is formed of men who broke away from the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

Spy Charges Against Two In Italy

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Police today filed espionage charges against a Hungarian commercial attache and an Italian who allegedly exchanged information about military bases in Italy.

A state attorney issued arrest warrants against Ferenc Budai, first secretary in the Hungarian commercial office here, and Domizio Villa, 24, who works for a transportation company.

They had been held without charges since Nov. 3, when police said they were caught "exchanging military information concerning Italy's northeastern area" in a Milan square.

Authorities did not say what information was involved. The northeastern area includes a U.S. NATO base in Verona.

Swift's President Lacks Facts

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator David Croll asked today for a special recall of Swift Canadian Co. Ltd. executives to be cross-examined on their sales figures by the Senate-Commons committee on living costs.

Senator Croll made his request after Swift president P. L. Ayers appeared before the committee without bringing along any facts on gross sales.

Asked whether he could even estimate Swift sales for the last three years in round figures, he said he could not.

"I'm surprised that the president of the company doesn't know what its gross sales are," the senator said.

Ron Basford, committee co-chairman, promised that a steering committee meeting Wednesday will consider recall of Swift soon for cross-examination after the figures have been made available.

Mr. Ayers also said he did not know what share of the meat packing industry Swift holds, nor what Swift pays its parent Swift and Co. of Chicago for research and other services.

AS DEBATE DRAGS ON

Money Supply Crisis Looms for Government

OTTAWA (CP)—With the skirmishing going into its seventh day today, the battle lines remain just where they started in the Commons money supply debate.

Conservatives continued to shoot for committee study of Defence Minister Hellyer's bill to unify the armed forces before the Commons is asked to give its second reading — approval in principle.

Mr. Hellyer stands fast on his line that such a study should come after second reading.

New Democrats continued to snipe at the government's approval of a pipeline from the West that would loop south into the United States to avoid stiff construction costs in the rugged Northern Ontario bush.

And Creditiste Leader Caouette took advantage of the wide-open scope of a supply debate to give MPs a dollop of his party's monetary policy.

NEEDS PAYROLL MONEY

Looming over the battleground is the need for the government to get spending authority to meet payrolls and other upcoming bills. The first civil service payroll of the month comes up next Thursday, with others following Monday and Tuesday.

New Democratic Leader Douglas said the stage was set for a rerun of the extended 1964 flag debate, delaying handling of important legislation until after Christmas.

Near the end of Monday's sitting, Mr. Hellyer answered some of the defence questions posed by Conservative critics.

He rejected their complaints that there was a lack of information on steps leading to unification.

In the three years since the Liberals created the defence committee, it has held 81 meetings, heard 103 witnesses and compiled 2,355 pages of written records. The sessions had covered every aspect of defence—the roles assigned to each service, the capabilities and the equipment it would be given.

He repeated his argument that opposition attempts to equate certain manpower shortages in the forces with low morale are off base. The problem was that the forces had to compete with a booming economy for manpower.

The government was making improvements in pay and other benefits to be competitive in the $200,000 Gem Loot To Thieves

HALIFAX (CP) — Police today were investigating theft of between $150,000-$200,000 worth of jewelry and stock from a downtown Halifax store Monday night. Police said it was one of the biggest hauls from a single break-in in the city's history.

Leon Neima, president of Leon Neima Ltd., said items taken included loose diamonds, rings, watches and valuable collections of gold coins and old coins. The coins alone were valued at $50,000.

Police said it appeared the thieves hid in a washroom on the second floor of the Barrington Street building which houses the jewelry store. Sometime during the night they made their way to a stockroom, tore up flooring and cut their way through a ceiling down into the store.

Moon Shot on Beam After Minor Mishap

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Lunar Orbiter II lost and then regained its lock on the guiding star Canopus today midway in its 250,000-mile flight to photograph potential astronaut landing sites on the moon.

Regaining the celestial guidepost increased chances of success in a critical steering manoeuvre scheduled later today.

The manoeuvre, an 18½-second firing of a rocket motor expected to increase the craft's 2,200-mile-an-hour speed by 47 miles an hour, is designed to aim Lunar Orbiter II closer to the moon.

GEMINI FLIGHT DELAYED

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI)—The Gemini 12 wrap-up mission of astronauts James Lovell and Edwin (Buzz) Aldrin was postponed today from Wednesday to Thursday because of a problem in one of the program's most trouble-free Titan 2 boosters.

The United States Space Agency said the four-day rendezvous and spacewalk mission was tentatively rescheduled to start at 2:16 p.m., EST. (11:16 A.M. PST.) Thursday with the launch of Gemini's Atlas-Agena target rocket.

Lovell and Aldrin will follow 98 minutes later.

GRAIN PRICES

WINNIPEG (CP)—Grain prices held to a narrow range today at the Winnipeg grain exchange. The closing of American markets for U.S. elections limited trading.

Oilseeds showed some activity. Hedging sales were in evidence early in the day but were well absorbed in later trading. Impending news on the Argentine exchange situation limited trading.

MARKET SUMMARIES

Gains Recorded At Vancouver

All sections moved upwards in improved trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange today.

The industrial section saw Home A and North West Life up $1.25 and Gill was .50 better at $6.75.

In the oils, Futurity improved .05 to .72 and Royal American also put on .05.

The mining section was paced by Highmont which reached a new high of $1.94 before retreating to $1.84, up .10 on the morning.

Dynasty recovered some of its recent losses and gained .75 to $7. Pyramid was also strong and was up .15 at $6.20.

Buchanan, however, went the other way and reached a new 1966 low of .35.

New York exchange and most other U.S. securities and commodities markets were closed today for the congressional elections.

AT TORONTO in the industrial list, Moore Corp. was up ⅝ to 82, Massey-Ferguson and Alcan ⅜ each to 22⅝ and 29¾. Interprovincial Pipe Line declined ¾ to 76½ and Royal Bank ⅛ to 67½.

Western oils were higher with Banff and Central Del Rio up ¼ each to 13 and 10⅝ while Union Oil was off ⅛ to 29⅞.

Base metals were lower with Cominco down ⅜ to 32⅝ while Area jumped 20 cents to 3.60 in speculative mines.

Golds showed slight improvement with Dome up ¼ to 36¾ and Kerr-Addison ⅛ to 11½.

AT MONTREAL the market was mixed today in light trading.

Industrials were up with Massey-Ferguson adding ½ at 22⅝ and Moore Corp. ¾ at 82¼. Labatt was ahead ½ at 17¾ and Du Pont and Steinberg's A ex-dividend each were up ¼ at 36 and 18½ respectively.

Fraser companies lost one point at 22½ and Calgary Power ½ at 20½.

AT LONDON equities moved lower on the stock exchange today as recent company statements underlined the effects of the British credit squeeze. A sharp rise in U.S. bill rates and the unlikelihood of an early lowering of British interest rates made for caution.

However, Gilts recovered initial widespread falls and were little changed on balance.

Dollar stocks were easier on balance. General Motors gave ground on a dividend cut. Consolidated Mining was a firm spot but other Canadian stocks were little changed.

Canadian banks were easier and home banks, discount houses and insurances lost a little ground. Leading industrial stocks were dull.

Europe Banks Underwrite Big GM Loan

FRANKFURT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has completed arrangements for a 125,000,000-mark ($35,000,000) West German bond issue to finance operations in Europe, the Deutsche Bank announced.

The 6¾-per-cent bonds are to go on sale Nov. 15 at an offering price of 995 marks for 1,000-mark face value.

The bonds are issued by General Motors Overseas Capital Corp., a wholly-owned subsidiary of General Motors Corp., and are unconditionally guaranteed by the parent U.S. company.

The Deutsche Bank, which heads the group of European banks underwriting the issue, said that final agreements on the loan were signed between it and the General Motors subsidiary.

Investors Want BOTH FEET ON THE GROUND!

Every $5,600 currently invested by Victoria Mortgage is secured by an average of $10,000 Real Estate. That kind of security in fact puts both feet on the ground firmly enough, but Victoria Mortgage has gone even further in establishing substantial share capital to give additional security to the debenture-holder. Yet our debentures still pay 7% for a one-year term, 7½% for 5 years. Full, easy-to-read details are available in our free booklet. May we mail you one? Just phone Douglas Hawkes Ltd., EV 4-7128, 817 Fort.

Use of Telephone Reduces Syphilis

The telephone is proving to be as effective in cutting down the incidence of infectious syphilis as was the introduction of penicillin 20 years ago.

Dr. H. K. Kennedy, director of the provincial Venereal Disease Control Division, said Monday that reporting of only 35 cases of syphilis during the first half of this year "is a major victory in public health."

It confirms that the turning point in a sudden resurgence of the disease — which reached epidemic proportions in 1964 when 340 cases were reported — was reached last year when special measures were instituted to fight it.

Key to the new program is rapid communication.

CONTACTS HUNTED

As soon as a private doctor diagnoses a case of syphilis, he phones the public health authorities who immediately interview the patient to find out every possible contact.

These contacts are traced wherever they may be in the province — again by telephone — and they are given treatment too.

In 1946, when penicillin was just beginning to be available in large quantities, there were 834 cases of infectious syphilis reported in the province and the incidence was 83 per 100,000 population.

NOT LICKED

Ten years later this had been cut to 11 cases and a .4 rate and public health authorities believed the problem had been licked.

For a variety of reasons, syphilis made a comeback all across the continent in the 1960s and in B.C. the number of cases rose annually from 64 in 1961 to 183, 280 and a peak of 304 in 1964 when the rate climbed to 17.5 per 100,000 people

SYPHILIS WAR

Alarmed, the health department appointed a full-time medical director to the division, put its best epidemologist on full-time VD control, added nursing staff and set up the fast-communications system between private physicians and public health units.

Results were immediate.

Last year the cases reported dropped to 178 and the rate to 10 and this year the total is expected to drop to 70 cases.

Highest incidence of the disease has been found in Vancouver's skid road and Prince George, where the rate reached one in every 100 persons at the peak. Both are areas where transients congregate.

GONORRHEA NEXT

Dr. Kennedy said a special emphasis no wwill be placed on controlling gonorrhoea which also has followed the syphilis cycles over the years, but climbed from 3,670 cases reported in 1961 to 6,146.

The same techniques will be used that proved so successful in reducing syphilis and a special clinic already has been set up on Vancouver's skid road. A public health nurse now is working full time on gonorrhoea control in northern areas.

The communications network includes liaison with Washington State health authorities — because so many of the contacts travel freely between Vancouver and Seattle — and the federal health division that is responsible for visiting seamen.

ISLAND CONTEST

Top Musician To Win Place In Bowl Band

A chance to march with the renowned I.O.F. Robin Hood Band in the Pasadena Tournament of Roses Parade New Year's Day will be won by a Vancouver Island high school musician Wednesday night when some 20 finalists ply off at S. J. Willis Jr. High, on Quadra above Hillside.

Judging by Canadian Forces Music School Director Lieut. Cdr. Tudor Jones begins at 7 p.m. It will be open to the public.

Winners fly to Los Angeles Christmas night, rehearse with the 155-piece Robin Hood Band and for a week see the sights of Hollywood. All expenses are paid by the Independent Order of Foresters.

ROSE BOWL GAME

Finally they appear on network TV in the Rose Parade, see the Rose Bowl game and fly home in time for school January 3.

The finalists, all between 14 and 17 years of age, were chosen for the playoff by Island high school music directors.

Finalists are: Bryce Gibney, 15, trumpet, Port Alberni; Howard Mar, 15, euphonium, Nanaimo; Kahlen Wood, 17, trombone, and Robert Baxter, 17, euphonium, Mount Douglas; Glen Thompson, 17, trumpet, Donna Zapf, 16, clarinet, Ian Fetterley, 15 trombone, and Don Mayer, 17, clarinet, Mount View: Walter Kellythorne, 17, drums, James Gayfer, 17, trombone, and Greg Stone, 17, trumpet, Oak Bay; Patricia McKenzie, 17, trumpet, Larry Witmer, 17, tuba, and Stafford Horne, 14, clarinet, Lansdowne; Paul Iverson, 14, cornet, Colquitz; Denis Johnston, 15, alto saxophone, and Kelly James Tippett, 16, percussion, Victoria High.

Lansdowne High's Stafford Horne won first prize in the 1966 Victoria Day Parade.

Reserved tickets for the playoff are available by phoning the I.O.F. office, 2618 Quadra, at 383-9921.

Recording tapes of winning contestants will be made Thursday for shipment to Los Angeles, where entries from all over Canada, United States and United Kingdom will be judged.

MEETINGS CALENDAR

Island Temple No. 8, Pythian Sisters, tonight at 8, upper hall of K of P Hall, 723 Cormorant St. Open to visiting Pythian Sisters.

Kinsmen Club of Vic Van Isle, 6:30 p.m. Thursday in the Century Inn Hotel. Provincial Civil Defence Co-ordinator John Erb to Speak.

Craigflower Women's Institute, Thursday at 1:30 p.m., View Royal Community Hall. Annual meeting.

Uvic Watches Vote, Checks Guest List

Among the keenest viewers of tonight's American general election results will be the organizers of the University of Victoria's Political Science Forum.

If today's balloting goes well for them, seven of the leading campaigners will come to Victoria to speak before the student-run forum, Gordon Pollard, president of the forum, said today.

If Ronald Reagan wins his hard-fought contest for the governorship of California he will likely be the forum's guest this month. If he loses and incumbent Pat Brown hangs on to the reins of power then Brown will take time off from his gubernatorial chores in January to come to Victoria.

Senatorial candidates Henry Jackson of Washington, Mark Hatfield of Oregon and Edward Brook of Massachusetts are also on the forum's guest list, as are Alabama's notorious running mates Gov. George and Lurleen Wallace.

Add to this all-star cast Conservative leader John Diefenbaker who plans to speak to the forum Nov. 28 if he survives the machinations of his Camp followers and Penn Jones of anti-Warren Commission fame speaking on Nov. 16 on Dallas and the Aftermath, and you have the highlights of a busy month for Victorian political scientists.

Boat There But It's Not Easy

Pagan I, an aging 27-foot sailboat which left Victoria Oct. 17 with its skipper and a crew of girls, has reached San Francisco.

It is the first leg of a planned trip to Montreal.

One of the girls, Beverly Stephens, 21, was taken ill off San Francisco and had to be removed from the sailboat with the aid of a passing ship.

Still on board is the skipper, Karl Darwin, 20, and Jackie Shaw, 22. They plan to reach Ensenada, Mexico, in about another week.

The trip so far hasn't been smooth sailing.

The captain and crew reported they had been in "one storm after another" in their engineless craft and when they weren't in a storm they were in fog.

Editors Resign

TORONTO (CP)— The daily Ryersonian failed to appear this morning for the first time in Ryerson Polytechnical Institute's 18-year history. Eighteen student editors resigned Monday, claiming that the paper was being censored by the school's board of governors.

Swirling Flood Waters Pour Over Gates of Paradise

By LEO J. WOLLEMBORG
The Washington Post

ROME — The floods that have battered Italy and left well over 100 dead and thousands homeless have also dramatized the fact that many of the nation's greatest art treasures face dangers more immediate than neglect and the slow bite of time.

Florence and Venice provide the most telling evidence of this.

In Florence, the River Arno surged over its embankments and submerged most of the old renaissance city under several feet of water, causing more havoc than all the bombing and fighting of the Second World War.

For a moment, the bell tower of the city's cathedral, built by Giotto more than 600 years ago, appeared on the verge of collapse. Severe but not irreparable damage was done to the doors of the nearby baptistry, sculpted in gold over a period of 28 years in the 15th century by Lorenzo Ghiberti and known ever since as "The Gates of Paradise."

IRON GRATE

Five of the 10 scenes which Ghiberti portrayed were ripped from their panels. They were found behind an iron grate, badly scratched. Two gold and bronze scenes were also pulled off the baptistry's oldest doors, the work of Pisano. Both were found, one of them 200 feet away in the cathedral square. Neither was damaged.

The cathedral itself was flooded. The water, thick with mud and fuel oil from broken mains, disfigured many of the city's other landmarks, including the Church of Santa Croce.

According to Prof. Ugo Procacci, the superintendent of Florence's art galleries, 90 per cent of the works housed in the Uffizi Gallery escaped unscathed. But quite a few masterpieces stored on the ground floors of the gallery were damaged and some may be completely lost.

MEDICI CHAPEL

These include works by Giotto, Lorenzo Lotto, Botticelli, Filippo Lippi, Masaccio and Simone Martini. The flood also dirtied and otherwise damaged the Church of San Lorenzo, which contains the Medici Chapel and its sacristy with the famous sculptured groups of Michelangelo.

Even worse damage was done to the national library, to the Italian state archives and to several museums and monasteries. Innumberable precious books, documents, collections of ancient arms and musical instruments and some frescoes must be considered a total loss.

Farther north, the Adriatic Sea broke through the sea walls guarding the lagoon of Venice. The waters, surging an unprecedented six feet above sea level, flooded St. Mark's Square and most other districts of the city.

While there were no reports of damage to art treasures, the impact must have weakened further the already shaky foundations of many famous churches and palaces.

Venice, which is built on a series of soggy islands, has been in danger of collapsing for centuries. In recent years this danger has grown because of the increasing backwash of motorboats and the dredging of new canals to accommodate more traffic.

From a broader standpoint, the disastrous consequences of the floods and storms point to the effect of centuries of mistakes and neglect.

These have upset the hydro-geogolical balance of most of the Italian peninsula. Indiscriminate deforestation has hastened erosion, the effects of which have been magnified by the failure to implement co-ordinated water control programs.

Now, a few days of rain can turn every mountain stream into a raging torrent that sends tremendous amounts of water and soil into the valleys, sometimes within a few hours. The river beds are not sufficiently wide or otherwise equipped to receive the flood and convey it safely to the sea.

NORMAL FLOW

Along the Adriatic coast, moreover, the prevailing winds push the sea inland to block and sometimes to reverse the normal flow of rivers themselves.

In 1962, a master plan for the country's main rivers was finally enacted. But the $200 million appropriated for it proved inadequate to cover even the most pressing needs.

The current five-year program for economic development is now being discussed in Parliament. It calls for an allocation of $600 million to finance public works, mostly in connection with flood control. The amount will almost certainly be increased as a result of the latest disasters.

BIFF! BANG! POW! SHE'S TOP BEAUTY

By NICK FILLMORE

TORONTO (CP) — What's it like for a 19-year-old secretary to be named Miss Canada

"Like being hit on the head with a 100-pound bag of cement," said blue-eyed Barbara Kelly of Vancouver. "It was wonderful. The greatest thing that could happen to any girl."

Barbara, five feet, six inches and with dark brown hair, was selected Miss Canada 1967 Monday night from a group of 26 regional beauty queens

"I'm a secretary for the British Columbia Telephone Company . . . or I was until today," said Barbara at a party for pageant officials. "I'll have to leave my job because of the duties I'll have as Miss Canada."

She was named pageant winner from a group of five finalists,

During the Centennial Year, Barbara will represent Canada at several functions, including Expo 67 in Montreal. She will also receive a $5,000 cash prize, a $1,000 scholarship, two cars, a two-week vacation in Florida, a complete wardrobe and other gifts.

First runner-up was Susan Cousens, 22, of Muskoka, Ont., a secretary and graduate of Lawrence collegiate in Muskoka, Joanne Holm, 20, of Winnipeg, a student at the University of Manitoba, was second runner-up.

Miss Victoria, Susan Smythe, did not reach the finals.

"What I do in the future depends on what happens while I'm Miss Canada," said Barbara. "I'd like to go to university and study business administration."

Barbara, who measures 34-23-34 was accompanied to Toronto for the competition by her mother, Mrs. Sadie Kelly of Vancouver.

"It was a hectic week but there wasn't as much pressure as I thought there might be," she said. "All the girls helped each other and we got along great."

Heather Spear, 19, of Ottawa, a major in sociology at Carleton University, was third runner-up, and Dayle Haddon, 18, of Montreal, a model and representative of the Red Cross, was fourth runner-up.

The 26 contestants, sponsored by regional committees and organizations, were judged on personality, talent and beauty.

Ten of the girls in the competition were from Ontario. Four were from Quebec, three from Alberta, three from British Columbia, two from Manitoba, and one each from Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Prince Edward Island was not represented.

ESTATE OF DOROTHY KILLAM

$30 Million Goes to Universities

OTTAWA (CP)—Terms of an estate that will mean $30,000,000 for five Canadian institutions were announced Monday.

Trustees for the estate of the late Dorothy Killam, who died in Halifax last year, announced that under her will scholarships and fellowship funds will be established at Dalhousie University, Halifax; the University of Alberta, Edmonton; the University of British Columbia, Vancouver; the Montreal Neurological Institute and the Canada Council.

A statement said the trustees estimate that when the estate has been liquidated, "a total of about $30,000,000 will become available for division among the five institutions."

She was the widow of Isaac Walton Killam, a Canadian financier and industrialist whose fortune was estimated at $100,000,000 at his death in 1955.

He was born in Nova Scotia and Mrs. Killam was born in St. Louis, Mo.

Trustees said Mrs. Killam expressed the hope that the bequests would "in some measure increase the scientific and scholastic attainments of Canadians" and develop the work of Canadian universities.

The will specifies that the scholarships, fellowships and other grants be held for "advanced study or research at universities, hospitals, research or scientific institutes, or other equivalent or similar institutions, both in Canada and in other countries."

The statement said the three universities involved plan to use the income from their funds to establish similar Killam scholarship and fellowship awards.

Detailed announcements were expected later this fall.

Each university would submit its own candidates to a selection committee on which the Killam trustees will be represented. Dr. A. W. Trueman, former director of the Canada Council, will act as consultant and assistant to the trustees.

The trustees are Maj.-Gen. E. C. Plow, former lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia; Montreal lawyer Donald N. Byers; G. Arnold Hart, chairman and president of the Bank of Montreal; and C. F. Harrington, president of the Royal Trust Co.

December Vote On Recreation Not In Cards

A referendum on new recreational facilities in Saanich will not go before ratepayers in December.

But ratepayer approval may be sought early in the new year depending on the new council's views and the tight money situation then.

Reeve Hugh Curtis said today a December vote coinciding with the annual municipal elections is out.

He added: "This is so important that a little more time is not to be worried about."

His personal opinion, depending on what the new council wants to do, is that a referendum in the early spring "could be a far more favorable time for putting a vote."

There were a number of organizations which would want to work for a yes vote "and even if we had it in hand now and said go they might not be ready."

FROZEN BONDS

Council was informed Monday night by the consulting company of A. B. Sanderson that its report on recreation will not be ready for another week or two.

In addition, the municipal affairs department has frozen new municipal bond issues for borrowing until existing approved borrowing is marketed.

The consulting company was appointed last September after council had spent a number of private sessions discussing plans for new recreational facilities and public briefs were presented by several interested groups to the parks and recreation committee.

At that time, Saanich said council has realized "that the entire question is most complicated, has far-reaching effects and must be carefully considered before a final scheme is readied for presentation to the electorate."

Saanich also said then it had been hoped for several months to seek a December vote and the goal "may still be realized even though considerably more research has proved necessary and appropriate"

The merits of one large sports centre or seveal smaller ones was a major point in the public briefs.

YOUTH CHARGED

Screwdriver Studied In Break-In Trial

A paint-flecked screwdriver could determine the guilt or innocence of a man charged in Victoria Law Courts with breaking and entering and theft.

Police claim that flecks of pale green paint taken from the tip of a screwdriver are the same as paint chipped from the front door of the Sam Kee confectionery, 143 Moss Street, when it was forced open early Sunday Aug. 15.

The screwdriver is said to have been found in a car driven by Wayne Albert Brown, formerly of 46 South Turner Street.

Brown has pleaded not guilty to breaking and entering and theft from the store and being in possession of housebreaking tools.

Crown prosecutor E. George MacMinn said Monday that flecks of paint taken from the screwdriver were examined at the RCMP laboratory in Vancouver and found to be the same.

He said he would call a witness from the RCMP laboratory to present a scientific account of the examination.

Mr. MacMinn alleged that Brown was the driver of a car stopped at Fisgard and Douglas at about 4:15 a.m. on Aug. 15 — after the Sam Kee store was broken into.

Under the front seat, police found a 14-inch screwdriver, a hammer, a pair of pliers and a glove. The glove compartment of the car contained five more gloves of the same pattern.

Mr. MacMinn said the store at 143 Moss Street was broken into by smashing a pane of glass in the front door and prising it open with a screwdriver.

Missing from the store were cans of beans and spaghetti, packages of cigarettes, packages of buns, loaves of bread jars of peanut butter and cash amounting to not more than $5.

FOODSTUFFS

The Crown alleged that the cigarettes and foodstuffs were later found in a kitchen cupboard at 46 South Turner Street, where the accused was staying at that time.

Brown was arrested at this address, charged with breaking and entering and committed for trial.

Constable Blake Hamilton Green told of stopping a car driven by Brown at the intersection of Fisgard and Douglas. He said another male passenger was sitting beside Brown in the front seat.

Defence counsel Jack Gatehouse asked Constable Green if Brown made any effort to run away when he stopped his car.

"No," the constable replied.

"The gloves you found in the car were working men's gloves, were they not?" asked Mr. Gatehouse.

"Yes, they could be called that," Constable Green replied.

RCMP Sgt. William Robertson of the Vancouver crime detection laboratory was expected to give evidence when the trial resumed today.

Film Raises $2,300

VANCOUVER (CP)—Sponsors of the Canadian aid for Viet Nam civilians group said Monday that $2,300 was raised by a film showing Sunday of life in the battle-torn country.

Councils Mourn Death Of Alderman

Municipal councils in Greater Victoria paused Monday night to mourn the sudden death of former Victoria alderman Millard H. Monney.

Saanich council stood to observe one minute of silence.

Oak Bay council moved a vote of sympathy.

Oak Bay Reeve Allan Cox said Mr. Mooney "was a most conscientious and hard-working" figure in municipal affairs.

A letter of condolences to the family was also approved by Esquimalt council.

FUNERAL WEDNESDAY

Mr. Mooney, who served the city and district for 13 years in municipal office, died in a Cowichan River boat tragedy Sunday.

A large turnout of district municipal dignitaries is expected to attend the funeral service Wednesday at 3:45 p.m. in Fairfield United Church. Rev. H. W. Kerley and Canon George Biddle will officiate. Cremation will follow.

50-Cent Profit On Bacon

OTTAWA (CP). — Supermarkets were selling bacon at $1.42 a pound in September when at least one meat packer was charging them a wholesale price of only 92 cents a pound, Senator David Croll (L — Ontario), said Monday.

He quoted other wholesale-retail price spreads just as big in questioning officials of Burns Foods Ltd. before the Senate-Commons committee on living costs.

It was an "inordinately high profit," he suggested.

Burns President A. J. E. Child said it was possible the chain stores were taking a high markup on bacon to balance a low markup on another item.

The Senator said this didn't satisfy him.

The country was crying and shouting about food costs.

"You've heard it too. Aren't you concerned . . . at what the merchants are doing with your product?"

Mr. Child said the volume of bacon sales is rising even at the higher prices. The price obviously was not driving the consumer away from the product.

Senator Croll took his wholesale figures from Burns' own selling prices for September. His retail figures were from the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

Defy Law If Needed

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP)— Ontario unionists were urged Monday to defy the law if necessary to get injunctions in labor disputes abolished.

Gordon Lambert of the United Auto Workers local at St. Catharines told the Ontario Federation of Labor the time has come to start demanding and demonstrating to eliminate injunctions.

"I'm talking about civil disobedience.

"We must not be content to continue with our hat-in-hand attitude" toward the Ontario government.

The federation opened its 10th annual convention Monday.
